IT'S TOO HOT FOR US

If your last minute news has been omitted this week, it is due to the fact that we are compelled to go to press at 5:00 a. m. Wednesday morning to avoid the extreme heat. This may sound like a fish story, but the composition rollers on the large press melted late Tuesday evening, due to extreme heat. Therefore, we are compelled to take advantage of the early morning temperature to avoid such accidents.

DISPELLING THE FOG

By Charles Michelson
Director of Publicity, Democratic National Committee

Most people who listened to President Roosevelt's speech of Acceptance thought it was an eloquent presentation of the problems of modern political economy and a reiteration of his New Deal philosophy.

Mr. Walter Lippman, however, discovered in it and revealed in a radio address that the President had shifted clear away from the New Deal, and had adapted the theories and doctrines which Senator Borah had inherited from Theodore Roosevelt. He likewise revealed that Mr. Roosevelt had been forced to make the shift because the country was prospering despite the New Deal and not because of it.

Like others who have made this explanation of our progress toward business improvement. Mr. Lippman does not tell what brought about the business revival if it was not the Roosevelt policies, but he says it could not have been the emergency enactments because the New Deal had been eliminated by court decision. Now, so far as known, the Supreme Court has not destroyed the banking legislation, the depositors insurance law, the CCC plans, the Public Works program the Tennessee Valley project and much of the Agricultural Adjustment Act, the Farm Credit and Home Loan Bank Corporations and various other things that form the record of the administrations' efforts to get things going, and that are generally credited with averting hundreds of thousands of mortgage foreclosures and otherwise contributing to the steadying and stability of the economic situation.

The matter is of interest because Mr. Lippman is a philosopher who usually thinks things out, and it must be assumed that he believes what he writes. However, like most philosophers, he loves a fine-spun theory, and perhaps enjoys demonstrating the impossible, just as the classic sages of ancient Greece revelled in proving that matter was non-existent, and that there was nothing real but thought.

Difficult to Misconstrue

If the President's speech at Philadelphia had any meaning or implication it was that he had shifted neither his objectives nor his program; that he found the platform adapted by the National Convention quite in conformity with what he had done and what he wished to do, not only toward bringing the country back to permanent prosperity, but to correct the abuses that had brought the United States to the verge of destruction and to prevent any recurrence of the disaster.

In a manner, those who seek to diminish the faith of the people in President Roosevelt are compelled to the hypothesis that the business trend—the resumption of dividend paying, the solvency and solidity of the banks, the stability of the currency, the fact that our bonds are at a premium, and that the whole world envies the economic status of the United States—was despite his intervention and not because of it. Obviously, they cannot contradict the facts that stare at them from every headline on the business pages of the newspapers. Just as obviously they cannot admit that things are as they are by reason of what he has done, without admitting the fallacy and insincerity of their political effort.

In this connection it is interesting to note what Mr. Lippman's colleague, Mark Sullivan, on the same newspaper evolves.

His theme, on the day following the radio broadcast, was that the President had lost his radical following—which would seem to suggest that he had turnedaway from the Left, and that he had likewise lost the conservatives of his party, which certainly implies that he has swerved away from the Rightists' hopes, and that therefore the only following that remained with him was the office holders. Mr. Sullican even expresses a doubt if the beneficiaries of Federal relief are generous enough to admit that those on relief rolls who are normally Democratic may remain so, but he lists no others among the President's supporters.

The moonshiny quality of that presentation is all the more apparent as Mr. Sullivan in most of his political writing has expressed his belief that the whole political atmosphere of today favors the re-election of the President, and that only wholesale conversions between now and election day give the minority party even a look-in.

Pity the Lay Reader

If only these commentators would help a lot in clearing the confusion of campaign propaganda. What is an unfortunate lay reader to think when he is told by one that the President is so hopelessly radical that all the conservatives are massed against him, and so conservative that the radicals have quit him; that he has abandoned the policies that have made his administration successful, and that his refusal to modify his recovery program has alienated a multitude?

It is simpler to read Mr. Frank Kent, that ardent Democrat who has fought every Democratic purpose and principle since away back in the early Hoover days. Mr. Kent does not bother with logic, philosophy or analysis. He just, in the most forthright manner, pronounces everything the President does as terrible. He does not even limit himself to the Presidential acts, but shrills at what the President is thinking or planning. His information on these subjects comes with undoubted authority, for whenever he needs support he cites his anonymous informant—the man close to and intimate with the President; the staunch Democrat who has always supported Franklin D. Roosevelt and who continues to support him though bewailing his policies. It is marvelous how this shadowy, never-named abstraction always comes to bat for Mr. Kent and whispers to him the President's most secret musings and advises him as to plans and purposes so closely guarded that in most cases the President himself never heard of them.

Among all the figments of phantasmagoria, there has not been an apparition as handy, as available and as complacent as the Kentish ghost.

More than a hundred thrill rides and fun devices assure Coney visitors a wide range of diversion.

HOMEMAKERS MAKE WILD FLOWER TOUR

A wild calycanthus bed was one of the sights on the annual spring wild flower tour of members of home-makers' clubs in Marshall county. The plants were 12 to 15 feet high, and larger than any of the 35 women on the tour had ever seen before. At the home of Mrs. Allen Ashcraft, overlooking the Tennessee river, the tourists saw the use of flowers to screen out buildings and unattractive spots. A tulip farm and the Herzog woods were other sights enjoyed by the women.

INDICATION OF RAIN DROPS WHEAT PRICE

Chicago, July 11—Wheat futures broke the full 5-cent limit on the Chicago Board of Trade today as a break-up in the drouth was indicated for the northwest spring wheat belt.

Forecasts for the drouth break-up sent wheat brokers scurrying into the pits with large orders to sell. The liquidation was the neaviest in many months at Chicago, and the sensational speculative bull movement of the past two weeks appeared to have run its course.

Corn prices on the Chicago Exchange quickly followed the break in wheat and slumped 7 cents after an early gain of 3 cents a bushel.

Bill bugs, a rare insect in Kentucky, destroyed fields of corn in Union county.

THE BOONE COUNTY RECORDER

ESTABLISHED 1875

VOLUME 61 | BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY | THURSDAY, JULY 23RD, 1936 | NUMBER 11

PROSPECTS FOR GAS AND OIL IN BOONE COUNTY ENCOURAGING

Eight Large Gas Wells Have Been Brought In By Drillers. New Machinery Being Moved On Location

With the bringing in of two more nice natural gas wells this week, and an order placed for more drilling equipment, the outlook for Boone County as a prospective gas and oil field becomes brighter and brighter.

The well on the farm of George Griffith, Limaburg, Ky., was brought in Saturday afternoon, with considerable pressure. Although it is not believed to be as strong as the one on the Chester Tanner farm it, is at present holding considerable pressure. These wells bring the total to eight in Boone County.

There has already been 16,000 acres, the property of 117 land owners signed and leased for the drilling of gas and oil. No oil has been struck in any of the wells, However, authorities say that whereever there is as much gas as has been struck here, they are sure we have an abundant supply of oil.

It has been debated by several as to the size of the gas wells in comparison to the wells in Oklahoma and Texas. It has been announced that the Boone County wells are far larger than any wells in either Texas or Oklahoma, with the exception of a few that carry extreme pressure, and is not common in the gas industry. This information can be found in Gas & Oil Bulletins that are published by the government. The pressure of a gas well does not determine the life of the well. This pressure will vary in different wells, not because of the amount of gas, but due to the earth formation and conditions surrounding the well.

No oil has been struck as yet, mainly because they have not gone deep enough to reach the oil beds. Natural gas will always be found above oil beds. Oil may be 10 feet or it may be several hundred feet below the gas. All the wells have been capped immediately after striking the large vein of natural gas.

If you are among the doubtful ones, you are invited to visit any of the wells, or you may now see the drilling machine in operation on the farm of O. R. Russ, Limaburg. It is located just a few yards from the main highway, near the creek at Limaburg. The drill is in operation day and night.

It has been announced that the two towns of Burlington and Hebron will be supplied with gas by this coming winter. All that will be necessary to get this gas is to organize a group that will express their desire for this gas, and a pipe line will be laid into both towns. The charge for gas in this community will be approximately $1.00 to $1.50 per month, and you are free to use all you care to. There will be no meters, only a flat charge by the month.

For the benefit of those who wish to know more about the gas and oil possibilities in Boone County, there is a proposed meeting to be held at the Harvest Home Grounds in the near future, and the public will be invited. The chief executive of this drilling crew will be on hand to make an address, and also to answer any questions that may be asked. The definite date and place of this meeting will be announced in the next issue of the Recorder. If there is a doubt in your mind that you would like to clear up, be on hand at this meeting. There will be no admission, and the public is invited.

FINAL CLEARANCE ON QUALITY SHOES

Our readers will save a great deal of money if they read carefully the advertisements that appear in the Recorder from week to week.

For instance, this week an opportunity is offered to save considerable money on quality shoes. The Quality Sample Shoe Shop, 627 Madison Avenue, Covington, carries an announcement in this issue to the effect that shoes up to $6.50 values will be sold at only $1.65, and shoes valued as high as $8.50 are going for only $2.65. Read the advertisement in full and profit thereby.

DROUTH STILL UNBROKEN

CROPS ARE BADLY IN NEED OF MOISTURE—HAY CROP IN COUNTY SHORTEST ON RECORD SAYS H. R. FORKNER.

The drouth situation in Boone County became more serious the past week, according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent. With the exception of Walton and the south sections of the County the rains on Wednesday and Thursday were insufficient to meet crop needs.

Each day the needed rain fails to arrive is bringing the corn, tobacco and garden crops closer to maturity and lessening the chances for a crop. The grass hay crop in the shortest on record. Corn prices have jumped from 65c per bushel to around $1.00 per bushel, hay prices have doubled and pastures have burned up. Many farmers are out of stock water and the question of feed for livestock this winter has already begun to worry most farmers.

Agricultural economists and experts see a bright outlook despite the bad situation at present. The present drouth is going to raise the price of farm products. If favorable weather conditions should prevail the rest of the season the farmers as a whole may receive sufficient prices to bring more total dollars than a bumper crop would bring. The present situation no doubt is going to greatly improve price conditions for next year.

REPORTS ARE FAVORABLE

FOR BROWN, SAYS ROBERT HENSLEY, BOONE COUNTY CAMPAIGN MANAGER — BIG CHANGE SHOWN.

With less than two weeks of the campaign left, many political observers are predicting that John Young Brown will easily nose out his two opponents. Mr. Brown is making as many as seven and eight speeches a day, while the county campaign managers covering the precincts in every county with sound trucks and speakers. Reports are from the county workers that with the exception of two urban districts, John Young Brown will carry every county in the State.

A great increase has been shown in favor of Brown in the last two weeks. More votes have been gained for him, it is said, than was ever gained in that period of time for Governor Chandler in his governal campaign. With a little less than two weeks to go, it is declared that Brown will gain a larger majority than both his opponents put to-gether.

There seems to prevail a greater resentment of the position taken by the Administration in the Senatorial race, than any political move ever made to date by an administration in this State. Gov. Chandler, last Thursday night over WHAS asked the voters of Kentucky to support J. C. W. Beckham, after having shook the hand of John Young Brown that he would support him this fall in his race for the senate, if (he, Mr. Brown) would support him in his race for Governor. No political stratigist has to date been able to fully explain this position taken by Gov. Chandler. Before this move of the administration, it was the prevalent view that Senator Logan was a possible winner, but this theory has now long been abandoned and no doubt is expressed as to the favorite, John Young Brown.

Brown will center his attention in fore part of week to 5th District. With two of his speeches of the week over WHAS. Thursday night at 8 p. m. (fast time) he will broadcast from Goebel Park in Covington. All persons from Boone County are invited. Saturday he will broadcast from WHAS at 3 p. m. (slow time).

A tour of the county has been completed, with speeches having been made in the behalf of Mr. Brown in every precinct. In many of the precincts, large crowds have been assembled, and many enthusiasts have said that a greater amount of interest has never been shown in a Governorial race. With the completion of the work in Boone County, except for work on election day, all attention from Boone is being centered upon Owen County.

Mrs. M. A. Yelton and children were visiting Mrs. Ann McGlasson of near Erlanger Sunday. She is in a very critical condition due to a broken limb.

BELLEVIEW LADY DIES

AT AGE OF 74 YEARS—WAS OUTSTANDING IN CIVIC AND CHURCH. COMMUNITY LOSES PROMINENT CITIZEN.

Death has again visited our County and taken from our midst one of our best loved citizens, Mrs. Sophia Clore, wife of Henry Clore, of Belleview, and mother of Mrs. Alline Brady.

Mrs. Clore was born March 30, 1862 and entered into rest Sunday evening July 19, 1936 at the age of 74 years, 3 months and 19 days. On Dec. 23, 1880 she was united in marriage to Henry Clore, Rev. Vauterman performing the ceremony. Fifty years she and her companion have journeyed thru life together, sharing each others sorrows and joys.

Mrs. Clore united with the Belleview Baptist Church many years ago, during a revival held by Rev. Farrar and she had the characteristics of a true christian person and was held in high esteem by her pastor and members of the church as well as the entire community. She was a charter member of Evergreen Rebekah Lodge and was a dutiful and faithful member.

She had been an invalid for sometime and has been tenderly cared for by her daughter and granddaughter and loving friends and relatives.

She was a faithful wife, loving mother and a kind, good neighbor ever ready to lend a helping hand to anyone in need. She was loved by all who knew her.

"Aunt Sophia" as she was called by many had many friends and her pure sweet life is worthty of emulation. May we so live when the call comes for us, we shall meet again how sweet the time will be when in that happy land each others face we'll see, the dear ones that have gone will meet them over there around the great white throne, and Jesus will be there.

Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Cress and baby of Harrison, Ohio, spent the week-end with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Cress.

MILK PRICES ADVANCE

FROM 12 TO 13 CENTS PER QUART JULY 16TH—ADVANCE DUE TO MILK SHORTAGE AND FEED PRICE INCREASE.

Whole bottled milk prices in the Cincinnati market advanced one cent, from 12 to 13 cents per quart on July 15th. The price paid the producers advanced 35 per hundred for Class I base or that part of the total base that goes into fluid or bottle milk. Butterfat prices in the open market has advanced to as high as 35c per pound.

The milk price advance in the market is due to a milk shortage. Milk production per cow has gone way below normal. Farmers faced with a severe feed shortage claim that price increase is not sufficient to meet the reduced production and increased feed costs due to the drouth. They are expected to demand another increase in the near future.

ALUMNI OUTING TO BE DISCUSSED

AT A MEETING TO BE HELD AT THE COURTHOUSE IN BURLINGTON — ALL GRADUATES OF BURLINGTON INVITED.

At a call meeting in the courthouse in Burlington, Saturday night, July 25th, possibilities and plans will be discussed regarding the alumni outing, composed of all graduates of the Burlington High School since the year 1910.

Several of the various classes have discussed an annual home gathering of their class, but never before has so large a move as this been discussed. Should this develop as planned, the group will be organized on the day of the outing, and a meeting date will be set for the following year. The teachers as well as students will be included in this group. In other words, this is supposed to be an event each year when they all come home to meet their old schoolmates.

As planned now, this outing is to be held on the school ground in Burlington on a date that is to be set at the meeting Saturday night. If you are a graduate of B. H. S. and would like to see all your schoolmates, you are urged to attend this meeting at the Courthouse. If you are interested and not able to atendfi you are requested to communicate with the editor of this paper, who will gladly report all such communications to the ones in charge.

The meeting Saturday night will only be for a short while, so if you have other plans, you can spare a few minutes and just drop in and express your opinion on the subject. This is quite an undertaking, and it cannot be done without cooperation of the graduates who still remain in Boone County and surrounding communities.

CONSTANCE WINS TROPHY

IN LOWE-CAMPBELL BASEBALL LEAGUE BY DEFEATING EAST END BASEBALL TEAM SUNDAY.

By defeating the East End baseball team Sunday, the Constance team won the silver trophy in the Lowe Campbell League. Up to this game the East End team, a Cincinnati team, and Constance were tied for first place. The game ended 6 to 4 in favor of the Boone County team.

Constance lost the first game of the season 4 to 2, but won all other games, making it ten straight.

Fox, the Constance pitcher struck out more than 120 men in the 11 games played, striking out 19 men in one game. He is credited with all the club's wins.

Constance and Belleview are the only teams in Boone County in the Lowe and Campbell League. Both teams played good ball and deserve a great deal of credit for putting Boone County on the map when it comes to good baseball.

The elimination series starts next Sunday.

SEARS' DEMONSTRATION ATTRACTS BIG CROWDS

Northern Kentucky is showing great interest in Sears, Roebuck & Company's Pressure Cooker Demonstration being held all this week directly across Seventh Street from their Covington store.

The crowds are even larger than last year, and the event is proving very interesting and instructive. Prizes are given at the demonstration, which starts daily at 2:30. The public is invited to attend, and no one need feel obligated in any way by attending.

Other events at Sears' store are: Rug show, which started last Monday, and a canning fair, which will be held until August 31, with valuable prizes for best entires.

CARD OF APPRECIATION

Mr. and Mrs. George Casper wish to thank all their friends and neighbors who helped extinguish the fire at their place last week.

REGISTRATION LAW TO BE ENFORCED IN COUNTY AT AUGUST PRIMARY

Deputy Clerks Will Be At Polling Places----Register and Vote Same Day, Urged By Democratic Clubs.

The Young Men's Democratic Clubs throughout Kentucky are urging that all loyal and interested Democrats be on duty, Primary Election Day, August 1st, to see that every voter in Boone County has an opportunity to register at the polls.

"Whether you are interested in the primary election personally or not, do not let this influence you in any way by not reporting those who do not have ways to the polls on August 1," was the urgent request made by the president of the club here last Monday night. "It is not this primary that we are interested in, but the November election and Franklin D. Roosevelt."

There will be young Democrats at each voting precinct on August 1st, with cars for the purpose of bringing those who do not have means of transportation. If you are interested in the November election, and a loyal Democrat, it is your duty to report all such persons to these men.

County Clerk, C. D. Benson, has arranged to have clerks at the polls on election day to register each voter before he is eligible to vote. It is explicitly set out that no person can register at the August primary except that he personally appear before the election officials at the polls. In case that a voter fails to register at the voting places in the county at the August primary, may register at the office of the county clerk on any day between August 15 and October 10.

This is the first time in the history of the state that rural and urban voters have been required to register before voting.

Two registration cards must be made out for each voter by the registration clerks, one an original, and the other a copy. The voter will be asked to supply the following information: Name, address, nearest neighbor, term of residence, occupation, party affiliation, sex, apparent weight, apparent height, other means of identification. The voter is required to sign both the registration cards.

One registration will entitle you to vote in all future elections, so be on hand to REGISTER AUGUST 1st.

SCHEDULE POULTRY TOUR

The schedule of the 1936 Boone County poultry tour will include a series of interesting farm flock visits and a field meeting in the afternoon, according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent. The tour will start at 9:30 a. m. from the farm of Johnye Mae and Nannie Terrill of near Petersburg and close with an afternoon field meeting at the farm of J. F. Cleek, of near Beaver.

The tour this year will be of interest to both chicken and turkey raisers. The discussions will deal principally with brooding problems. Speakers on the program will include Jim Humphrey, Poultry Specialist from the College, and a representative of the egg marketing department of the Cooperative Association.

ROGERS MAKES ROAD SURVEY

OF NINE COUNTIES IN NORTHERN KENTUCKY, ACTING IN ACCORDANCE WITH INSTRUCTIONS FROM A. B. CHANDLER.

Senator O. M. Rogers, Erlanger, recently appointed state highway commissioner, started his new program this week by touring nine of the counties in his district, the Fifth Congressional District.

Following his induction into office last week, Senator Rogers received instructions from Governor A. B. Chandler:

"Confer with citizens in each county," he told the commissioner, "and determine just what projects are the most important and the next important.

"Mark the most important project as No. 1 and work until that job is completed. Then move your second most important project up and put pressure on that job until that is completed."

At present Commissioner Rogers is completing his list preparatory to presenting it to Commissioner Robert Humphries, in charge of all highway activity.

"I'm certain that Northern Kentucky will get its just share of road projects," Mr. Rogers said.

Rev. William Smith filled the pulpit at the Baptist Church Sunday night in the absence of Rev. R. L. James, who is holding a meeting at East Bend Church.

Editorial of the Week

DOES HE DESERVE IT?

In the recent so-called convention that was conducted at Cleveland under the leadership of those two radicals, Dr. Townsend and Father Coughlin, it was certainly made plain to the voting public the purpose and ambitions of these two men.

In the address of Father Coughlin to the convention, he made this statement: "As far as the National Union of Social Justice is concerned, no candidate who is indorsed for Congress can campaign, go electioneering for, or support the great betrayer and liar, Franklin D. Roosevelt." Father Coughlin made known that he did not indorse any policies or platforms that had been presented to the American people by either the Democrat or Republican parties.

It is obvious in the minds of the American people who seriously consider such radical statements, that this man, Father Coughlin, who himself has been denounced by his own religious followers, is only trying to gain nation-wide popularity for himself, and not to benefit the people of this country. If the people would set Coughlin on a throne, give him a robe of a king, and worship him as an idol, I can picture him at the height of his ambition.

Criticism is one of the most upbuilding means of progress we have today, if it is used constructively rather than destructively. Father Coughlin, a supposed well-educated can, is certainly abusing this means.

This question then faces the American people—Shall we indorse a man who has faithfully served us for four years, a president that has been closed to his people, a man who has at least tried, shall we indorse him or shall we indorse' a man who has never offered a solution to any of our problems, who only offers destructive criticism, never at any time giving praise or credit to those who actually try, who is seeking only selfish benefits—is the type of person whom we wish to represent us?

Yes, Father, we will admit that you can make an attractive address, but you are overlooking the fact that we still have a large group of people in this old country that still can think for themselves, and like something more than just a lot of beautiful words.

JEST A-WHITTLIN' AN' A-THINKIN'

By Pete Gettys

Us country folks imagine we have a heck of a hard time tryin' to make a livin'—and it is tough—all kinds of pests and bugs and beetles an' things after us—an' a drouth to blister an' burn things up, or a rain to ruin the hay, sprout the wheat in the shock—just one thing after another to worry an' harass an' bedevil a feller.

But if t'other side—the city man's side—was known—he's a long shot from being free of worries an' trials and cares. It sounds fine to talk an' think about "big bankers"—but he has his miseries too. He worries cause he can't make loans, an' then frets an' bother 'cause he can't collect what he loans.

Surely a man is "born to trouble as the sparks fly upward,"—but if he'll just stop to think how short it all is, he'd try to make the best of it. Put down your age—substract 40 from it—then multiply the result by decimal 9, an' that's your expectancy—how long the insurance companies figger you're goin' to stay around here. Say you're 57—40 from that is 17x.9, figures out 15 and three-tenths years. You'll be asleep half of that time, which gives you about 7½ years—and it looks as if a feller has worried with things for 57 years he ought to make out some way to get along the next 7 or 8 years.

Now, what a trip it was for the 4-H Club young folks! From 40 states they journeyed to Washington for their 10th National Club Encampment—were shown through the White House—then four of the members made short talks over the radio about some of their activities that led to their bein' picked for the trip to the capital. The farm boys an' girls visited the National Agriculure Research Center of the Department of Agriculture at Beltsville, Md. A tour of buildings, laboratories, greenhouses, fields, an' orchards was arranged to give as good a picture as possible of the research there by the department for us farmers. An' Secretary Wallace made 'em a speech too.

"About 30 years ago," the Secretary said, "some people began to see that, through lack of national foresight, much of the country's soil fertility was being lost forever. Now people in the United States are thoroughly soil conscious and soil conservation measures are among the most popular measures passed by Congress. Cities, however, still drain away human, as well as soil, fertility from the farms and human erosion involves thousands of things no one knows very much about. With present population trends, 1500 years hence two-thirds of the people in this country will be descended from the fifth of the population now on farms. Any one interested in the long-time welfare of the nation—not merely in the profits of a particular business in 1936 or 1937—must be gravely concerned with the conditions under which those farm children—the ancestors of the great majority of the future race—are going to be brought up. It is exceedingly important that these children know what the very basis of our civilization is, and that they be fully informed on soil problems, and, as they grow older, on other problems having to do with making a joyous civilization.

There are now nearly a million of these 4-H young folks—"Head, Heart, Hands, Health"—which they pledge to a better life on the farm.

What Irvin S. Cobb Thinks about

War Debt Hangovers

SANTA MONICA, CALIF.—In summarizing governmental finance for the fiscal year, Secretary Morgenthau doesn't even list the thirteen thousand millions of dollars owed to us by defaulting foreign nations.

But Americans at large won't forget. If you doubt this, wait till one of these debtor countries gets in a fresh jam and turns to Uncle Sam for succor—and, brother, you can spell that last word the other way and still be right.

Irvin S. Cobb

We didn't know what we were getting into when we stuck around too long after the fighting ended in 1918. Makes me think of a colored labor batallion who went on the loose at Brest on Armistice day.

A hardboiled top sergeant rounded them up:

"Get to work on dem freight piles," he commanded.

"But de mess al done over," declared a spokesman. "And us boys only enlisted fur de duration of de war."

"Lissen," barked the sergeant, "de war may be over, lak you specifies, but fur sich ez you de duration ain't hardly started."

Woes of French Hotels

IF, OVER the woes of the French resort hotels, anybody catches me shedding a tear, it'll come out of an eyedropper and not from the heart. I'm thinking particularly of the romantic and soulful Riviera, which, under the surface, is just as romantic as an adding machine and soulful as a cash register.

There, where E. Phillips Oppenheim once delighted to "op" and the Yankee suckers rushed in, ready for their skinning—and never disappointed—is the original home of the deft short-change and the mastodonic overcharge. There I've seen many a mistake made in the bill and never yet one in favor of the customer.

Influenza Complications

SINCE the last bedside bulletin, so many souls have inquired, that I am offering a supplemental report on the work of the wrecking crew.

First I cracked an ear drum. (Cries of "Whose?") Then this clinging California influenza moved slightly south by west within your correspondent's area. So now I've fallen into the hands of a throat specialist.

A fine fellow—but easily satisfied in the matter of entertainment. His idea of a sprightly conversation is to hold down my tongue with a spoon and have me say "ah." What I claim is, when you've heard one "Ah," you've heard 'em all. But he fairly hangs on my words. There's a gleam in his eye I don't like. He's beginning to crave my tonsils.

Taking Political Sides

TODAY some entirely fair-minded patriot who is snuggled up close to the throne or hopes soon to be, proclaims: "Landon is as synthetic as a rubber duck. Roosevelt is the only hope of an imperiled people. What price a constitution when we can have frankfurters?"

Tomorrow another gentleman, who likewise is as unbiased as a spitefence, bursts forth with something like this:

"Re-elect Roosevelt and your country forever is wrecked. Landon alone can save our threatened institutions. A real statesman. He eats in the kitchen and hates to wear neckties."

Meanwhile, Mr. Roosevelt remains calm and seemingly confident. Governor Landon remains calm and seemingly hopeful.

The Two Opposing Camps

ON THE Republican side there temporarily is a lull. Incredible though it sounds, Col. Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., is not getting ready to run for anything. Later reports may change this.

Organizing the speaking bureau for the Democrats, Chairman Rayburn does not list among the chosen orators the name of his most distinguished fellow Texan. In vaudeville it breeds a laugh when the second half of the sketch makes the wrong answers, but politics is something else again. Can it be that Uncle Jack Garner has become the Gracie Allen of his sex? Only they do let Gracie talk!

A writer who isn't taking sides wonders at length whether the homespun suspender-wearing qualities of Gov. Landon can overbalance the melodious and limpid lines of President Roosevelt. For this problem the appropriate musical accompaniment would seem to be, "Poet and Peasant."

CHRISTIANITY SPREAD BY PERSECUTION

LESSON TEXT—Acts 7:59-8:4; I Peter 4:12-19.

GOLDEN TEXT—Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life.—Revelation 2:10.

PRIMARY TOPIC—A Man Who Was Not Afraid.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Stephen the Unafraid.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Persecution, Then and Now.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Modern Forms of Persecution.

Leaders of contemporary thought and observers of modern life decry the evident decadence of old-fashioned virtues. Our times are too materialistic, encouraging young people to strive for worldly success rather than high and noble character.

In a time when expediency is the ruling principle, it is well for Christians to emphasize the fact that following Christ has through all the years called for that loyalty to convictions which has caused some who bear his name to be willing to die for him, yea, even to live and to suffer for him, for sometimes it may be harder to do the latter than the former. True followers of our Lord are willing.

I. To Die for the Faith (7:54-8:1).

Stephen, one of the first seven chosen as deacons of the church, "a man full of faith and of the Holy Spirit" (6:5), having been called before the Sanhedrin to answer false charges (6:8-15), faithfully stands for the truth. His indictment of Israel cuts to the heart. In anger his hearers stone him to death. He becomes the first martyr of the Church, that holy succession which has representatives in the young manhood and womanhood of today, ready, like John and Betty Stam, to die rather than to deny Christ.

Note that in this hour Stephen was given a vision of his risen and ascended Lord (v. 55), standing at the right hand of God to welcome his faithful servant. He prayed for those who took his life (v. 60). How gloriously that prayer was answered in the subsequent life of the young man Saul, who was "consenting unto his death."

Not to all who follow Christ comes the need to face death for him, but all should be determined.

II. To Live for the Faith (8:2-4).

The early Church found that living for Christ entailed bitter persecution. Not even the sanctity of their homes was inviolate. Their persons and property felt the hard hand of havoc-making Saul, yet we find no intimation of complaint. Soon they were driven from home and scattered abroad, but the result was the establishing of gospel centers wherever they went. Living for Christ calls for daily witness, for more than steadily bearing the responsibility of life. Not to preachers and Bible teachers alone is this sacred duty given, to be discharged only in a church service or Bible school. No, "they that were scattered abroad"—all of them went "everywhere." They were not merely reforming or devoting their lives to social service, good as these might have been, but "preaching the word" (v. 4).

Are we who are now "scattered abroad" going "everywhere," and are we "preaching the word"?

III. To Suffer for the Faith (I Pet. 4:12-19).

1. We are not to be surprised by suffering (v. 12), not even by fiery trials, for blessings will follow. The Lord proves his children, even as the refiner tests gold to cleanse it, to prove its worth, and not to destroy it. God's testings are to prove us worthy.

2. We are so to live as not to suffer for our misdeeds (vv. 15, 16). Many are they who would have the world believe they suffer for Christ's sake when they are but meeting the just recompense for their evil deeds. It is a shame to suffer as an evildoer, but an honor and privilege to suffer for Jesus' sake.

3. Believers are to make their sufferings a testimony (vv. 17-19). If we as Christians must needs be purged in order to be fitted for God's service and the glory that is to come, what will be the end of those who "know not God and obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ" (II Thess. 1:7, 8)? Peter refrains from even mentioning what their ultimate end will be, but the writer to the Thessalonians goes on to say that they shall be "punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord and from the glory of his power." Solemn words are these. Have we, and those to whom we minister, heeded their warning?

Real Character of Man

It is the relaxation of security; it is in the expansion of prosperity; it is in the hour of dilation of the heart, and of its softening into festivity and pleasure, that the real character of men is discerned.—Burke.

Our Friendships

KENTUCKY CROP REPORT FOR JULY 1, 1936

Prospects for a crop of corn somewhat smaller than in 1935, a much smaller production of oats than last year, considerably larger production of wheat than last year, a very small potato crop, approximately 8.9 per cent increase in this State's total tobacco acreage over 1935, and very poor condition of pastures, are the features of the July crop report for Kentucky, issued by the Louisville office of the U. S. Division of Crop and Livestock Estimates. Kentucky's 1936 acreage of tobacco, of all types combined, is estimated at 317,000 acres, or about 8.9 percent more than the 291,000 acres cut in 1935. Wheat in this State apparently will produce about 5,759,000 bus. compared to 4,430,000 bus. in 1935. Corn acreage in Kentucky is about 2,914,000 acres, or an increase of about 3 percent over the 1935 acreage, with a July 1 condition of 63 percent of normal and a 1923-32 10 year average of 80 July 1. This month's estimate of the acreage and condition of corn in Kentucky indicates a probable crop of about 61,194,000 bus., if average growing conditions prevail hereafter, compared to 62,238,000 bus. produced last year and an average annual production of 60,301,000 bus. 1928-32 inclusive. However, it shuold be kept in mind that these estimates are as of July 1and do not take into account the intense heat prevailing in most of the State since that date. As the season progresses these first preliminary forecasts may be changed very materially by changes in condition after July 1.

Based on records of previous yields of tobacco in Kentucky, this year's acreage, with average conditions until cured, would produce about 222,575,000 lbs., of all types combined, compared to 226,718,000 lbs. of all types produced last year, and a 5-year average annual production of 362,587,000 lbs. 1928-32 inclusive. Types of which the producing areas lie either wholly or partly within Kentucky and which therefore are of direct interest to Kentucky growers, are estimated as follows, by entire type areas, regardless of State boundaries: Burley 312,300 acres this year compared to 279,900 acres last year; Hopkinsville - Clarksville - Springfield dark fired 31,000 compared to 32,500 last year; Henderson fired stemming 3,000 compared to 3,600 last year; one-sucker 17,200 compared to 15,600 last year; and Green River 16,000 compared to 18,000 last year. These preliminary tobacco estimates are the first of 1936, and the later monthly estimates will be subject to revision either upward or downward as the season progresses, depending on favorable weather and other conditions after July 1.

Oats in Kentucky are estimated at 792,000 bus. compared to 1,040,000 bus. in 1935, both year including sheaf oats reduced to grain equivalent, as a relatively small proportion of Kentucky's oat crop is actually threshed. Drouth Disaster As Newspapermen See It

Disaster to important farming regions is predicted by 42 per cent of the editors surveying the results of the drouth following curtailment of crops under Government control. Over-production no longer is a factor, declare 58 per cent of such commentators, who argue that the AAA crop reduction policy was unnecessary.

In the discussion that is had in the country's press it is recognized that while distress has come to many farmers the total agricultural income has been livestock proal income has been maintained. As to the emergency that faces livestock producers, most editors agree that forced disposal of animals may result temporarily in lower prices but that higher prices will come later when the scarcity is felt.

In a study of crop conditions, the Bismarck (N. D.) Tribune (Ind). states:

"Forty years of cultivation have done things to these prairies and there is little prospect that they can be made to produce enough to justify farmers living on them under the present system of farming.

"To face the facts is not to sell North Dakota 'short,' for an intelligent survey of our resources shows there is no need for that. What we do need is to assemble our resources and unite them so they can be used to better advantage by putting water on the land."

Small Crop: Larger Returns

"There has been vast damage in the wheat belt," says the Bay City (Mich.) Times. "The Dakotas, Montana, Nebraska and parts of Minnesota have sustained great losses that may run as high as $300,000,000. There is no denying that the disaster is one of the worst in our history.

"But notwithstanding this the dollar yield of American wheat will be larger this year than last, according to Agricultural Department estimates. These place the gross return at $600,00,000, whereas the sell-out last year brought $569,000,000.

"Not only that but it will be the largest since 1930 according to the same authority. In 1934 the return was $416,000,000 in 1933 $384,000,000, in 1932 $282,000,000, in 1931 $362,000,000 and in 1930 $595,000,000."

Estimated Corn Production

"The corn estimate as of July 1," advises the Youngstown (Ohio) Vindicator (Dem.), "is none too good, at 2,244,834,000 bushels, 50,000,000 less than in 1935 and 138,000,000 below the average of five estimates by Chicago authorities. The crop now standing has reached the limit of its endurance.

"A factor in the corn situation is the continued steady demand for corn to be used at once indicating that there was little year-end carry-over of stocks on farms, and that farmers are having to buy corn for feed.

"Since the current crop estimate does not cover the drouth's worst period so far, it is apparent that we must wait for the August report for an accurate measure of the damage, with indications that it will approach the proportions of a disaster if dry weather continues through the rest of July."

The Carry-Over of Cotton

"The cotton carry-over," thinks the New Orleans Times-Picayune (Dem.), "was sharply reduced last year and a further cut is forseen for the present season. In other agricultural lines 'over-production' practically has ceased, for the time being at least, to worry the growers. We have even read the prediction somewhere that the national farm income from the drouth-shortened crops will be greater than last year's'.

"Nature's solution of the crop carry-over problem brings severe suffering and distress to the drouth and heat-ravaged farm areas and may deal ungently with the nation's consumers. It seems savage and unfair to most of us. But its effectiveness as an eliminator of troublesome crop surpluses will hardly be disputed."

Can't Checkmate Nature

"Farmers know from experience," contends the Providence Journal (Ind.), "with what vagaries of nature they must reckon. And they try to plan accordingly. They make mistakes and suffer disappointments. But, on the whole, they are more likely to calculate better than impatient desk farmers in Washington who never earned their livelihood in agriculture.

"The deliberate restriction of production by the AAA, in addition to this curtailment by nature, may yet prove to be even a more ghastly mistake than its earlier demonstrable economic imperfections indicate it to be."

"Nature," remarks The Wall Street Journal (Ind.), "has done a very good job of disposing of the farm surplus—far too good, from the viewpoint of the farmer. Let her also be intrusted with the problem of resettlement, and let Government confine its efforts to facilitating necessary migration where it is otherwise impossible financially.

"In this way the farm problem will come nearer to permanent solution than through panaceas, be they Democratic or Republican."

Effect on Food Prices

"The drouth," says the Chattanooga Times (Dem.) "will doubtless result in an increase in retail food prices, but the first effect of the steaming temperatures in the West will probably be a reduction in meat prices. Farmers unable to feed their live stock will be tempted to ship them to market at any price they can obtain.

"Distress purchases of cattle and hogs by the Federal Government will increase the supply of meat. Even if the purchases go exclusively to recipients of relief, the effect will be to lessen meat buying from retail stores by relief clients and thus depress retail meat prices.

"Because the supply of cattle and hogs available for slaughter later this year and early next year will obviously have been depleted, meat prices will tend to rise in the winter."

ALLPHIN STILL HAS HIGH HOPES OF WINNING RACE

The following statement was received Monday afternoon from Jack Allphin, democratic candidate for Congress:

"I spoke to a nice crowd at Burlington Courthouse Saturday, assisted by Dewey Benson, County Clerk. I have no batter of speakers following me around and I am obligated to no gang. I am on the side of the people—I have fought on that side in Kenton County for six years.

"I will be more than pleased if the people of Boone County will vote for me as they have in the past for Uncle Ben Allphin and B. B. Hume.

"Don't' let them fool you—elect a young man who has a record behind him.

"I endorse two men last year in Covington City race and they received 8500 votes. Those voters will support me—I am going to win because I am on the right side.

Very truly yours,
"Jack Allphin."

All nine Boone County 4-H Club tours have been completed during the past three weeks, according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent. Three hundred and seven members' projects were inspected on these tours. The drouth has caused a number of members delay in getting their work started. Except for special approved reasons any member who had not started his project on the date of the tour was dropped from the 4-H Club roll.

The final 4-H Club roll at the close of the tour stands at three hundred and fifteen members. These members are carrying Canning, sewing, poultry, dairy, calf, sheep, swine, tobacco, corn and garden projects. While weather conditions have delayed many of the projects, 1936 promises to be a year of continued advance in 4-H achievement work and results.

Boone County members are looking forward to the district 4-H Club camp to be held at the Boy Scout Camp near Morning View in Kenton County, and to the Fourth Annual County 4-H Club Free Fair and County Picnic to be held on August 22nd.

LAND BANK LOANS SHOW LARGE INCREASE

Observing this week the 20-year anniversary of the passing of the Farm Loan Act of 1916 wich marked the beginning of cooperative credit in the United State, Ernest Rice, President of the Federal Land Bank of Louisville announced that the outstanding amount of Federal land bank loans in Boone County, Kentucky increased from $340,765 in May 1933, when the Farm Credit Administration was organized to $1,077,600, which was the face amount of land bank and Land Bank Commissioner loans outstanding at the beginning of 1936. The number of farmers having their mortgage loans through the land bank increased from 53 to 256.

This large advance in the amount of loans outstanding has made very little, if any, increase in the total indeedtedness of Boone County farmers, Rice said, since farmers used about 9 out of every 10 dollars borrowed to pay already-existing debts owed to banks, insurance companies, merchants and other concerns and individuals.

The cooperative farm loan business is handled locally by the County National Farm Loan Association, located at Burlington. It is one of 124 similar organizations serving farmers of this state. A. B. Renaker, is the Secretary-Treasurer- and cheif excutive officer. Directors are E. A. Martin, President, John H. Grimes, Vice-President, B. E. Aylor, Karl Rouse, and Thos. Hensley.

The land bank president said that since the Farm Credit Administration undertook to reopen the channels of agricultural credit the amount of land bank loans outstanding in Kentucky increased from $24,629,00 in 1930 to 58,566,000 at the beginnigng of 1936. During that period, farm forclosure sales, which durning the depression had incrtased to the higrest rates on record- nearly 40 foreclosurous per thousand farms in the year ending March 15. 1933-have been cut in half. In Kenutcky the rate last year was but 14.9 per thousand, which approaches normal for the pre-drepression years 1986-1930.

"The Farm Credit Administration has reduced direcly the interest rates of one in every three farmers with mortgages, "Rice said, "and out of every three dollars of interest paid by the average farmer before refinancing ,he now pays only two dollars, and the other dollar stays in his own pocket. The total interest saving to Kentucky farmers as a result of refinancing amounts to more than $498,000 a year."

The Federal Land Bank of Louisville makes first mortgage loans and also acts as agent in making Land Bank Commissioner loans, some of them on second mortgage security, as authorized by law. All land bank loans in Kentucky are handled by associations and advanced from funds obtained by selling farm loan bonds, whereas the Commissioner lends from funds provided from the Federal Government. The bank lends in amounts up to about one-half the appraised normal value of the farm property, and this may be supplemented, with proper security ,by a Commissioner loan, the total of both not exceeding 75 per cent of the appraised normal value of the farm propertly.

"Commissioner loans may now be made to aid in the purchase of farms," Rice said. "A favorable investment market enables the Federal land banks to make new loans bearing 4 per cent interest a year, the lowest in the 20 years of their history."

The experience in cooperative credit furnished by the land banks and the farm loan associations paved the way for the organization of a cooperative short-term lending system. Boone County farmers are served in this field by the Northern Kentucky Production Credit Association, which has made 475 loans for $164,051 since its organization early in 1934.

CHANGES MADE IN FARM PROGRAM AS RESULT OF DROUTH

Changes have been made in the Agricultural Conservation Program in an effort to help farmers adjust their operations to meet the emergency caused by the drouth.

One of these modifications relates to the minimum acreage of soil-conserving crops. Formerly, if a farmer did not have a conserving acreage at least equal to the sum of 15 per cent of his general soil -depleting base and 20 percent of his tobacco soil-depleting base, a deduction was made from the total amount of the Class I and Class II payments.

Now, if a farmer falls short of the minimum acreage requirements, a deduction will be made only from the Class I payment. That is, the farmer will be paid for the soil-building practices carried out without being required to have any given percentage of the land on his farm devoted to soil-conserving crops.

The above modification does not affect the soil-building allowance, nor the limit which it places upon the amount of the Class II payment.

Another modification provides that land from which wheat is harvested in 1936, which is grown in combination with or immediately followed by legume, will be classified as one-half used for soil-conserving crops for the purpose of meeting requirements for minimum soil-conserving acreage and new seedings of soil-conserving crops. The entire acreage from which wheat is harvested in 1936 still is considered as soil-depleting, however, for all other purposes of the program. The change will enable those producers who have not been able to seed soil-conserving crops this year on land other than the wheat acreage to receive credit for such crops seeded in wheat. Also, soybeans cut for hay in Kentucky will be classified this year as soil-conserving if this crop is followed by a winter cover crop. In this state, acreage devoted to soybean hay previously was classified as soil-depleting.

KENTUCKY BOYS MOVE UP

Paul McComas, Burkesville, has been granted an assistanship in agricultural economics at the University of Illinois and will study for his master's degree while there. He was graduated from the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture last June. Another Kentucky boy, James D. Toy, of Henderson county, has won a scholarship at Cornell University in New York. He also was graduated from the Kentucky College of Agriculture this year.

U. K. SCIENTIST TO WORLD'S CONGRESS

Dr. G. Davis Buckner, scientist at the University of Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station, has gone to Europe as an official delegate of the United States to the sixth World's Poultry Congress in Leipzig, Germany. He will read a paper on, "Kentucky Bluegrass as a source of Vitamin D and Protein for Growing Chicks," which will set forth results obtained in animal feeding research at the Experiment Station.

Dr. Buckner, who is in charge of research in animal nutrition at the Experiment Station, is a graduate of the University of Kentucky. He received his doctorate from Princeton University, studied extensively abroad and is recognized as one of the outstanding investigators in animal nutrition.

GUY LOMBARDO AND ORCHESTRA TO BE AT CONEY ISLAND

Guy Lombardo and his Royal Canadians have been engaged as a special one-night attraction in Moonelite Gardens, Coney Island, Cincinnati, according to an announcement by Edwrd L. Schott, president and managing director. Regarded as the world's ace dance orchestra, its music is known to radio listeners and theater-goers from coast to coast.

There are four Lombardo brothers in the band, all of them talented musicians—Guy, Carmen, Lebert and Victor. The orchestra includes a number of other clever entertainers besides.

The date of the Lombardo engagement is Saturday night, Aug. 1, and dancing will be from 9 to 1:30 o'clock.

Two other noted orchestras will precede Guy Lombardo in Coney's Moonlite Gardens. Ted Weems and his orchestra will be a special attraction Thursday and Friday nights of this week. This is probably one of the most famous radio dance bands in the world. Tommy Tucker and his orchestra will resume their engagement at Coney on Saturday night, and play thru Friday night, July 31.

Coney's many other attractions are enjoying a flourishing patronage. The swimming pool particularly has been a favorite through the hot spell. One important reason for this has been the fact that facilties for cooling the pool water to a refreshing temperature, thru operation of a deep well pump, have worked perfectly.

The 20-mile river ride on the Island Queen to and from Coney also has been a refreshing diversion during the hot spell. Bob Sidell and his musical navigators provide the rhythms for free dancing on the night trips.

The Coney picnic grove, shaded by gorgeous trees, with its thousand free picnic tables, has also been a favorite with those seeking relief from the heat.

More than a hundred amusement devices are available at Coney for those seeking a day of fun.

CARD OF THANKS

In the midst of our sorrow we wish to express our deep appreciation to all our relatives, friends and neighbors for their kindness and sympathy shown us in the great loss of our dearly beloved wife, mother and grandmother, Sophia Clore. Especially do we wish to thank Rev. R. Smith for his consoling words; Dr. M. A. Yelton for his untiring efforts; the donors of the floral offerings and Chambers & Grubbs, Funeral directors for their kind and efficient management of the funeral.

STILL TIME TO GROW VEGETABLE AND FEED CROPS

There is still time to grow many garden vegetables, points out a statement from the Kentucky College of griculture. The usual late varieties of cabbage, such as Louisville Drumhead and Ballhead, may be set until ugust 1, the All-Seasons to August 15, and such varieties as Copenhagen and Golden Acre after that date.

Several kinds of beans will mature in 50 days including Stringless Green Pod, Bountiful, Valentine, Pencil Pod Black Wax and Brittle Wax, all grown in Kentucky. The famous Kentucky Wonder will mature in 65 days, as also will the Missouri Wonder, another pole bean that is gaining in favor in Kentucky. The Missouri Wonder is ivory white, and therefore favored by many people as a shell and dry bean.

Early Adams and other varieties of sweet corn may still mature, under favorable condition. Turnips, beets, carrots and kale may be produced in abundance.

So far as food crops are concerned, sudan grass and millet will make good hay, under favorable moisture conditions. Soybeans might still make hay, drilled at the rate of a bushel and a half to the acre.

Sudan grass drilled at the rate of 25 pounds to the acre should yield good hay or fall pasture. Millet sown as late as ugust 1, under favorable conditions should produce a ton of hay to the acre. German millet is the kind usually grown in Kentucky, but Hungarian probably is better for late seeding.

The Kentucky Experiment Station recommends that a liberal acreage of rye or barley be seeded in late August or early September. These will furnish good fall and early winter grazing and will save hay. Many dairymen do not like rye, and on good land barley is just as satisfactory as rye.

It is further recommended by the Experiment Station that, in order that pastures may be available next year, the practice of seeding grasses this fall be followed more extensively than in the past. Orchard grass can be sown in the early seeded grasses, and timothy and redtop in the later seeded grasses. Fall seeding is more certain to give a stand than spring seeding, and grasses seeded this fall will furnish considerable pasturage next year, particularly if lespedeza or some other legume is added in the spring.

MAN ATTACKS 12 YEAR OLD GIRL

GIRL TELLS STORY TO MISS ELIZABETH COHRAN, COVINGTON POLICE MATRON. MAN AND WIFE ARRESTED.

A twelve-year-old girl tearfully told Miss Elizabeth Cohran Covington Police Matron, Thursday night, that she was attacked by a man on the road between Verona and Walton, Ky., shortly before daylight Sunday morning while his wife ignored her pleas for release and his sister held her.

Henry Smith, 24, 411 Main Street, Covington, was charged with committing the crime , and his wife, Mrs. Lena Smith, 22, with contributing to juvenile delinquency.

According to Smith and his wife, they purchased several dance frocks for the girl in Covington late Saturday afternoon. Then Mrs. Smith engaged a service station attendant to drive them to Erlanger. When they reached Erlanger, she told the driver that they would go on to Verona to attend a dance. Upon their arrival at the dance, the girl became frightened and would not go on the inside, but remained outside with the driver. Finally, the driver took her inside, and returned to Covington.

After the dance, according to information given Mrs. Cohran, the trio went to the home of Mrs. Mert Smith, Verona, where they remained until 4:00 a. m. Sunday morning.

Then, accompanied by Smith's sisters, Ethel Smith, and Dave Smith a brother, the party went to the railroad station a Verona to wait for a train to take them back to Covington. Becoming impatient, Mr. and Mrs. Smith and Ethel took the girl and started walking toward Walton.

When the four sat down at the side of the road to rest, Smith demanded that the girl sit by him, then attacked her. Although the girl screamed for release, Smith's wife ignored her; and his sister held her, was the information given the police matron.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Smith were brought to Burlington jail by Boone County authorities, the alleged attack having occurred in Boone County.

UTOPIA TOUR

Boone County Utopia Club members are holding a project inspection our on this Thursday, July 30, according to Mrs. B. C. Stephens, Secretary. A program will be rendered following the inspection tour.

The tour will begin at 9:00 a. m. in Florence with visits to members homes. Burlington, Hebron and Petersburg members will be visited in turn. A picnic lunch will be enjoyed at the home of Robert Graves at the noon hour. The club always extends a hearty invitation to all interested in their agricultural and home economics improvement program to attend their meeting and take part in their work.

DROUTH IN NORTH

RAIN IN SOUTH PORTION OF COUNTY. TOBACCO CROP ESTIMATED TO YIELD FIFTY PERCENT.

Drouth, feed and water shortage and dicouragement was outstanding among farmers in the north section of the County the past week, according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent. Farmers around Walton, Beaver, Big Bone, Verona and the South section of the county when they understood conditions elsewhere were rejoicing over four weeks of favorable weather. Several good rains have been received in that section in the past four weeks and crops are looking good compared to a poor start.

Crops in Boone County this year will be short despite the good rains in the south section. Tobacco planted is estimated at only 50 percent of the expected plantings. Corn production is expected not to exceed 50 per cent of normal yields, hay 30 percent and pastures at the present time are burned up. Good rains within the next four weeks will greatly help the present serious situation.

ALUMNI OUTING SET FOR AUG. 15

TO BE HELD AT THE BURLINGTON SCHOOL GROUNDS SATURDAY AFTERNOON AND NIGHT.

The alumni of the Burlington High School will conduct their first annual home-coming outing at the school grounds, August 15th, beginning at 1:00 P. M. This date was set at the business meeting Saturday night with approximately 35 graduates on hand to express their desire for this outing.

As outlined at the meeting, it is going to be almost impossible to get in touch with all the alumni since the year 1910, but with the cooperation of the local alumni, and the spirit that seems to prevail in regard to the move on foot at present, we will be able to reach almost every graduate before Aug. 15th. If you are interested in seeing that all persons receive notice, and you know the name or address of any person whom we will not be able to reach, please report all such information at the Recorder office, Burlington, at your first opportunity. All graduates and their families are included in this group, also anyone wishing to bring a friend is extended this privilege.

There will be plenty of entertainment for everyone, young and old, in the afternoon, with a business session to make plans for next year to be held Saturday night. Due to insufficient funds, and lack of time, everyone is requested to bring their own lunch, although there will be refreshments of all kinds served on the grounds. The purpose of this outing is to bring as many graduates as possible together, so that it will be possible to organize for a larger and more complete gathering next year.

The following persons will be called on to report as much information as possible regarding the members of their classes. If your name is not included, do not feel that you have been slighted, because we need the cooperation of everyone to make this first gathering a success.

The printed invitations are available at the Recorder office now. All that will be necessary is to write the name and address on the cards before sending.

It is your duty, fellow graduates, to report all information you can secure, to any one of the members listed above, or at the Recorder office, and we will make this one of the largest gatherings of its kind in this community.

YOUTH DROWNS AT LOCK NO. 53

WAS SLEEPING ON THE UPPER DECK—BORN AND REARED IN BOONE COUNTY. BODY RECOVERED IN 58 MINUTES.

Lloyd Raymond Presser, better known as "Shucks", son of Mr. and Mrs. John Presser, McVille, Ky., was drowned last week in the Ohio River, near Lock 53.

Mr. Presser was born at McVille, June 17, 1910, departing this life July 25, 1936. Age 26 years, one month and eight days.

He leaves his mother, Mrs. Mary Presser, two sisters, Mrs. Paul Cook, of Maysville, Ky., and Mrs. Ed Sanford, of Cincinnati, two brothers, John H. Presser, of Covington and Howard Presser of McVille. His father, one brother and one sister have preceded him to the grave. He also leaves a host of relatives and friends.

Lloyd was sleeping along side with other workers of the boat crew, not very far from the edge of the boat. It is not known just what caused him to fall, but about 12:30 a. m. he fell to the first deck and then into the water. The injuries sustained from the fall prevented him from swimming to shore. His body was recovered approximately 58 minutes later.

Mr. Presser was also among the crew that was trapped on the Ohio River last winter. His crew was marooned for several days, due to freezing of the river.

His many friends and relatives wish to extend to his bereaved family, our sympathy.

REV. LUTHER C. PEAK TO BE AT BELLEVIEW BAPTIST CHURCH MONDAY NIGHT

Rev. Luther C. Peak, of Denton, Texas, to speak at Belleview Baptist Church, Monday night, Aug. 3rd, 7:30 p. m. Rev. Peak held two very successful revival meetings there and his many friends will welcome him back again. He is a native of Kentucky, but for the past two years has been pastor of the Fundamentalist Baptist Church, Denton, Texas. Everybody is invited to come to this service.

GAS MEETING SCHEDULED

FOR BURLINGTON, TO BE HELD AT COURTHOUSE TUESDAY, AUGUST 4TH—MANAGER OF DRILLING CREW TO BE HERE

There will be a meeting at the courthouse in Burlington for all persons living in or around this community for the purpose of having natural gas for private use here this winter.

Mr. McCurdy, head of the gas and oil project in Boone County, will be present to discuss the subject, and will be in position to answer all questions that may arise regarding this project.

It is very important that every resident, whether you are a property owner or not. to be on hand for this short discussion next Tuesday night, August 4th at 7:30 p. m. as it is going to be impossible for us to be able to get the benefit of natural gas in Boone County at greatly reduced rates, unless we can organize for this purpose.

Again, let us urge that all persons living in or around Burlington attend this meeting, so that we may have a better understanding of the possibilities of gas and oil in Boone County.

4-H CLOTHING PROJECT WORK IS PROGRESSING NICELY

Clothing project work in the Boone County 4-H Clubs for 1936 is two thirds completed, according to Miss Mary Hood Gillaspie, Home Demonstration Agent.

Local leaders hope to have the girls finish their work and have it ready to exhibit at the 4-H and Utopia Club Fair to be held a the Harvest Home Grounds, on Saturday, August 22nd.

Attendance was good at the July meeting considering the hot weather. Some of the girls walked over four miles to the meeting place.

Each sewing club will hold at least one more meeting before the Fair to receive instructions about how to exhibit the garments.

CHANDLER TO SPEAK IN COVINGTON TONIGHT

Governor A. B. "Happy" Chandler will speak at Covington, Thursday night, (tonight) at 8:00 p. m. (fast time), according to H. A. Rogers, campaign manager for J. W. Beckham in Boone County.

This will be the second speech by Chandler in behalf of J. C. W. Beckham, candidate for U. S. Senate, the other at Williamstown Monday.

HANDS OFF IN CONGRESS RACE

SAYS O. M. ROGERS IN ADDRESS AT WILLIAMSTOWN. ADMINISTRATION HAS NOT ENDORSED LEARY.

The speeches that were made at Williamstown Saturday by Mr. Spence, candidate for Congress and by Mr. O. M. Rogers, who is advocating the election of Mr. Leary, were listened to by a large group.

Mr. Spence devoted his time to a plain and simple recital of the accomplishments that he had aided in bringing about for the benefit of his district and for the State of Kentucky, and in supporting Roosevelt's policies for the nation at large. No personal references were made at all.

Mr. Rogers dwelt upon things that he said ought to have been done, rather than upon things that were done. Mr. Rogers, however, acknowledged that he was not speaking for anybody but Mr. Rogers as an individual, and he corrected the rumors that had been circulated by over-zealous partisans of Mr. Leary that the Chandler administration or the Highway Commission was supporting Mr. Leary as against Mr. Spence. He acknowledged that so far the Highway Commission and the Chandler administration were concerned, hands were off, and no employee of the State would, in any way or respect, jeopardize his job by voting for and supporting Mr. Spence.

GOV. CHANDLER MEETS BROWN

"DICTATOR DAN" ALSO ON HAND AT WILLIAMSTOWN IN BEHALF OF J. C. W. BECKHAM —1500 IN ATTENDANCE.

Williamstown, Ky., July 27—For a few minutes in the addresses of "Happy" Chandler and John Y. Brown, Monday, resolved into an actual joint debate before a crowd of approximately 1500 people.

That was when Brown opened up over the radio and public address system from within the Courthouse at Williamstown just a few minutes before Chandler had completed his address. It was a question of which one could make the most noise for a while. Brown seemed to have the edge on Chandler, in that he was assisted by several loud speakers arranged around the courthouse. The reason for this confusion was that John Y. Brown was scheduled to go on the air at exactly 3:00 p. m. over WLW and WSAI.

The conflict lasted but a few minutes, after which Brown had the last word for over an hour. In that hour he took cognizance of many of the points made by Chandler and repeated many of the charges he made Saturday at Versailles when he spoke in the Governor's home town.

The widely advertised debate between Brown and Chandler did not materialize, but instead a three-corner discussion took place between Brown, Chandler, and J. Dan Talbott, Commissioner of Finance. It was Chandler's first and Talbott's second speech in the senatorial campaign. Talbott spoke Saturday at Falmouth.

"I didn't want to get into this race," Chandler said, "But just try to be for two friends in the same race and see where you wind up. I didn't want to be against anyone; I wanted to exercise my right as a citizen and be for some one. But if you look for a fight long enough, you are sure to find it. Because I am not supporting him (meaning Brown) he is crying," Chandler said.

Brown retaliated by declaring there were 600 mort persons on the state payroll than at any time during the Laffoon administration. "Anyone can get a job now," Brown said, "that is provided you will say you are supporting Beckham." Brown also charged Talbott with acting as dictator over Gov. Chandler. "Dan is a circus man, and when Dan cracks his whip, poor little 'Happy' dances."

Talbott, who was heckled a bit during his speech, predicted Beckham would carry almost every county in the State. He conceded Beckham would loose Kenton and Campbell Counties and probably Fayette County.

We are glad to report that Mr. Jim Acra is able to be out after being confined to his home for several months. Even though Mr. Acra is feeble, he was seen several miles from home one day last week.

Editorial of the Week

DEATH WALKS THE HIGHWAY

The gods of recklessness are devouring thousands of lives each month on American ighways—and there is no limit to their appetite.

During the recent Fourth of July week-end, close to 500 people met accidental deaths—the largest number for that period since 1931. Fireworks were responsible for a smaller number of fatalities than usual—but that greatest destroyer of all, the carelessly operated motor car, chalked up a grisly record. And every week-end witnesses similar occurrences. If, in a single disaster such as an earthquake or a fire, as many people were to be killed as have been killed in accidents in the last month, the world would be aghast. But we seem to regard accidents as being inevitable, and look upon them with equanimity.

But the great tragedy is that accidents are not inevitable. Nine out of ten are preventable, and easily preventable. Carelessness, recklessness, ignorance and stupidity are the principal causes of accidental injury and death, and surely they can be cured—through law, through force of public opinion and, perhaps most important of all, through education of the individual.

Death walks the highway. He strides through our homes. He is an unseen visitor at every place of amusement. He is apt to put in his appearance in the happiest hours. The deaths that follow accidents can be eliminated almost 100 per cent if we will only make a small effort, and learn that a foolish act that saves a minute or provides a brief, futile thrill can send us or others into eternity. No graver problem faces the American people than the accident problem—and its solution is entirely up to the people.

Lesson for August 2

PHILIP'S MISSIONARY LABORS

LESSON TEXT—Acts 8-5-40.
GOLDEN TEXT—Therefore they that were scattered abroad went everywhere preaching the word.—Acts 8:4.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Philip Tells the Glad News.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Philip Tells the Glad News.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Pioneering for Jesus.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Gospel Crosses the Frontier.

Evangelism is the work of every follower of Christ, and primarily the work of the layman. This duty cannot be delegated to the church as an organized body or to its official servants.

Philip was a layman, a deacon in the church by office, but an evangelist by the gift and calling of the Holy Spirit. His experience in leading the Ethiopian eunuch to Christ demonstrates that one who is yielded to the Spirit—

I. Will Find Opportunity for Soul Winning (v. 26). Most unexpected places will afford opportunities. Philip was in the midst of a great revival in Samaria when the angel of the Lord sent him to Gaza—a desert place. Who would he meet here? Remember that the great world-evangelist, Dwight L. Moody, was converted in a humble shoe store by the earnest approach of a Sunday school teacher.

II. Will Respond Immediately to the Spirit's Leading (vv. 29, 30). The Spirit said "go." Philip "ran." The fundamental of fundamentals in God's children is obedience. The opportunity, the inquiring soul, the equipped personal worker, all were prepared by God for just that moment. All would have been lost had Philip failed to obey.

III. Will Find That Men and Women Are Ready to Receive the Truth (vv. 28, 31-34).

God prepares souls, and more are willing to be saved than we think. Whether it was through his experience at Jerusalem, his spiritual hunger before he went up, or the reading of the Word, or all these together, the eunuch was ready.

Neighbors, schoolmates, tradespeople, fellow workers—they may present God's opportunity for us.

IV. Will Find That God Honors Men by Using Them to Win Others. He could "save a man all alone on the top of the Alps," but he doesn't ordinarily do it. Remember it was "the sword of the Lord and of Gideon" that wrought a victory. The eunuch needed an interpreter of the truth. Philip was God's man.

V. Will Know God's Word (v. 35), We cannot interpret what we do not know. One who is not personally acquainted with the Living Word by regeneration, and the Written Word by diligent study, is not able to help others. Could you begin (as Philip did) at Isaiah 53:7, and lead a man to Christ? If not, should you not begin to study your Bible with such an end in view?

VI. Will "Carry Through" to a Decision (vv. 36, 37).

A salesman may be brilliant, cultured, and persuasive, but what counts is the signature on the dotted line at the bottom of an order. Philip pressed for and obtained a decision.

VII. Will Follow-up His Convert (vv. 36, 37).

Much so-called evangelism fails to go beyond a mere profession—a declaration of faith. The eunuch and Philip both knew that an inward faith declares itself in an outward act—and he was baptized.

VIII. Will Recognize That the Message Is Important, Not the Messenger (v. 39). When the work was done the evangelist was carried away by the Spirit. God's work goes on. His workman we set aside. As an advertising company has well-expressed it, "The purpose of advertising is to impress the product upon the reader's mind, not the medium."

It is a fine testimony to the effectiveness of Philip's ministry that although he was gone his convert went "on his way rejoicing." His faith did not rest on the evangelist nor any human fellowship—he knew God. Let us be sure to win souls to God and not simply to a personal allegiance to us or to a religious organization.

Why not be a Philip? Any man or woman who knows the Lord Jesus Christ as personal Savior can be a winner of souls. It has well been said that all that Philip had was "a love for souls, a knowledge of the Word and a sensitiveness to the leading of the Lord. That is all we need. If every Christian were a Philip the world would be won for Christ in ten years."

JOHN Y. BROWN GAINS STRENGTH

SAYS ROBERT HENSLEY, COUNTY CAMPAIGN CHAIRMAN. SYMPATHY OF VOTERS WITH BROWN.

By Robert Hensley

The under current of political reaction, that of the sympathy of the voters, has again revealed itself. The tide has turned, and again the voters of the State of Kentucky are determined that they shall be no longer disctated to buy that they are still capable of making their choice for their public officers. No longer can a political boss, with a few green backs or a job or two at his disposal, and by promises of the same job to fifty or more persons, control a district or county. Those persons who are promised know that only too recently they or their friends have been double-crossed, and only too easily it will again take place. The only way is first get the job, and then you are not sure but what it will be taken from you.

So overwhelming has John Y. gained strength in the past week, that the administrative forces backing Gov. Beckham lost all sense of administrative justice and discretion. It is so widely proclaimed and taken notice of that the Federal Government cut off their appropriation because the State (Gov. Chandler and Mr. Talbott) was using it to pay their political debts. Of the 208 persons chosen for the purpose of administrating the old-age pension, only seventeen were qualified workers, the rest were chosen because it was thought by Mr. Talbott and "Happy" that thy could deliver for Mr. Beckham, his precinct or county. Not since the days of Boise Penrose or Mark Hanna have such things ever been resorted to by a state administration.

The people of our State will not be dictated to as to who they shall send to this high.

In resenting this effort, the people will follow the advice that 'Happy' gave them a year ago. And, in a spirit of kindness, we suggest that the Governor eat not too deeply at the trough of Ambition, for he, too, may find a Brutus standing in his plitical path."

The great masses of our people are rallying to the aid and successful nomination of John Y. Brown, because they have seen in him, a man of representation and a salvation of our party.

J. C. W. BECKHAM

On the eve of the primary election it is apparent that the nomination of J. C. W. Beckham for the U. S. Senate is assured. Due to the late entry of Gov. Beckham in the race the result seemed in doubt for a time but his candidacy has made tremendous strides in the past few days and there is no longer any doubt as to the final result.

Gov. Beckham's record is his recommendation, he needs no introduction to the voters of Kentucky, at every opportunity he has served the people honestly and well, a fact which no one can deny.

Governor Chandler has edorsed Beckham and wishes that he be sent to the Senate in order that the State can get the fullest degree of cooperation from the Federal Government.

I want to urge every voter of Boone County to go to the polls and cast their vote for Gov. Beckham for U. S. Senator and thereby assure Gov. Chandler that this County, along with the many others, wishes to do her part in completing the good work that he has started and that we will not be ashamed to ask Gov. Chandler to do for Boone County the things to which we are entitled.

H. A. ROGERS, County Chm'n.

FORTY YEARS AGO TO REPLACE TEN YEARS AGO

After receiving numerous requests for the change back to forty years ago, we are making this change this week. In addition, we will add another column, 20 Years Ago, just as soon as the paper is changed to 7 columns instead of six.

Mr. Chas. Fowler, of Burlington, has consented to select the items that he thinks of most interest each week for these columns, thus making them interesting recollections of years past.

We wish to thank our readers for expressing their desires on this matter, and trust that in the future you will show the same interest, giving us a medium by which to gauge "reader interest" in your County newspaper.

AS DEMOCRATIC candidate for renomination for Congress from the Fifth Congressional District, Brent Spence submits his claims upon his record as your Congressman. He has supported President Roosevelt and the Democratic Party in all their progressive measures. Your vote will either approve or disapprove his record. A vote for him is a vote to approve President Roosevelt and a vote against him would be considered not only in Kentucky but elsewhere a repudiation of the President and his administration.

Congressman Spence has voted for all measures that had for their purpose the relief of the farmers and home owners. The Democratic Party has recognized that farming is the great basic industry and unless the farmer is prosperous there can be no prosperity anywhere.

Congressman Spence has supported all the relief, progressive and humanitarian measures that have been advocated by President Roosevelt and the Democratic Party. Upon his record he stands and upon his record he asks for the support of the Democrats of the Fifth District.

Boone County Man Is Candidate For R. R. Commissioner

Leonard Cook, Former Member Of Genera. Assembly, Farmer, Tobacco Dealer, Manufacturer And Shipper Is Well Qualified For Office.

No better selection could be made by the Democratic voters in the August Primary than Leonard Cook of Boone County for Railroad Commissioner; a manufacturer, tobacco dealer, farmer and shipper who has had occasion to study the advantages and disadvantages of freight shipments by the railroads.

This office was created to render a service to the industries and public in general in this state and should be occupied by a man who has had years of experience in dealing with the railroads so that he is fully acquainted with the existing conditions in this state in relation to freight rates in our adjoining states.

LEONARD COOK

Mr. Cook has demonstrated that he is a shrewd business man who has made a success of his own business and is well adapted to discharge the duties he should have to perform in this office as railroad commissioner.

He is well known throughout the state and has the confidence and respect of his community and as evidence he was elected to the General Assembly from the 62nd Legislative District (Boone and Grant Counties) in 1929 by the largest majority ever received by a candidate for the position. He is highly regarded by his many associates as a capable, diligent worker in any of his endeavors.

His Democracy can not be questioned as he has always been an active worker for his party. If you vote for Cook you vote for your own interests. The primary election will be held on Saturday, Aug. 1st.

NOTICE

As a citizen and as a voter of this County and as an interested person in the race of JOHN YOUNG BROWN, I feel it my duty to inform the voters that unless they be on their guard, they will be deceived.

The campaign promises in the past have not been carried out, and those made this week that Mr. Beckham may gain the nomination are certain not to be fulfilled.

Mr. Beckham, as head of the Reorganization Commission advocated and used coersion to see that every one of the present burdensome taxes were imposed. . . . John Y. Brown, when speaker of the House would not even permit such tax measures to come out of the Committee to be voted upon.

The very interests that have in the past so strongly opposed Mr. Beckham, and caused his defeat, (the Jockey Club and whiskey interests) he now joyfully takes them into his fold that he can kill the best friend that the laboring and farming class of people have ever had.

It is almost a certain and established fact, that if and when, a Federal Sales tax is attempted to be imposed upon the people, Mr. Bekham will vote YES and we already know how JOHN YOUNG BROWN will vote.

LET'S GIVE A YOUNG MAN A CHANCE

GEOLOGY OF BOONE COUNTY, KENTUCKY

Geological Boone County is an extremely interesting region. In its general psysiographic and geologic relations the county lies in the grand natural division known as the Appalachian Province, all parts of which have had a common history which is recorded in the rocks and surface features.

Big Bone Lick, in the south central portion of the county, was discovered in 1729 by Captain Charles Lemoin de Longeuil. This is one of the most noted regions in the world for fossil corals. In number of species and specimens this great burial grounds of the inhabitants of the district in a far distant age is perhaps unrivalled throughout the world. Some of the limestone beds are actually old coral reefs, crowded with coral remains.

Other parts of the county, and other stratas are equally rich in the fossils that record the ancient life of the seas which covered the region possibly twenty million years ago.

It will be the purpose of this paper to take advantage of these and other geological conditions such as the great Cincinnati Arch, the west branch of which passed entirely through the county in an approximate north-west south-east direction, in an effort to determine the possibilities of the region for oil and gas. Major geological features, —uplifts, folds, faults, anticlines, and synclines,—are easily traced throughout the county in the creek beds, road cuts, and outcrops.

Big Bone Lick itself is in a syncline. This can be proved by a correlation of wells drilled there to a depth of several hundred feet. In adidtion these wells have been producing salt water for years, which is in itself an indication of a syncline.

OIL AND GAS POSSIBILITIES IN BOONE COUNTY, KENTUCKY

On the authority of leading pertoleum engineers and geologists by far the greater percentage of all known oil and gas fields were discovered through oil and gas seepages of crude oil that will compare favorably with those over existing oil fields throughout the world. Oil seepages are also found in appreciable quantities in water wells throughout the county.

Every known indication in advance of the actual drilling of a test well are present in this county. The following facts will show from a geological standpoint the possibility of the presence of one or more of the largest oil and gas fields in the state.

The salt wells at Big Bone Lick have been mentioned previously. These wells show that there is here one of the largest deposits of salt water in the State of Kentucky. The presence of this water indicates that adjoining it somewhere there is a possibility of a deposit of oil, and a great pressure of natural gas. In this connection it is interesting to note that in Isabella, Midland, and Saginaw Counties in Michigan, as well as in various counties in Pennsylvania, Ohio, Illinois, Kentucky, West Virginia, Oklahoma, and Texas, wells were drilled for salt water, and salt water was produced in the synclines for years before anyone thought to drill for oil and gas on the adjacent anticlines. The presence of salt water is an indication of a syncline, and there is always an excellent chance for oil and gas on an anticline laying next to it. In other words, in practically all known oil and gas fields there is either an adjoining syncline producing salt water, or a salt dome.

The west branch of the Cincinnati Arch, the key structure to all geology passes (as has been mentioned before) through this territory in an approximate north-west south-east direction. This structure has oil and gas field on its flanks throughout fully one-third of its length everywhere else.

From time to time various devices have been brought forth by hopeful inventors, who claim that they will positively locate oil and gas. To date these devices have, without exception, proved to be of no practical value. It is true, there are geophysical methods of prospecting for oil and gas. These methods have been classified as magnetic, gravitation, seismic, and electrical. The proper use of one or more of these methods will locate the position of salt domes or structures, from which findings the geologist can quite definitely locate the position of possible oil and gas bearing structures. It remains for the bit, however, to disclose its actual presence. The necessity of the use of these expensive methods in this district has been eliminated by the very nature of the territory. The presence of the brine wells already drilled, as well as the rock exposures in the creek beds and road cuts, quite definitely locate the structures.

A report of a survey supervised by the Bureau of Mines, Geological Department, Washington, D. C., says of Kentucky that of the total of 25,982,720 acres in the state, 24,648,064 acres are areas favorable for the production of oil and gas. To date the actual producing areas may be estimated at less than 60,000 acres, and you might add that many acres prospected for oil and gas.

It is a definite fact, however, that there is no instrument, and no geologist, that can tell positively the location of oil and gas. The geologist can locate the favorable structure, but the only positive method of determining the presence or absence of oil and gas is a drilled well, with the water properly cased off, drilled to the depth of the probable oil and gas bearing stratas.

Any production of oil in this territory will be found in the "Trenton limestone." "The Trenton limestone" is a driller's term for a formation found in the middle Ordovician system. It has proved itself one of the most prolific sources of oil and gas in the United States. It is probably safe to say that it has as many, if not more wells than any other single formation. It has not thousands, but tens of thousands of wells throughout Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, New York, Pennsylvania and West Virginia.

Any attempt to find production below the Trenton would, in all probability, be useless. Below the Trenton lies the St. Peter sandstone, which is also Ordovician. The St. Peter is usually a white sandstone, although at times it may contain more or less limestone. There are geologists who claim that production may be found in the St. Peter. Suffice it to say that of the thousand of wells drilled into the St. Peter, little or no production has been found.

At this point it may be of interest to give a brief outline of the formations to be encountered in drilling a well in this territory. Below the soil and surface drift the first rock is of the upper Ordovician system. The first formation encountered in the hills of the county will be the upper part of the Maysville group, the lower part of which will be found on the slopes of the hills, and in the lowlands. The Maysville Group consists for the most part of blue, coarse, calcareous shales, with many rough, thin, limestone layers. The Eden Group consists of bluish gray to black, predominantly soft, fairly fissile, aluminous and calcareous shales, with numerous thin, even limestone layers. The Cynthiana Group lies below the Eden Group. The Cynthiana consists of a heavy, more or less irregular limestone, with occasional thin shale layers. It will probably be from thirty to fifty feet thick in this territory. It should be noted that inexperienced drillers frequently mistake the Cynthiana for the Trenton. Care should be taken to avoid this error. Below the Cynthiana lies the Trenton limestone of the middle Ordovician. The Trenton is a brown limestone, shade characteristic and easily distinguished, varying from brown to buff, with occasional grays.

Production in existing Trenton fields is usually found within the upper fifty feet, although there are occasions of production at several hundred feet in the Trenton. For this reason any test well should be drilled at least several hundred feet in the Trenton. The top of the Trenton should be reached at an average depth of about five hundred feet. It will be considerably deeper in the higher elevations, and somewhat shallower in the lowlands, all depending on the structure and surface elevation.

In prospecting for oil and gas in a new territory the usual quota of skeptics and doubters are found. The people with the least theoretical and practical knowledge are the first to condemn a territory. It is well to remember when prospecting for oil and gas that all future fields will be found according to the same theories, and in territory as likely looking as in existing fields. Practically all existing fields are condemned as worthless until the oil and gas were found.

The automobile, with its consequent great demand for oil and gasoline, has been developed within the past thirty years. With the growth of the automobile industry, the oil industry has had a parallel growth. It is only within the past thirty years that the oil and gas field of any consequence were discovered.

Contrary to popular opinion the first oil well in the country was not the Drake well at Titusville, Pennsylvania. The first oil well was drilled in 1826 in Cumberland County, Kentucky. The driller was looking for salt water, and the discovery of oil was entirely accidental. There was no market for the oil at that time, and it was allowed to flow into the river.

It remained for the railroad conductor, Colonel Drake, to drill the first commercial well at Titusville in 1859. The custom of knocking started early. The well was known as "Drake's folly."

In every state and county where oil has been discovered, however, there were men who had the courage, confidence, and vision, to do the pioneer development. The major oil companies rarely, if ever, do this work. It is only after it has been done that they come in with their hundreds of drilling outfits and their pipe lines and fully develop the territory, with mutual benefit to themselves, and every inhabitant of the district.

There are forty-one counties producing oil and gas in the State of Kentucky. There is every possibility that Boone County can be the next on that list. This will happen, however, when the citizens of the county get behind development and lease their land to the man who has done all the pioneer work.

Almost three quarters of the county has as its northern and western boundary the Ohio River, one of the finest navigable streams in the country. Along its banks could be constructed safe landings and towns to care for the commerce and business of the county. Such enterprises would come with the discovery of oil and gas.

There is enough natural gas in the ground in Boone County to supply cheap fuel to glass factories and steel plants that always follow cheap fuel and transporation, as well as all the cities of northern Kentucky and Southern Ohio.

Any such resources will not be developed by the people of other districts. They are too busy minding their own business. It will remain for the business and profesional men of Boone County to support such development with their encouragement and moral support.

The wealth brought into a district by the discovery of oil and gas is almost unbelievable. In Lee County, Kentucky in 1918, there was one hundred and twenty-five million dollars in oil produced and sold through the pipe lines, and in 1919, ninety million dollars worth. These wells are still producing. Farmers and landowners with even small farms were paid as high as two and three thousand dollars a day by the pipeline companies. These figures can be verified. They are a matter of state record and report, and may be found in any public library in the State of Kentucky.

It should be noted that there had never been a well drilled on any of the favorable structures in Boone County until the writer drilled his Number One well on the Dr. F. D. Crigler farm.

Since the writing of the above article the writer made a complete geological survey; moved in equipment and brought in six large gas wells. The first well was drilled in December 24, 1935 on the Dr. F. D. Crigler farm, two miles southeast of Hebron. This well, was, according to gas engineers the largest gas well ever brought in east of Texas. There has been five large gas wells brought in by the same parties since then. One on the Hafer Heirs farm just east of Hebron; one on the B. H. Tanner farm three miles southeast of Hebron; one on the Chester Tanner farm just east of Limaburg, a gas well has been brought in which took four days to get under control. This was only accomplished then, by sending to Butler, Pa., for equipment as all equipment the operators were able to acquire in this territory had been used and failed to control the enormous flow of gas. A large well has also been found on the Ogden farm one half mile north of Limaburg. A well drilling on the H. L. McGlasson farm two miles north of Hebron struck a good gas sand and flow of gas Saturday, July 11, 1936.

There are now three wells drilling and one large 27-Star Machine being moved on location. The wells so far completed are all large natural gas wells, each estimated to produce, when connected to the pipe lines over two million cubic feet of gas per day.

The Columbia Gas & Electric Company will take all the gas produced as soon as pipe line connections can be made.

The drilling operations are carried on night and day, therefore, quite a number of men are employed in the various operations around the leases and drilling equipment, such as hauling coal, water, laying pipe lines and other work. It is by far the largest industry in Boone County outside of farming.

Visitors are invited at all times to see the drilling wells while in operation.

Wells are now drilling one on the Griffith farm just east of Limaburg, one on the J. P. Tanner farm at Florence, one on the H. L. McGlasson farm 2 miles north of Hebron, Ky. Equipment is being moved onto the J. D. Cloud farm two miles east of Hebron. This is a very deep well outfit shipped here from Oklahoma at great expense. This well will be drilled deeper than any well ever drilled in Northern Kentucky or Southern Ohio.

The above wells were all located and drilled by the writer of the above article, since Sept. 15, 1935.

We do not want your money, but we do want your good will and cooperation. We have nothing to sell but the gas and oil that will come out of the earth in Boone County, Kentucky.

MILLS M. LOGAN VICTOR IN RACE FOR SENATE

With J. C. W. Beckham Running A Close Second. Brent Spence Nominated for Congressman

Senator M. M. Logan gained renomination for United States Senator Tuesday by a small majority of 2,500 votes. Monday noon, indicated Logan had a majority of approximately 5,000 over his close running opponent, J. C. W, Beckham.

John Young Brown, former Congressman-at-Large, Lexington, finished third, and two minor candidates trailed in the five-cornered Democratic race. Logan received 181,501 votes, Beckham 178,952 and Brown 85,965.

Frankfort dispatches reported Beckham declined to comment on the outcome and on the possibility that he might contest the validity of the nomination. Brown, however. telegraphed his congratulations to Senator Logan and pledged his "whole-hearted support" in the November election. Brown carried the Fifth District by approximately 3,200 votes. Logan runing second, and Beckham third.

In the Congressional race, Spence finished with a huge majority, approximately 25,000 votes. J. J. Leary running second. As for the Spence victory it was conceded by most of Joseph J. Leary's friends that Mr. Leary was not well enough known. The same was true of Jack Allphin, who ran third.

Frank L. McCarthy, finished first in the Railroad Commissioner's race, defeating his nearest opponent W. H. Gatewood by a large majority. Mr. McCarthy was appointed to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Oscar Vest.

Boone County Democrats nominated Charles W. Riley, Burlington attorney and Hebron Banker, for County Attorney to fill out the unexpired term of the late B. H. Riley who died last March.

Mr. Riley, who is cashier of the Hebron Deposit Bank, defeated E. R. Rivard, who is an attorney in Covington, but who resides in Boone County, 1579 to 1232.

Riley, who will be unopposed in November, will succeed former Judge Sidney Gaines, Walton, appointed to serve until a successor to B. H. Riley was named.

Totals of official vote in Boone County: Dr. K. N. Salyer 32; Mont Walker 10; J. C. W. Beckham 874; John Young Brown 1278; M. M. Logan 675; Jack Allphin 251; Brent Spence 1389; Jule Appel 60; J. J. Leary 1068.. Clerk of Court of Appeals, H. M. Curley 567, C. K. O'Connell 882. Railroad Commissioner, Jay Harlan 88; Leonard Cook 1414; Alonzo Gordon 129; Cecil Firence 68; Frank L. McCarthy 410; J. W. Fitzpatrick 96; W. H. Gatewood 149. County Attorney, E. R. Rivard 1232, Chas. W. Riley 1579.

ACP SUPERVISORS ARE APPOINTED

Boone County Agricultural Conservation Program farm supervisors are expected to begin checking performance for benefit payments the latter part of this week or the first of next week.

The supervisors are ready to begin work as soon as performance forms are received. The following supervisors have been appointed: George M. L. Cook, Robert L. Graves, J. M. Huey, D. K. Johnson, Joseph H. Jones, George R. Powers, Joe Ryan, Vernon Stephens, Noel Walton, Harold C. White, Geo. B. Yates, Jr., and Walton Smith.

Each farmer is requested to draw a rough sketch of his farm, listing each field, the number of acres in each field and the crop that is growing in each field this year. The farmer should do this immediately before the supervisor visits his farm. This cooperation will save considerable time and be a big help in the program.

MOST SUCCESSFUL TOUR IN RECENT YEARS—MARKED IMPROVEMENT SHOWN IN PAST FEW YEARS.

Boone County poultrymen met last Wednesday in one of the most successful tours and field meetings in recent years. Marked improvement in poultry practices the past few years have been adopted by Boone County poultrymen, according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent. Poultrymen who followed the clean chick and turkey brooding program have raised one of the biggest percent of broods started on record.

Points visited on the tour included Johnye Mae and Nannie Terrill's, Mrs. C. H. Sullivan, Mrs. Bert Loomis, Joel Gray, Grant Maddox, and J. F. Cleek.

4-H CAMP POSTPONED

The Northern Kentucky District 4-H Club Camp scheduled to be held this week at the Boy Scout's Camp, near Morning View in Kenton County, has been postponed because of the drouth, according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent.

Approximately 100 4-H members had made plans to attend. The drouth, however, had reduced the water supply to the point that the holding of camp at that location this year was practically impossible.

ACP PAYMENTS ARE INCREASED

TO ALLOW FOR SEEDING OF GRASSES AS WELL AS LEGUMES, ETC.—FALL SEEDINGS ALLOWED.

The Soil Building payments for soil improvement practices under the ACP program have been increased to allow for the seeding of grasses as well as legumes, lime phosphate, cover and green manure crops. The practices for which the Soil Building payments are made must be carried out by October 31st, according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent.

A brief summry of the practices for the Soil Building (not the class two or Soil Conserving Payment) is as follows:

Seeding Legumes

Seeding any of the following crops between January 1, 1936, and October 31, 1936, with or without a nurse crop, either alone or in connection with perennial grasses, provide that such seeding is at a normal rate per acre for the locality:

1. Alfilfa, sericea, or kudzu: $2.
2. Red, or mamoth clover: $1.50

Alsike, sweet, white, bur, or crimson clover; Austrian winter peas; vetch; annual lespedeza; or crotalaria: $1.

4. Legume mixtures:

(a) Containing more than 50 per cent by weight of legumes specified in (1) or (2) above: $1.50.

(b) Containing 50 percent or more by weight of legumes specified in (3) above: $1.

Seeding Perennial Grasses

Seeding any of the following crops between January 1, 1936, and October 31, 1936, with or without a nurse crop, provided that such seeding is at a norml rate per acre for the locality:

1. Blue grass: $2.
2. Orchrd grass, or permanent pasture mixtures of grasses or of grasses and legumes, at least 40 percent bluegrass: $1.50.
3. Permanent pasture mixtures of grasses or of grasses and legumes, at least 40 percent orchard grass: $1.25.
4. Redtop, or permanent pasture mixtures of grasses or of grasses and legumes, at least 40 percent redtop: $0.75.

Growing Green Manure Crops

Plowing or disking-under as green manure any of the following crops, between the dates specified below for such crop, after the crop has attained at least 2 months' growth:

1. Soybeans, velvet beans, cowpeas, sweet clover, lespedeza, or crotalaria, between July 1, 1936, and October 31, 1936: $1.50.
2. Crimson clover, Austrian winter peas, or vetch, between March 1, 1936, and June 1, 1936: $1.50.
3. Rye, barley, wheat, Italian ryegrass, winter oats, or mixtures of these, between March 1, 1936 and June 1, 1936: $1.
4. Sudan grass, millet, sorghum, or sowed corn, between July 1, 1936 and October 31, 1936: $1.

Improving land by the use of ground limestone ½ to 2 tons per acre, rate $1.40 per ton.

Improving Land by the Use of Superphosphate

Applying between January 1, 1936, and October 31, 1936, 16 percent superphosphate, or its equivlent, on land used in 1936 for the production of any soil conserving crop, or in connection with seeding any legume or green manure crop listed under I or II of this section 1.

Application per acre:

1. Not less than 100 pounds, $0.50
2. Not less than 200 pounds, $1.00
3. Not less than 300 pounds $1.50
4. Not less than 400 pounds $2.00
5. Not less than 500 pounds, $2.50

Most farmers do not realize at present the importance of the Soil Building Allowance. The Soil Building Allowance is separate from the Class I payments for the diversion of tobacco and other soil depleting crops (corn, wheat, etc.) to soil conserving crops. Except for excess acres of soil depleting crops. In other words a farmer may exceed his acreages of corn, wheat, etc., and still receive full payment for use of limestone, clovers, grasses. etc. Where farmers spring seeding failed they may now make fall seedings of grasses and receive payment for both seedings. Limestone and phosphate may also be applied before October 31st. The maximum soil building payment for any farm, however, is limited to the Soil Building allowance for that farm.

Farmers should carefully question the supervisors on the visits to their farms to make sure they will receive full benefit payments on their allowance. Many farmers are going to lose several dollars unless they give this matter their careful study.

GAS AND OIL MEETING SCHEDULED FOR FRIDAY

A meeting has been scheduled to be held at the Harvest Home Grounds Friday night.

FIRE DESTROYS STOCK BARN

ON FARM OF WOODFORD SULLIVAN THURSDAY NIGHT—ORIGIN OF FIRE UNKNOWN—FARMING TOOLS BURN ALSO.

The barn located on the farm of Woodie Sullivan, 4 miles southwest of Burlington on the Burlington and Belleview road was completely destroyed by fire last Thursday night. Due to lack of water, and everything being so dry, the barn was burned to the ground before help could arrive.

Mr. Sullivan said that they completed the evening chores around the barn about 6:00 p. m. and he had gone to the brooder house to care for the chickens. As he came from the brooder house, he noticed the barn being on fire. He ran to the barn and shouted for help several times.

Upon reaching the barn, he attempted to get a set of harness which he valued very highly, but the smoke was so dense that he was unable to reach them. He did however, get two bridles and was forced to leave because of the smoke.

Before help could arrive the barn fell to the ground, and the only thing that could be done was to prevent the fire from spreading to nearby buildings and dry fields.

There were seven hogs, weighing approximately 150 pounds, trapped in the rear of the barn which burned to death. Ten tons of hay, a quantity of wheat, and a large amount of lumber and farm tools were also lost.

Mr. Sullivan stated the barn and farm wagon were the only items insured, both being covered by a very small amount.

HEAT, DROUTH AND RAIN

The distribution of natures' elements has been upsetting to the peace and comfort of the nation's population, because another drouth has been playing havoc in many parts of the United States, and on the eastern border of the country the heat has been insufferable. But the facts stated by personal reports of farmers from different regions on the Farm and Home radio hour seem very different from the sad pictures by some of the college boys who put out the official farm news from Washington.

It does not follow because Montana reports truthfully that "the morale of men is almost at the breaking point because of the drouth," or that corn and wheat crops are imperilled in the middle west and that agricultural regions should be resettled.

American farmers never have been quitters under trying conditions, and tere is no such thing as "the end of the trail" for them. They aren't built that way.

THE DEMOCRATIC PLATFORM

(Editorial in New York World-Telegram)

The Democratic platform in striking degree passes the strength of understatement. Not that it yields or recedes or apologizes. Entirely the contrary. It points forward. It does not rant and strut and swagger, as political declarations are wont to do.

In effect it says, calmly and simply and reservedly: "We meant it, and we will keep on from here."

"We have" and "we will continue" recur again and again as the theme. The "net" is, carry on. That tone appears most significantly in the part which deals with the Constitution. No dramatics here. But rather a tone of firm patience.

Dealing in a wide and inclusive way with the nation's problems, such as wages, hours, child labor, working conditions, neutrality, questions of State or Federal approach, the platform says in substance:

We have tried, we have met obstacles, we will try again to see whether we can do the job without a change in the Constitution—but do the job be will, and not confine ourselves to the single phase which has been relatedly recognized by the Republican opposition.

To all those who had expected something rabid, the Democratic platform of 1936 will be a deep disappointment. It will reassure the great mass of reasonable Americans that the Roosevelt Administration if given four more years of power will yield not an inch in its purpose to restore prosperity and promote the safety and happiness of the people.

Since any political platform is relative, in the sense that it must compete with the platform of the opposition, here is the contrast, as we see it, with the one that was born in Cleveland:

Whereas the Republican platform looked forward with trepidation, backward with longing and sidewise with apprehension, the Democratic looks only in one direction—straight ahead along the course already charted.

Whereas the former was full of contradictions, giving the appearance of having been constructed by liberals shoveling in one paragraph and reactionaries the next, there is in the Democratic platform that precious element called unity, than which there is nothing more potent, in literature or in politics.

By Pete Gettys

"Some of thes e newspaper fellers that work with us in gettin' out The State Farmer Section in the drouth stricken area nas been pretty hard hit this month," says the boss the other day. "An' it costs a heap of money for them to get out one of these State Farmer Sections. For this reason, we're jest goin' to call off the entire August issue and give their pocketbooks a little breathin' spell. After all it's pretty warm to be readin' a magazine these days anyway."

Naturally, I figgered that's give me a little vacation too. But it jest didn't work out that way. So your regular correspondent's sort of pinch hittin' for the rest of the State Farmer staff this month, and here I am. An' if the heat's gettin' under your hide like it is mine these days, you'll kind of go easy on a feller and see if we can't do a much better job for you with a real sure enough, bang-up State Farmer Section for the month of September. An' it's surprsin' how soon that next issue'll be waitin' for you in your copy of The Recorder.

So here it is for August:

Along comes a feller who's director of Food Research Institute at Stanford University, and tells us the sure-fire remedy for our agricultural ills.

You know how, when there's a rundown neighborhood in the city, where the very poorest folks live in hovels, half starved, they call that "slums"—an' along comes the Mayor or some big uplift scheme, and tears away these cheap, no good houses an' makes a park or somethin', all pretty and nice.

This professor calls his scheme: "Squeezing the slums out of agriculture." An' his idea advocates nothin' less than the junking for good of a million American farms—250 millions acres of land out of the total of a little over a billion acres.

Good ideal all right—for a lot of farm failures—poor corn—poor tobacco—poor everything—planted on poor land, no good for anything—an' failure is bound to follow—but how you goin' to work it? A feller's old shack of a house leaks and is about to fall down, an' of course, he knows it ought to be torn down—but it's the best house he's got, an' he's got to live somewhere. An' after all, most of the old worn out farms are lived on by fellers who don't know anything but that kind of a place—don't expect much and don't get much—and if they were on a Kentucky blue grass estate, the place'd soon look like a widow lived there, and the barn roof'd be patched with old auto licenses an' the windows stuffed with old straw pillows—so there you are.

With the hopper grassers eatin' up everyhing and stoppin' trains an' cuttin' all kinds of shines, looks like the Dept. of Agriculture could rig up some kind of fan contraption an' suck 'em up in big tanks an' render into lard or some sort of grease, or dry 'em out and griend 'em up and make fertilizer or something. Maybe a filler for axle grease, or brew 'e minto grasshopper cocktails.

"Progress," somebody said, "is just substituting one nuisance for another"—an' maybe if we get rid of the grassoppers something else will hope up worse to plague us some more.

But here's somethin' they call "phenology"—no not "phrenology" feelin' curves and knots on your head to find what you are thinkin' abut—but "phenology"—an' every housewife is a phenologist, who knows just about all the normal dates on which all the different home-grown fruits an' vegetables show up in the local markets, and notes whether each is early or late in any particular year. Fishermen are phenologists if they're concerned with the time when shad begin runnin' in tide-water rivers; an' it is a phenological tradition that this event coincides with the bloomin' of the shadbush (Amelanchier).

The phenology of cultivated plants forms the basis of the farmer's program each year. Hunters an' trappers know their phenology. A feller in England found out that when the purple leafed plum flowers it's the best time for sowing oats to protect the crop from fruit fly in May, an' a feller here in this country found out that winter wheat may be made comparatively safe from the costly ravages of the Hessian fly if it's shown when a certain common specie of goldenrod's in full bloom an' when most of the blossoms have fallen from the ornamental clematis.

Now that's what you call "phenology"—an' it's something to know if you are a farmer!

See you in the September State Farmer!

Only Sleeping

A precious one from us has gone,
A voice we loved is stilled;
A place is vacant in our home,
Which never can be filled.

God is his wisdom has recalled,

And though the body slumbers here
Her soul is safe in heaven.

Lesson for August 9

SAUL CONVERTED AND COMMISSIONED

LESSON TEXT—Acts 9:1-9, 17-19; I Timothy 1:12-14.

GOLDEN TEXT—I was not disobedient unto the heavenly vision.—Acts 26:19.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Saul Becomes Jesus' Friend.

JUNIOR TOPIC—On the Road to Damascus.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Appointed for Service.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—After Conversion, What?

The conversion of Saul of Tarsus is on of the outstanding events of Bible history. It presents one of the strongest evidences of the truth of the Christian faith, for only on the ground of regeneration can we account for the change in Saul's life, and only on the assurance that he met the Living and Risen Christ can we account for his conversion.

As our lesson opens we find the brilliant, zealous, young Jew, Saul, as:

I. A Bold Persecuter (9:1, 2).

He was "yet breathing out threatening and slaughter against the disciples of the Lord." The death of the godly Stephen had only increased his determination to wipe out those who were "of this way"—the followers of the One who is "the way." But as he carries letters from the high priest to Damascus which would authorize him to imprison them, he meets the Christ whom he persecutes and he becomes

II. A Convicted Sinner (vv. 3-9).

Stricken down by a brilliant heavenly light, he finds himself talking to the Lord Jesus. He hears from his holy lips the solemn indictment of those who persecute God's people—"Why persecutest thou me?" He who lays unkind hands, or untrue accusation upon God's children had best beware, for so closely is our Lord identified with his people that when they suffer, it is he who bears the hurt.

In a single sentence the Lord disposes of the persecuting zeal and the sinful skepticism of this proud young Pharisee, and Saul enters into Damascus not as the haughty persecuter, but as a man trembling and astonished at his own sin. He spends three days shut in with his own soul and God, not seeing, not caring to eat, losing all consciousness of earth, but entering into communion with God. By God's grace the old life is pulled up by the roots as it is displaced by the new life in Christ Jesus. And now God is ready to send his servant Ananias to address Paul as

III. A Converted Brother (vv. 17-19).

The fears of Ananias that Saul might still be a worker of evil (v. 13) are soon overcome by God's assurance that in the praying Saul he had prepared for himself "a chosen vessel" (v. 15) to bear the gospel to the Gentiles and to kings, as well as to the children of Israel. Let us not fail to note carefully that the greatest of all Christian leaders, the apostle Paul, was led out into his life of loyalty and service to Christ by a humble layman. Repeatedly God's Word by precept and example stresses the vital importance of personal work on the part of lay men and women. The leaders of Christian work during the coming generation are now in the Sunday School classes of our churches, perhaps in a little wayside chapel in the country, in the village church, in the mission or settlement house.

Saul knew nothing of that subtle hypocrisy known as being "a secret believer," for at once he made open confession of his faith in baptism, and "Straightway he preached Christ in the synagogues that he is the Son of God" (v. 20). He became indeed

IV. A Mighty Preacher (I Tim. 1:12-14).

In this passage Paul is writing to his son in the faith, Timothy, about thirty-four years after his conversion. As he looks back over the years he forgets the trials and sorrows, the beating with rods, the shipwrecks, the bitter disappointment over false brethren (Read II Cor. 11:23-28). He remembers only the matchless grace of God that showed mercy toward a blasphemer and persecuter, and counted him faithful, appointing him with "his service."

Paul summarizes that which we know to have been the great life of the world's mightiest preacher by attributing it all in true humility to "the grace of our Lord" which "abounded exceedingly with faith and love which is in Christ Jesus." For to him "to live was Christ" (Phil. 1:21).

There are more than a hundred amusement devices at Coney to keep visitors entertained, no matter what their tastes in summer entertainment. TAKES WORK OUT OF HOG FEEDING

A self-feeder which reduces the work of feeding hogs to a third that of hand-feeding has been designed by Grady Sellards of the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky. In addition to saving labor, self-feeders are said to result in more rapid gains and to require less feed.

The feeder is known as the swinging door type. It is so constructed that it protects the feed from wind, weather and chickens and prevents waste by the hogs. Swinging doors discourage the pigs from throwing the feed out with their heads.

The feeder is built on runners, so it can be moved about to distribute the manure over the field. Plans may be had from county agents or by writing to the college.

A Meade county rural electrification committee has 330 prospective purchasers of electricity.

What Irvin S. Cobb Thinks about

The Fair Sex

BOHEMIAN GROVE, CALIF.—Up here in the Bohemian club's grove where, during the summer encampment, no women are allowed either at large or on the leash, I've been thinking about their little peculiarities.

If two women were cast away on a desert island with just each other for company, and after, let's say, ten or fifteen years, the rescue steamer arrived, they'd both be half way up the gangplank before either remembered the really important things she'd been intending all along to say to her companion; and no matter if the tide were falling and the wind rising, they'd stop right there in their tracks and thresh it all out.

Irvin S. Cobb

If you doubt this, see what happens when a pair of them are swapping good-bys, after an all-day conversation, on finishing a long chatty motor trip together. If they can find a narrow doorway where they'll block traffic, that's where they'll halt, always.

It's a curious sex, any way you take it. But we men keep on taking it and liking it. I don't know whether we're dumb—or numb. Must be one or the other.

CELEBRATING his fifth birthday the other day, my small grandson and namesake met another gentleman of like age who bragged that his nurse brought him to the party in a car.

"Can your mama drive a car?" inquired the guest.

"No," answered my descendant, "but I'm going to teach her. All you do is start off and keep going till you have to stop, and then you say, 'Damn those red lights.'"

It would appear that Cobby has been listening to his grandfather.

Praising King Edward.

IF HE was a Communist, of a breed who are usually half-baked mentalities, it was only to be expected that his effort to murder King Edward should be—thank heavens—a fizzle.

If he was a lunatic, then he's the kind of lunatic who should spend the rest of his days behind high walls. If he was a deliberate assassin—well, at least he gave a gallant monarch a chance to show how gallantly monarchs can behave in the face of danger.

Any man, given the royal background and an open path to the throne, can be a king, but not every king is a man. This king is—he proved it and this part of the world rejoices at the outcome.

The Troubles of Europe.

WE MAY have our own troubles, including so many mounting taxes over the land and so much mountain music over the radio, but what with Spain rent by internal war, and France having strikes which almost approximate war, and Poland threatening revolt against Nazi control of what, laughably, is called the "Free" City of Danzig, and the rest of them pretty generally stewing in their respective political casseroles, we're lucky.

In fact I can think of but one thing the European nations have which we could use, but, alas, will never get, needless to say. I refer to the money they owe us.

How the League Performs

UNDER the rattle of the machine guns and the shrieks of the victims as civil war flames across Spain, that faint creeping sound which you hear, sounding something like a mouse in the wainscoting, is the League of Nations taking its customary prompt steps to enforce peace upon this and all other distracted countries whatsoever.

By the way, does anyone remember when, once upon a bygone time, there was a war to end the persistent disease called war, a final war which forevermore would restore true democratic principles and motherly love to rival nations and embittered peoples? To date the result makes one almost despair of ever finding a cure for my dandruff.

Pandas Live in Trees

The panda, not to be confused with the giant panda, is a scientific puzzle. In some ways he looks and acts as if he might be a relative of the raccoon. In other ways he seems to be kinfolk to bears. Scientists never have been able to decide this question, so they gave him a family name of his own, Aelurus fulgens. In their native Nepal, pandas live in holes in trees and sometimes hide among the rocks. They are nocturnal creatures, and it is customary for them to have twins. Their cry is a sudden squawl.

By John S. Gardner, Kentucky College of Agriculture

The notes that follow are in the nature of observations made as a matter of record, and to pont the moral that persons who have been endeavoring to suit their gardening to the season have the better gardens.

It is quite understandable that, inasmuch as all the vegetables consist so largely of water, a gardener's chief aim is to conserve for his crops' use all the moisture he can. Moisture conservation falls into 2 parts, namely, making the best use of the moisture the soil contains, and too, saving to the crops that moisture they have succeeded in incorporating in themselves. Important in any season, this is much more so in dry times such as have been experienced, and which may still continue.

Soil moisture is best conserved through proper cultivation, and moisture already within the vegetable plants may be saved to them by guarding against insect and disease damage to foliage and plant tissue, through spraying.

Throughout the state, abundant opportunity is offered to see the results of suiting garden opetarions to the season, and some of them are almost amazing.

In gardens where shallow, level cultivating has been the rule, plants that were started before the drouth became serious, have held their own, and more. Although fruiting may have been retarded, the yields have been quite pleasing. In gardens where only the top quarter-inch of soil has been stirred, quite enough moisture to sprout seed is found just below the surface, and although growth must of necessity be slow, vegetables sown even after the drouth became serious bid fair to go on to maturity, especialy in those parts of the state where even occasional showers fall and if level, shallow cultivation is continued.

In most sections of Kentucky insects have been few. This has made spraying or dust for any specific pest for the most part unnecessary. In gardens, however, where the gardener refused to be satisfied with not spraying for insects, but regularly applied Bordeaux mixture, the value of this garden aid is easy to see. Ordinarily considered a control for the fleabeetle and for the various vegetable blights, Bordeaux has the added virtue that it imparts to all vegetable plants hardiness that stands them in good stead in difficult times.

Through Bordeaux spraying, potato vines have been kept green and in position to take advantage of any change in the moisture situation, should it come. Beans, too, have held their blooms better because of the vigor the Bordeaux has given them, and so have tomatoes. A secondary result on tomates has been that because of foliage kept thrifty by applying Bordeaux, less fruit was exposed to blistering by the sun. Bordeaux mixture has been a boon to "dry" gardeners; spraying should not be stopped.

Nobody knows when Kentucky's drouth will "break," but those persons who cultivate properly, and who see to it that their vegetable plants are coated with Bordeaux mixture do know, that their gardens are in best possible position to sustain themselves through unpleasant times, and, when rains begin falling again, to yield bountifully. There is still time for a well kept garden fully to make good the losses the dry hot weather has caused.

FRIENDS

Have you a friend? He is poor indeed who has none. Most of us have human friends whose companionship and understanding and love are the most precious of our earthly possessions. A Christian woman, who has proved herself a true friend, writes in a personal letter to friends some thousands of miles distant: "Friends are surely God's way of giving folkses cities of refuge—what say?" Her word is a beautiful picture of the protection and safety of human friendship. And it points straight to the Friend above all others, the Friend we may all have even if earthly friends fail us or are taken from us. All who have received the Son of God as their Saviour, can say of him, with joy unspeakable, "This is my Friend" (Song of Solomon 5:16.)

LIFE BEGINS AND ENDS WITH MILK

Where would civilization begin; where would it end without milk? This seems to be a perfectly natural question to ask in view of the fact that more than 25 per cent of the 1,500 pounds of food eaten each year by the average American consists of milk and other dairy products according to a survey made by the Milk Industry Foundation.

About 30 per cent of the nation's milk supply is used as "fluid milk" for cooking and drinking; about 33 per cent for butter; 5 per cent for cheese; 4 per cent for canned milk; 2 per cent for ice cream and 25 per cent on farms, the survey discloses. The dairy industry must utilize milk from 25 million cows on five million farms, or three-fourths of the farms in the United States every day, according to a very interesting booklet, "Milk for Millions."

More than a quarter of a million people are needed for the nationwide daily milk delivery of 45 million quarts and to make butter, cheese, ice cream and other dairy products. Dailk milk delivery, often compared with the mail, is a far more complicated problem, the survey states, as milk is highly ishable and must be delivered seven days a week.

Today, milk accounts for approximately one-fifth of all farm cash income contrasted with one-eighth a decade ago. This increase has taken place without any stimulus from benefit payments, direct subsidies, processing taxes or production curtailments, according to the Foundation.

The Soil Conservation Service advocates strip cropping where practical on sloping land, growing cover crops that will keep the land from lying bare during the fall, winter and spring, and planting of trees and grass on slopes too steep for cultivation.

TURKEY EGGS O. K. FOR FAMILY TABLE

Since there is no established market for turkey eggs after the hatching season, the poultry department at the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture suggests that farmers use them on their home tables and sell the chicken eggs. Turkey eggs are as good as any other kind of eggs, but there are not enough produced to make a place for them on the market. Hence the suggestion that they be consumed at home, and the chicken eggs that would have been used sent to market.

By continuing mash feed to turkey hens they will lay throughout the summer. Their eggs will help pay their board bill until time to fatten them for the fall and winter trade.

KEEP RECORDS OF SOIL PRACTICES

Farmers should keep records and preserve evidence of all soil-building practices carried out under the new Agricultural Conservation Program.

It is particularly important that records be kept showing the acreage of any green-manure crops and the date turned under. Also, receipts should be preserved showing the amount of ground limestone or superphosphate purchased and applied.

Before a producer can qualify for payment he will be required to submit proof of the soil-building practices carried out on the farm. Therefore, it is important that farmers keep all such evidence.

It is further suggested that farmers notify their local committeemen or the county agent's office when any practices of this kind are carried out. It is not necessary that notice be given in writing, but it is important that the local committeemen be informed of the practices when they are carried out.

CROSS ROADS NEWSPAPER CORRESPONDENCE AWARD GOES TO A FARM WOMAN

New York, July28—Mrs. Susan Frawley Eisele of Blue Earth, Minnesota, has been judged the best country newspaper correspondent of 1936, it was announced today by Wheeler McMillen, Editor of the Country Home Magazine, which sponsors the annual award to crossroads reporters.

Mrs. Eisele, who writes a weekly column for the Fairmont, Minn., Sentinel, lives on a farm nine miles from Blue Earth, with her husband and three children, the youngest of whom arrived almost simultaneously with word that she had been recognized as the best writer in her field.

In recognition of her work, Mrs. Eisele will receive the $200 first prize, together with a trip to New York and Washington, as soon as she is able to travel. The award is the equivalent, in rural journalism, of the Pulitzer Award in the metropolitan press. The winner last year was Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Mahnkey of Oasis, Missouri.

Mrs. Eisele's work was chosen from 3,600 clippings from country papers, submitted by the rural editors as the writing of their best correspondents. The judges, in addition to Mr. McMillen, included Miss Gertrude B. Lane, editor of The Woman's Home Companion; William L. Chenery, editor of Collier's; and Sumner Blossom, editor of The American Magazine.

The annual award was inaugurated by The Country Home Magazine, a national farm publication, in an effort to give recognition to what the editors believe is a most important phase of American journalism. The quality of writing submitted, according to Mr. McMillen, has been extremely high; simple and straightforward.

"America's open country raises, year after year, talents that should not go unrecognized," he said. "In thousands of rural communities throughout the country, men and woman are doing far better reporting and writing than many city writers do. The quality of the material entered was really remarkable."

The second largest award goes to Carl D. Summers, farmer of Hart's Crossroads, Ill., who writes for the Winchester, Ill., Times. Of the 20 other prizes given, fifteen went to women. Special mention also was given to four newspapers for the general excellence of their country correspondence. They were the Schuyler, Nebr., Sun; the Stillwater, Okla., Gazette; the Belleville, Kans., Telescope, and the Cedar Springs, Mich., Clipper.

In describing the first prize winner, Arthur M. Nelson, publisher of the Fairmont Sentinel, the man who recognized her ability and submitted her work, says:

"Mrs. Eisle does all of the home work in the house, maintains a good garden, an abundant poultry yard. Everything about the place proclaims her a model housekeeper and home maker. Unassisted Mr. Eisele does the field work on the 80 acre farm, cares for the dairy herd, the pigs in the feeding lot. The Eiseles' is a typical Northwest farm home of the better class."

Excerpts from Mrs. Eisele's column, which is titled "With a Penny Pencil," follow:

"How quiet it seems after the threshing machine vanishes behind the bend in the road. The place seems empty, like after a funeral. You wish they would come back, the threshing crew, with their swearing and laughter and quarrelling. How sober the children, even, and what long faces. Behind the barn looms up a gleaming yellow stack of straw—unfamiliar and larming in appearance—but it is a monument to a husband's toil and sweat, and suddenly it grips you most profoundly. Life becomes intensely precious . . ."

"Maybe the well-dressed man in fashion forecasts will be wearing light coats and spats and such, but in this part of the country there will be several well-dressed men wearing high-top boots lavishly decorated with mud and barnyard insignia; scare-crow effects will be especially featured, sweaters with frayed sleeves and fringed bottoms, flapping overalls, caps stiff with accumulations of grease, cream and dust . . ."

"Unlike Longfellow's immortal pause, that of the country woman, during this season of cornhusking, comes between the dawn and the daylight, that nebulous ten or fifteen minutes during which she has a little time of her own. The kitchen is warm, the breakfast is cooking, the children are not yet up, the husband has not yet come in from the barn, and suddenly there seems to be nothing to do. Can it be true? This moment is one of the sweetest of the whole day: a moment in which she may sit at an east window and watch the day break from its pink satin shell. A moment unbelievably beautiful . . ."

"It seems almost sacrilegious to open up jars that took so long to fill. The more a woman cans, the stingier she is with her cellar things . . ."

"'Mary,' said the housewife, 'I know you were thoughtless, but it doesn't look just right to me to have you hang your nightgown next to the mister's pajamas.' There is a washday item that might interest others of you. The world is full of all kinds of people . . ."

"Lots of things little boys learn at school are not on their report cards . . ."

MORE POULTRY FOR ELLIOTT FARMERS

In a recent discussion of poultry raising opportunities, C. E. Harris, a field agent for the extension service of the Kentucky College of Agriculture, cited the development of the poultry industry into one of the major sources of income for farmers of Elliott county.

In 1930 less than 4,000 chicks were purchased by farmers of Elliott county. In 1935, 60,000 chicks went into the county and the number passed the 100,000 mark this year, between 90 and 95 per cent of them being saved as a result of the use ofimp roved methods.

Many brooder houses were used this year, heated with home-made brick brooders. Farmers brooded chicks in January and sold them for broilers. Placed on the market when 11 or 12 weeks old, they weighed about two pounds.

Mrs. Maude Click, Sandy Hook, put 293 chicks in the brooder house January 16, and raised all but 16 to 11 weeks of age, at which time 277 were sold $147.60, which left $78.80 profit for 77 days days of work. Other farmers reported similar experiences. It is estimated that more than 100 laying houses will be built in the county to care for flocks of mature pullets.

Mr. Harris gives credit for the development of the poultry industry in Elliott county to the untiring efforts of the county agent, E. D. Rice, the progressive farmers of the county and the poultry department of the College of Agriculture.

DOG FOOD FIRST IN CANNING INDUSTRY

Within the last few years a tremendous business in canned dog food has developed in the United States. In fact, it is said that dog food now ranks first in the canning industry, with an annual retail sale value of 30 to 35 million dollars. Tomatoes are second, the annual pack being estimated at 500,000,000 cans.

There are many brands of dog food on the market that are wholesome and sold at prices commensurate with their food value. On the other hand, tests made at the University of Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station indicate that some are not worth the price of the container.

In some instances canned dog food was found to be 65 to 85 per cent water. Brands varied from 5 to 12 per cent protein, a half of a per cent to 6 per cent fat, and a half of a per cent to 3½ per cent fiber. If the purchaser paid 8 cents for a 16-ounce can of dog food that was 85 per cent water he would be paying 1.2 cents for food material and 6.8 cents for water.

Prof. J. D. Turner, head of the department of feeding stuffs at the Experiment Station, says that the names of some canned dog foods are misleading and that contents are falsely stated and the products misbranded. Some of them, he notes, are made of the cheapest obtainable materials of both animal and vegetable sources. Some are deficient in net weight. On some labels are such statements as "Government inspected" and "fit for human use."

It is estimated that 25 to 30 per cent of the canned dog food is consumed by needy people.

DISPELLING THE FOG

By Charles Michelson
Director of Publicity, Democratic National Committee

Among the most entertaining features of the political campaign is the jubilation of the Republican High Command at the announced results of what is described as a sample poll of American voters. This poll purports to describe the present status of the voters' opinion as giving President Roosevelt a popular majority of over 2,000,000 and Gov. Landon a preponderance of six votes in the Electoral College. The announcement further states that these results were obtained by a canvas of 105,000 voters.

Suppose somebody, anxious to assay the political sentiment of a village with a voting population of a thousand, should interview three voters and from their replies should announce how that village was going in the election, how much importance could be attached to that announcement?

Yet that is approximately the proportion on which absurd conclusion of last Sunday's publication is based. It is about as accurate as would be determining the complexion of a thousand chickens distributed unevenly in 48 coops into which somebody reached a hand and found that the first chicken withdrawn was black, the second white, and the third speckled with a slight preponderance of dark spots, and so should announce gravely that while the result indicated that the white chickens in all the coops were forty more than the black chickens, the reports from 48 coops indicated that the percentage was the other way about. The deduction would be something approaching the conclusions drawn by the recent poll.

According to this calculation, Mr. Landon is safe only in 13 States, with an aggregate of 99 electoral votes while Mr. Roosevelts is safe in 24 States, with an electoral vote of 229. In order to figure a Republican victory, there had to be included as "probably Republican" 11 of the States styled as doubtful, while allowing the President only three.

A Doubtful Way of Being Doubtful

Included in the States in which the Republicans are accorded an advantage are every one of the most populous States in the East and all of the most populous States of the Middle West. In all, the calculation gives 173 electoral votes on the doubtful list to the Republicans and only 30 electoral votes on the doubtful list to the Democrats.

Needless to say, the figures do not at all accord with the estimates made from Democratic sources. Those who gamble on elections would be quite willing to bet the 13 "safely Republican" States will not be in that column on election day, and to give still larger odds that the eight doubtful States classed as "Republican" will not show any such advantage on election day. To put it more bluntly, the Democrats will only have to carry any one of six of these "doubtful" States to win the election—that is, if they win in New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Illinois Indiana, or Minnesota, Mr. Roosevelt goes in for a second term.

The poll that has caused so much Republican jubilation naively presents that it was taken before Governor Lehman of New York had expressed his willingness to run again for the Governorship. In '32 with the same combination of Roosevelt for President and Lehman for Governor, New York State went Democratic by nearly 600,000 majority.

Incidentally, the questionnaires went out on June 16 so they caught the back wash of the Cleveland Convention, and the replies had to be by July 6, which gave little time for the Democrats. It was admirably timed to get one kind of response.

Of course, these polls are hardly valuable as an index of public sentiment unless we know how they are conducted and how general statement that it was "a cross section of the voting population," admittedly addressed to only 105,000 of some 50 million voters in the United States.

Infinitesimally Small Sampling

As a general rule, perhaps because it is the easiest process, the voters are solicited from telephone directories and those who have automobile permits. Statisticians tell us that only 87 out of each thousand voters has a telephone listed in his or her name, and only 179 out of each thousand have automobiles. They also tell us that the percentage of replies to questionnaires is only one in five. Consequently, the telephone voters in these polls are only 17 out of each thousand of population. If the proportion as between the two candidates is 9 to 8, a change of two votes in a thousand would reverse the result. Which is only another way of saying that the overwhelming mass of voters in the United States are practically unrepresented in such straw balloting as this.

Without questioning the good faith of those who conduct these polls, it might be worthy of attention to note that they are sold to newspapers, which of course, are looking for startling headlines and sensational stories with which to attract readers. Going back to the old New York Sun designation of news—it was not news if a dog bit a man, but it would be news if a man bit a dog—it might be presented that there would be no sensation in announcing that the President was due for re-election, while a contrary statement would not fail to cause discussion and otherwise help newspaper circulation. It might be a coincidence that a preponderant majority of the newspapers that are buying this service are those distinctly anti-administration. As such, naturally they would be happier in printing that there was some doubt in the November event than simply to repeat what a majority of the people of the United States accept as a positive fact, that President Roosevelt will still be in the White House next year.

However, this election will not be decided by straw ballots or by statements based thereon, by Republican Party potentaes, or du-Pont Liberty Leaguers. The farm hand in the agricultural belt, who does not figure in the straw votes, counts as much on election day as the Wall Street banker. The ballot of the miner in the depths of the coal mines has exactly the same value when a count is really made as the gentleman who owns the coal deposits. It will be these who make the headline sample ballotings look foolish on election day.

A circular published by the College of Agriculture, Lexington, suggests the installation of a pitcher pump at a kitchen sink, where a water pressure system cannot be had. Such a pump, and a drain for disposing of water, usually costs between $15 and $40.

GAS MEETING DRAWS CROWD

AT HARVEST HOME GROUNDS FRIDAY NIGHT—INTERESTING DISCUSSION BY MANAGER OF DRILLING CREW.

The free dance and general get-together at the Harvest Home was well attended last Friday night by people from all parts of the county. There were approximately 250 people on hand to learn more about the possibility of gas and oil in Boone County, the subject discussby manager of drilling crew, Mr. McCurdy.

In his discussion Mr. McCurdy stated that Boone County lies directly on the same dome as the oil wells in Kentucky, Ohio and Indiana, and that the gas struck is from the same sand that has been active for over seventy years. "We have already brought in some of the best natural gas wells in the United States," McCurdy said "and where there is as much gas as we have here, there has got to be oil somewhere. We are not sure just where it is as yet, but we now have two large drills in operation that have capacities to reach below the Trenton sand, the layer of soil that produces crude oil, and if there is oil at either of these places, we will find it."

Mr. McCurdy also invited the public to visit the well now in process of being drilled on the O. R. Russ farm near Limaburg. The large gas vein was struck at approximately 525 feet, but they are going deeper for oil, the depth at the present time being about 850 feet.

Those well known "Boone County Kids" furnished the music for an old-fashioned square dance and round dance. Many old timers were on hand to make the evening complete.

STORE TO YOUR DOOR SERVICE

Again the people of Boone County will be benefitted by an additional service, "store to your door service" conducted by that modern grocerman, Ben Anten, retailer in Florence and Erlanger.

Store to your door service means just what the name implies. There will be a large truck equipped with refrigeration, and will carry a full line of fresh meats, groceries, fruits and vegetables and general merchandise that will call at your door certain days each week, and the merchandise you receive will be just as if you had purchased it from the store.

The prices will be the same as in both of the other stores. The circular which is passed out each week will bear prices effective for the coming week.

Burlington, Belleview, Petersburg Idlewild and Hebron will be furnished this service on Monday, Wednesday and Friday of each week. Union, New Haven and Richwood Pike will be served on Tuesday and Thursday of each week. This service will begin Monday, August 17th.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Butler and son of Union took supper with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Rice Friday evening.

DANCE

The Young Men's Democratic Club will hold their third dance of the season at the beautiful Harvest Home Grounds, Saturday, August 29th. There will be a ten-act floor show, amplifying system and master of ceremonies on hand to make each and every person present enjoy the evening.

There will be a social gathering for members only at Waters, Limaburg, next Monday night.

The Harvest Home Orchestra will supply the music and there will be dancing from 9:00 p. m. to 1:00 a. m. (fast time). The public is invited.

ALUMNI AND TEACHERS INVITED TO ATTEND HOME COMING HERE

All alumni and teachers are invited to attend the home coming of the Burlington High School on August 15th. ONLY ONE PAYMENT IN SOIL PROGRAM

In the new Agricultural Conservation program, only one payment will be made to a farmer during the course of the year. Under the old commodity programs, several payments were made during the year. Rules and regulations announced by the AAA include provisions for the making public of payments to producers, the base acreages of the individual producers, productivity indices and county association expenses. Payments will not be made public until at least 30 days after they have been received by producers.

ASSEMBLY TO RETURN ON AUGUST 17TH, TIP

Frankfort, Ky., August 7—Sources close to the administration tonight revealed the General Assembly probably would be called back into session on or near August 17.

The second purpose of the call will be to conform Kentucky statutes with the new Federal law governing electoral voting.

HIGHWAY CASH RUNNING SHORT

STATE WILL BE UNABLE TO MATCH AT LEAST MILLION U. S. FUNDS. ROBERT HUMPHREYS SAYS.

Frankfort, Ky., August 7th—Finances of the road department for this year makes it impossible to make as much progress in highway building as the commission desires Robert Humphreys, state commissioner of highways, told members of the Advisory Highway Commission at a meeting here yesterday.

Governor Chandler, Mr. Humphreys said, wished the department to operate on a cash basis throughout the year.

Humphreys and Mack Galbreath federal engineer for Kentucky estimated there would be at least $1,000,000 federal aid funds available for the 1935-36 road program that the state would be unable to match. Funds that the state cannot match for the 1935-36 program will go into the 1936-37 program, Humphreys said.

Several projects removed from the 1935-36 program, the commission announced, will be included in the next year's plans to be plotted by T. H. Cutler, new highway engineer.

Projects removed from the 1935-1936 federal aid road program for Kentucky include:

Winchester-Lexington road in Clark county six miles of high-type surfacing.

Cynthiana-Falmouth road in Harrison county, 3.3 miles of grading, draining and surfacing.

MEMBER KENTUCKY PRESS ASSOCIATION ORGANIZED JANUARY, 1869

Editorial of the Week

"No One," explained Col. Frank Knox in accepting the Republican vice presidential nomination at Chicago, "can explain the New Deal, or economic planning, but everyone knows what came out of it!" Yes, all who read tthe business pages of the newspapers. For the issue of the Chicago Tribune which devoted pages to the Colonel's preformance, describing how it led off with an hour and a half of the best vaudeville acts the nation affords, displayed an Associated Press dispatch from New York under this heading: "155 Companies' Net Profits 61 Per Cent Above Year Ago."

The Roosevelt administration, Col. Knox thundred, embarked on "hysterical experiments"; is "controlled by fanatics"; "it usurped the powers of Congress, insulted the authority of the courts, undermined the institutions of self-government"; it "has abused and vilified businessmen"; "it has failed utterly" and "hamstrung the revival of enterprise!" In an almost apoplectric outburst of abuse, the Colonel declared: "People want recovery, not rhetoric."

On one of his "courtesy visits" to Gov, Landon at Topeka, Col. Knox had announced to the press that he would carry the burden of the campaign. The correspondent freely ascribed to hime a purpose to lay aside the second fiddle and to exercise his talents on the big bass drum. The columnist who laborously interpret the high motive of the Liberty League-Old Gaurd leadership in 1936 has given the country plenty of warning. David Lawrence said in his column: "Knox will no doubt have to bear the brunt of the speech-making."

In his darts and dashes of acceptance the Chicago colonel was evidently attempting to do what he felt was beyond the powers of his chieftain on the ticket. And he loved it.

The devastation which President Roosevelt faced in 1933 he described as "a glorious opportunity;" his duty was merely to clear up a few odd and ends whih he ascribed entirely to the World War. His plain implication was that true normalcy had been attained with the election of Harding in 1920; complete sanity had arrived, coincident with the all-tim high record of brokers' loans, in 1924; the abolition of poverty had folllowed in 1928. The interval from 1921 to 1933 merited no mention, because in those 12 years no public responsibility was involved. The responsibility, he insisted, started with President Roosevelt. It was shifted to his shoulders direct from the World War and he should have given "stagnant enterprises the encouragement of sensible government policies"—details not given. President Roosevelt, he roared, should have given "a stricken agricultrue the encouragement of sound agricultural policies and wise legislative assistance"—details lacking.

The fact that the leaders of finance and of every industry in the country went to Washington and cooperated with the Adiministration and wrote their own codes; the fact that the leaders of every farm organization in the country sat in at the drafting of the emergency farm legislation and its regulations; these pertinent thurths were disregarded in Col. Knox's bitterly partisan attack on the Roosevelt measures of recovery and reform.

After such treatment of truth, it is a safe inference that the listening public expected no intimation as to proposals of policies from the colonel. For which all his adoration of unrestrained "freedom of action," he seemed eminently consistent in dropping no more hints than did Gov. Landon one week earlier or the Cleaveland platform of mid-June. He didn't expect anybody to expect anything. There was not a single syllable on a single pending issue. Only the "flam of recovery that had begun to burn in the summer of 1932"—which no one could see or smell.

In the flame in Col. Knox's Chicago alone 17 banks were closed durning July, 1932, with deposits of $12,333,786, of which more than 10 million is still tied up. Five of the 17 have not repaid a penny to depositors. But in the colonel's newspaper of the afternoon of his speech we read that the 3,700 depositors of a bank in East Hampton, Conn., were repaid that day more than $900,000 of the institution's total deposits of $1,100,000, just 13 days after the bank closed its doors. Due of course to the Federal Deposit Insurance Act, one of President Roosevelt's "hysterical experimentas."

OUR ENORMOUS FIRE LOSS

More than half a billion dollars worth of property goes up in smoke ever year in the United States. More than 14,000 lives are lost through fires that occur, many of them, through carelessness.

The figures will probably indicate a higher loss this year. The campaign for carefulness seems to have missed a few cylinders. The average citizen insists upon taking too many chances and the fire demon burns up too much property.

The figures carry a lesson to the people of Boone County. It is the duty of every citizen to do his or her part to cut down the enormous economic waste.

The only way to do this is to practice carefulness yourself. Don't bother about neighbor John, or Sister Sue; get lined up on the need of precaution and refrain from joining the ranks of those who wantonly and needlessly cause the thousands of fires which occur through carelessness.

DENTISTRY FOR CHILDREN

While no claim is made that perfect teeth result in wonderful beauty and guarantee long life, the dentists of the nation do insist that parents who see that the teeth of their children are properly cared for, will prevent suffering and trouble later in life.

Most medical work is along preventive lines and so we are not surprised that many dentists insist that "the only hope of real progress lies in the prevention or early control of dental disease." To the parents of Boone County we urge that this important matter be not neglected.

In some communities we now find dentists employed by the schools and county authorities. These doctors go about the district looking after the teeth of school children. In these section the significance of children's dentistry has been recognized and the children in unfortunate circumstances are insured fairer chance in life.

PRECAUTION AVOIDS CANCER

That national efficiency is greatly diminished by disease is so well known that the statement needs no citations to win approval. At the same time, few of us realize the ravages of individual diseases.

For example, the actual money loss, due to cancer alone, is estimated to be as much as $800,000,000 in one year in the United States. Aside from the money loss there is intense suffering among the victims of this malady.

It is estimated that three fourths of it all could be avoided if small growths were not ignored by so many people. The moral is, when these things exist, see a doctor at once. Cancer, at a certain stage, cannot be cured, but, in its incipiency, it can very often be successfully and permanently removed.

Bell county farmers are being urged by the county farm agent to plant fall gardens at once.

One hundred and fifty acres were terraced in Union and Webster counties last month.

JEST A-WHITTLIN' AN' A-THINKIN'

By Pete Gettys

Country talk is as fresh and different from town talk as pure country air is from the murk and smoke you have to breathe in town. It comes straight from the soil, an' has a homely an' common flavor.

Mayve you "Jest drop in to pass the time of day." You ask the man of the house how he is, an' he complains that he's only "fair to middlin,'" he has a "tech of rheumatiz," "a little stiff in the jints" but so he can "be about with a stick," and the "ole woman is jest tolable."

After these personal matters are settled, the talk gets around to the weather, crops, cattle, an' the family an' the neighbors. One of the neighbor's children is the "spittin' image" of his father, an' if another boy don't mind his ways "it will be the ruinination of him." The neighbor's wife is "drove with work" an' "worn to a frazzle." "She ain't kept her looks," an' "pulls her back like a peeled onion," is "uglier'n a stump fence"—in fact, "that breed's run out" an' their place has gone to "rack an' ruin"; an' the woman about town is a "strumpet," an' "one of her brats is as freckled as a turkey egg."

Uncle Sam's Department of Agriculture tells us a grass-green milk bottle'll save a huge sum in keepin' milk sweet—an' it has been shown conclusively that green glass adds to the flavor, an' helps keep the original color of fruit juices; an 'that red, orange, yellow an' green light affect favorably both the small an' flavor of apple juices.

An' here's something for mothers to know: It's a proved fact that a child who'll hardly drink milk in a ordinary glass or cup may be induced to take his full quota if the milk is served in gay glasses of varied hues, with colored sippers.

Wonder why Poison Ivy is poison and Virginia Creeper ain't? Reckon it's like the forbidden fruit in the garden of Eden? "Go ahead an' pick violets or anemones—but there's a little ole vine growin' around a stump over there in the hollow that if you touch you all are poisoned."

No, I don't guess it's that way, it must be the poison in it—something as a chemical, or has medicinal properties, but anyhow, certainly a part of the great scheme of things; an' if some pretty little plants are poisonous an' others aren't, we'll still be happy and whistle away, for there's lots of fun in this old world we live in, an' it's mighty hard to beat! 'Course you get a thorn with every rose, but shucks, ain't the roses sweet?

TRENCH SILOS SAVE DROUTH YEAR FEEDS

Trench silos have increased in numbers in Kentucky since 1930, when six Fulton county farmers built silos of this type to provide feed for their dairy herds during the winter following the drouth of that year. Th e cost to these men of digging silos and filling them amounted to only about $1 a ton of silage, reports Earl G. Welch of the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture. One reason for the popularity of the trench silo is the cheapness of their construction and of filling them.

According to Mr. Welch, a trench silo 12 feet wide at the top, 8 feet wide at the bottom and 7 feet deep with a length of 60 to 100 feet, can be constructed in soil free from rock in about 20 hours by three men and a team, using a plow and a slip scraper.

The cost of an ensilage cutter, which is about $250, often prevents farmers from using an above-ground silo. For trench silos, an inexpensive power feed cutter or cutting box can be used. A feed cutter costing about $35 will make about four tons of ensilage an hour.

The size of the trench silo depends upon the number of animals to be fed, the amount fed daily and the length of the feeding season. To prevent spoilage, the width and depth of the trench must be small enough that at least a foot of silage is removed from the end of the exposed surface in five days. A cow eats about a cubic foot of silage a day. For a herd of 20 cows and a feeding period of 180 days, the trench should be 12 feet wide at the top, 8 feet wide at the bottom, 8 feet deep and 45 feet long. A silo of this size will hold about 54 tons.

A dairy tour was made by 40 Warren county farmers, when barns, pastures, storage of winter feeds and dairy types were studied.

In hopes of fall canning, Kenton county homemakers bought 24 pressure cookers.

Lesson for August 16

SOWING AND REAPING

LESSON TEXT—Galatians 6:1-10.

GOLDEN TEXT—Be not deceived; God is not mocked: for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap.—Galatians 6:7.

PRIMARY TOPIC—How to Behave.

JUNIOR TOPIC—When We Choose.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Sowing and Reaping. (Effects of Alcohol).

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Sowing and Reaping. (Effects of Alcohol).

Satan is "the god of this world." And as such he has wrought confusion in every realm and particularly in the field of moral distinctions and responsibility. Instead of clear-cut lines of right and wrong, white and black, he has managed to befuddle the minds of many so that they see only a twilight gray of moral indifference. He has lulled many a man and woman into a false security that somehow sin may be yielded to with impunity. To some he says there is no God, and no punishment for sin. To those who will not yield to such a bold attack he more subtly suggests that God is love and that there will be no judgment. Some there are who think that formal association with religious organizations will somehow atone for all their carelessness of life. How great is the need to emphasize the truth of this lesson that "God is not mocked, for whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap" (v. 7). These are eternal and immutable principles.

The epistle to the Galatians expounds Christian liberty as based on justification by faith. This life of liberty is a life in the Spirit, and this means walking in the Spirit.

I. The Christian's Attitude Toward Others (vv. 1, 2).

The spiritual concerns of life are far more important than the material, therefore the writer points out that the believer is

1. Considerate in spiritual matters (v.1).

Sin is in the world. Men, even Christian men, fall. Who is to help them? and how? Fellow sinners and spiritual weaklings cannot help. Sanctimonious and "holier than thou" folk will only criticize and hinder. The spiritually strong must help the weak, doing it gently, not judging severely.

But not all the problems of the world are spiritual and the Christians will be

2. Helpful in bearing the burdens of life (v. 2).

The Christ spirit leads a man to bear his neighbor's burden.

II. The Christian's Attitude Toward His Own Life (vv. 3-6).

The true believer is characterized by

1. Humility (v. 3). The man who is wrapped up in himself is always a very small bundle.

2. Self-judgment (v. 4). Compare I Cor. 3:10-15. God will one day judge our lives. We do well to judge them now in the light of eternity.

3. Self-reliance (v. 5). The one who is quick to bear another's burdens is slow to ask others to bear his.

4. A sacrificial spirit (v. 6). The true disciple will honor his teacher and will share with him not only his material things, but also the good things she finds in God's Word.

III. An Eternal Law of Life and Conduct (vv.7-9).

1. The law stated (v. 7). "Be not deceived; God is not mocked: for whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap." We never question this law in the realm of nature. We expect no wheat when we sow wild oats. But, fools that we are, we think God is less exacting, less true to his perfect holiness and righteousness in the realm of the moral and spiritual. Let us awake before it is too late!

2. The law illustrated (v. 8). The flesh stands for self, self-will, or selfishness. The man who lives for himself and his own pleasures reaps "corruption" even in the present world.

3. Its obedience rewarded (v. 9). God is gracious. Well doing is not only its own reward, but in future prospect there is a reward at his hand for those who are not "weary in well doing."

IV. A Summary and Conclusion (v. 10). This gathers up the truth of the entire context, reminding us that "as we have opportunity" (and sometimes it really knocks only once) we are to "work that which is good" (and it may take effort and sacrifice) "toward all men" (even if we don't like their nationality, or color, or creed, or lack of creed), "and especially" (and now we come into the intimate family circle) "toward them that are of the household of faith."

One day last week the Judge wanted a drink. When the jailer gave him a glass of nice cool Big Bone water, the Judge, not being familiar with Big Bone water, did not know what kind of decotion Cy was putting on him, and from the contortion of countenance it was presumed that the offeding official came very near having to take himself into custody.

There was no meeting of bolting Democrats held here last Saturday. There are several Democrats in this county who do not agree with the Chicago platform on the money question, but they are, nevertheless, Democrats and will vote for the nominee of their party.

THE GARDEN

VEGETABLES FOR THE WINTER

By John S. Gardner, Kentucky College of Agriculture

The weather records kept at the Kentucky Experiment Station place the first frost date for that latitude of Lexington at October 10. Nobody knows whether 1936 is to be a normal year in this regard, but this much is certain, that sometime this fall will come frosty nights to put an end to gardening for the year. After that, the vegetable diet of Kentuckians will consist of those garden products it has been possible to can or dry or those that were saved by storing in their fresh state.

All three of these methods should be employed, but because canning and drying entail certain amounts of labor and precise technic, and fuel, to say nothing of investment in equipment and in fragile containers, storing should be the method utilized to save those products that can be saved in no other way. There is this additional reason for the storing of vegetables in the condition they come from the garden, that vegetables that have been canned or dried have lost a certain degree of their flavor, perhaps some of their food value, and more or less, too, their content of vitamins, those elements whose importance to human well-being is so much emphasized, these days.

To delve into the technic of canning and drying the vegetables is beyond the scope of this discussion, but those persons who wish, may have detailed information concerning both these matters by asking for Kentucky Extension Circular 220, the caning circular, and a special leaflet on "Drying Vegetables." Inquiries should be addressed to the Kentucky College of Agriculture, at Lexington; both publications are free.

Returning to the storing of vegetables, the list includes sweet potatoes, the squashes, the melons, tomatoes, pepers, eggplant, potatoes, cabbage and the root crops comprising turnips, parsnips, salsify, beets, carrots. This list divides itself as to the storage requirements of the vegetables, whether a dry and relatively warm structure is needed, or whether merely protection against freezing suffices. The first group, the first-named six, are called the "warm" crops; the rest, the "cool" crops. Beginning next week, and continuing for four weeks, discussions of storage structures and storage procedure will appear, to aid any gardener who wishes, as he ought, to save for winter use his surplus vegetables, through storage.

DISPELLING THE FOG

By Charles Michelson
Director of Publicity, Democratic National Committee

While the Democrats find no difficulty in pointing out flaws, errors and omissions in Governor Landon's speech of acceptance, the Republicans are having a hard time countering by calling attention to the "highlights" in their candidate's address.

Indeed his friends' encomiums are as vague and general as the Governor's own declarations. They applaud his charges of waste and extravagance in dispensing relief but have no answer to the challenge that he specify how he would remedy these alleged faults. They echo his complaint that the President has usurped Congressional powers, and get as reply quotations from the minority party candidate's own speeches insisting that the delegation of these powers to the Chief Executive was wise and necessary.

Mr. Landon's difficulty lies in the circumstance that he was running for the Kansas Governorship as an ardent New Dealer when he made these approving speeches and no small prat of his solicitation of votes then was his support of and cooperation with President Roosevelt in effectuating the New Deal policies.

For that matter, his chief backer and most influential adviser, Mr. William Randolph Hearst, recorded in his own newspapers his appreciation of President Roosevelt's greatness and wisdom. This was, of course, before the tax law, raising the levies on huge incomes, was enacted. Part of the incongruity of the Republican candidate's position lies in the fact that the very laws at which he now looks askance were voted for by many Republican Senators and Representatives, some, but by no means all, of whom are now backing Mr. Landon to the limit.

These folks are seeking to explain their apostacy from the measures of relief and reform by saying that conditions have changed. At the same time they refuse to accept the President's failure to cut Government costs because of a change in conditions, chief among the changed conditions being the result of Congress having nullified his economy program by Congressional enactment, even to the extent of overruling his veto of the Nullification Bill.

G. O. P. Blocked Civil Service

Some of my fellow columnists, whose newspapers happen to be committed to the upbuilding of the minority party candidate, have been telling their readers that President Roosevelt's recent executive order placing all postmasters under civil service was timed for and aimed at taking the wind out of Governor Landon's sails, in the matter of the latter's inference that politics had wrecked the civil service. They had forgotten, or did not choose to remember, that at the very beginning of President Roosevelt's term—when the Republican appointees, accumulated during twelve G. O. P. years, were still, for the most part, in office—the President sought to have Congress enact the very same provisions he has now instituted by executive order. The minority leaders then advised him that they did not car to so tie the hands of possible future Republican Presidents.

But tot get back to Mr. Landon's speech. The Republican press in general and the Hearst press in particular naturally hailed it as a great state paper. The independent press caviled at its back of definiteness, the absence of anything constructive and its general commonplace level. The candidate's friends made a virute of the obvious monotony of the utterance, with some sneering reference to Franklin D. Roosevelt's power of oratory and rhetoric. That is all right; it is part of the political set-up to decry eloquence and exalt the homely qualities of simplicity if your opponent has the first, and your own man lacks it; but politics is not always logical. It would be a strange philosophy to hold that an economic or social issue was mad because it was presented pleasingly, or that such an issue was good because it was inadequately expressed.

Similarly, it is hrdly a valid argument to advance that a speech of acceptance need not cover the whole field of campaign controversy; that something must be held in reserve for future campaign speeches. Nobody expected Mr. Landon to recount every detail of his reason why people ought to make him President of the United States. But there is another side to the question.

The Wherefore Still Unrevealed

Here was a gentleman of practically unknown views. He had been built up ,to be sure, in the approved political fashion, by much use of printers' ink. Mr. Hearst had given him his O. K. and other anti-Rooseveltians had concurred in the verdict, just as they would have done if John Doe or Richard Roe had been labeled "Republican candidate," but the country had still to size him up and see if he justified the flattering portrait presented by the processional political picture-makers.

So Governor Landon's speech of acceptance was awaited with great interest, for in it he was due to reveal the wherefore of his being chosen by one of the two great American parties for the highest responsibility possible for an American citizen. We already knew that he had been elected Governor of a banner agricultural state, that he was a moderately successful business man, of correct life and simple habits.

After he had delivered his acceptance speech we knew nothing more. He rehashed the phrases of indictment of things as they are; he indicated that he was in favor of health, prosperity and contentment; but never did he indicate, by as much as a word, how he would bring about the millenium, which Democrats and Republicans alike would be delighted to see.

Had he merely read the Ten Commandments and announced that he was 100 per cent for them, he would have enlightened his audience as to his governmental principles and purposes about as much as he did in the Topeka address.

Possibly it was wise policy at that.

In a nation beset with as many problems as we are facing; with partisan spirit ranging high; with a candidate seeking to ride the horse of privilege, backed by the duPont Liberty League in one direction and the horse of his own Democratic section of the country in a contrary direction, it may have been bright to remain veiled, as impressively as he could do it.

That is one way of looking at it. Another possibility is that the Republican candidate did not really have anything to say.

SILVER CUP AWARDS FOR TOBACCO GROWERS

H. C. McConnell and Clint Menter received silver cups for producing the best fire-cured tobacco among 42 Caldwell county farmers who joined in curing demonstrations of last year's crop. The 42 men grew 281 acres, which produced 279,262 pounds that brought $13.55 per hundred pounds, or approximately 5 cents a pound above the market average.

McConnell and Menser received $262 and $245 per acre, respectively, for their crops, compared to an average of $134 an acre for the 42 crops.

The First National Bank of Princeton presented the cups. The demonstration was made in cooperation with the county agent, R. F. Graham.

James Lee McNeely of Grant was seen mingling with friends in Burlington Friday. Jimmie has accepted a position as teacher at the Burlington school this year.

Louisville, Ky., Aug. 10—Farmers in the fourth Federal land bank district, who obtained first and second mortgage Land Bank Commissioner loans during the past three years to refinance their debts paid 97.1 per cent of their installments up to June 1, compared to 94.5 per cent paid up at the corresponding date one year earlier, according to executives of the Farm Credit Administration of Louisville.

Over 52,000 Land Bank Commissioner loans were made in Ohio, Indiana, Kentucky and Tennessee during the three year period, amounting to $87,654,000. Installments on these loans up to June 1 amounted to $6,380,000 of which $6,197,000 had been collected, and a considerable part of the remaining portion was delinquent for less than 90 days.

Collection on these Commissioner loans, about half of which were made on second mortgages, and many of them to distressed borrowers, have been improving almost constantly over the past two years in this section and in most other sections of the country. For the country as a whole, the collection ration was 86.8 per cent at the first of June this year, compared to 82.8 per cent one year earlier.

Approximately 450,000 Land Bank Commissioner loans amounting to $830,000,000 are now outstanding. Installments maturing on Commissioner loans from May 12, 1933, when the first of the loans were made, to June 1, 1936 amounted to $58,042,000, of which $50,390,000 had been collected, and over $2,500,000 of the remaining amount was unpaid for less than 90 days.

VOLUME 61 | BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY THURSDAY, AUGUST 20TH, 1936 | NUMBER 15

CIRCUIT COURT STILL IN SESSION

MANY CASES DISPOSED DURING THIS TERM—GRAND JURY HAND IN REPORT MONDAY AND DISMISSED.

With one of the largest crowds to attend court in many ysessions, the Boone County Circuit Court began Monday, its second week of the August term, with the probability of going into the third week.

The grand jury finished their work Monday, August 17, one week from the date or their selection, and gave their final report. Thereafter, they were dismissed by the Court. They returned the following report: They were in session four days, examined 42 witnesses, and returned ten indictments. The grand jury also recommended that the condition of the toilet fountains in the County Jail be examined and repaired, as they were not in a sanitary condition, nor working properly. They also recommended that a door be cut in the front of the Circuit Clerk's office, to add to the convenience and sanitation of thte office. After thorough examination of the County Infirmary. they found it to be in excellent condition and all inmates satisfied. They commended Mr. Stanley Eddins, Supt., for the work as it is being carried on at that place.

Also, after very careful inspection of both the jail and courthouse buildings, they commended Mr. Elmer Kirkpatrick, Jailer, for the sanitary and satisfactory manner in which conditions were being handled at both places. They further stated that they desired to express their appreciation to Commonwealth Attorney, Ward Yager, for his splendid cooperation in all matters.

Several rather important jury cases were disposed of last week, the case of Grant vs. Slaybach taking more time than any of the others. This suit was the result of a collision between the cars driven by Johnny Grant, of Burlington and Mr. Slaybach, of Covington, on the Burlington and Florence Pike, near Florence, some several months previous. There was a counter-suit by Slaybach, but the only judgment given in the case, was in favor of Grant, in the amount of $175.00.

The first case set for trial upon opening of Court Monday morning was that of Commonwealth vs. Smith. The grand jury early in its work returned an indictment of rape against Smith, of Covington. He was immediately brought befor the court and his trial set for Monday, August 17. The court appointed Attorneys, Brown and Crisler, of Covington, they asked the court that they be granted additional time to prepare the case, in order tha t their defendant might be given a fair trial. Extension of time was granted until Wednesday morning, August 19. The public has shown great interest in the trial to date, and it is expected to incite more curiosity than any recent happening in Boone County.

Your editor will cover the complete trial and give to the readers the trial, verbatim.

The departure, Tuesday morning, 9:30 a. m. of Mrs. Edna Eddins, 50, took from the Burlington community one of its most beloved citizens. Mrs. Eddins was the wife of O. S. Eddins, Superintendent of the Boone County Infirmary.

Mr. and Mrs. Eddins were united in marriage fifteen years ago, and immediately upon becoming a member of the community, she was from that time on one of its most useful. She very frequently visited the sick, administered to the poor and needy, and was at all times a friend to those she knew.

At all times a very ardent and faithful church worker in the Burlington Methodist Church, where she had her membership. She will be greatly missed by them.

Mrs. Eddins had been in ill health several months previous to her death and for several days past little hope was had for her recovery. Her death followed several paralytic strokes.

Before her marriage to Mr. Eddins, she was a resident of Cincinnati and there she leaves a sister, Mrs. Anna Taylor to mourn her death.

$10,000 BOONE COUNTY'S SHARE

FOR RURAL HIGHWAY IMPROVEMENT — STATE HIGHWAY BETWEEN FLORENCE AND BELLEVIEW BEING IMPROVED

Word was received Saturday, Aug. 14, from the Division of Rural Highways that Boone County will receive $10,660.00 from the Department of Highway's two million dollar allotment for rural road work. This amount received by Boone County is of the average amount received by seventy-two of the Counties of the State. Mr. Cecil T. Williams, Commissioner of Rural Highways, announced that the total amount of road work approved by his department to date amounts to $808,578.00. Only eight counties have failed to submit a program for any kind of work. The amounts to be received by the other counties are at present under approval.

The resurfacing of the State Highway between Florence and Belleview is progressing very nicely. It is the keen desire of those persons along that road that the gravel road, having not to date been surfaced, will be finished soon. Mr. O. M. Rogers, State Advisory Commissioner from this district, said recently that it would be resurfaced at an early date.

YOUNG MAN PASSES AWAY

STANLEY EASTON SUCCUMBS AFTER ILLNESS OF ONE WEEK —FUNERAL SERVICES HELD FRIDAY.

Residents of this community and surrounding ones were gravely shocked upon receiving word of the death of Stanley Easton, aged 34 years, 11 months and 12 days, last Thursday at 6 p. m. at the Christ Hospital, after a very short illness.

Stanley, better known as "Shoots" to his many friends, and as the handy man of Burlington, was taken to the hospital just a few days previous to his death and there it was discovered that he had an ulcerated stomach. Immediately after the operation peritonitis set in and it was impossible to save his life. He refused to the very last to give up.

It is seriously doubted if there was one in Burlington who had more friends than did Stanley. Most of his time was taken up in helping others. So because of these splendid traits, and because he will be a great loss to our community, he will be greatly missed by his host of friends and they join with his family in mourning his loss. He leaves as members of his immediate family, his parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. T. Easton, one sister, Georgia Lee and two brothers, Oakley and Clarence Earl.

For the past eight years Stanley had taken up his abode at the residence of Mrs. Ora Ross, of Burlington. A greater portion of that time was spent as a general mechanic. Last school year Stanley was given the contract to haul the school children residing on the Petersburg Pike. This year he would have held the same contract.

Rev. G. E. Graden, former pastor of the Burlington Methodist Church conducted the funeral services, assisted by the Rev. Harold Beemon, at the Hopeful Lutheran Church. The remains were laid to rest in the Hopeful cemetery.

The pallbearers were: Albert Kirkpatrick, Albert Pettit, Harold Conner, Wendall Easton, Jess Eddins and D. H. Norris.

Chambers and Grubbs had charge of the funeral arrangements.

The Recorder joins with the family and many friends at this time of bereavement.

ALUMNI MEETING HUGE SUCCESS

SPLENDID PROGRAM GIVEN BY FORMER GRADUATES—MANY FORMER TEACHERS WERE IN ATTENDANCE.

The first annual meeting of the Burlington High School Alumni Association was attended by a large crowd Saturday afternoon and evening, August 15, at the Burlington High School auditorium and grounds. The afternoon session was taken up with sport events and the first business meeting of the association. The evening gathering consisted of short talks and amateur program.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Robt. B. Hensley, Burlington, President; Clayton Brown, Covington, 1st Vice President; Courtney Kelly, Burlington, 2nd Vice President; Miss Mary Bess Cropper, Burlington, Secretary, and Alvin E. Stephens, Burlington, Treasurer.

The amateur program in the evening sponsored by members of the respective classes was attended by an even larger crowd. Many of the Alumni were again given the opportunity to display their many talents that had been so capably manifest in their former school school days. There was also presented a portrayal of the March of Time, presenting the Alumni from 1910 to 1936 inclusive.

Many former teachers were in attendance. Rev. R. L. Carter, Crescent Springs, and Prof. J. A. Caywood, Crescent Springs, former teacher and principle respectively, gave talks in the evening, preceding the amateur program. They predicted a very thriving and successful future for the newly formed association. It was pointed out by them, the success of other alumni associations and of their many accomplishments for their school and community.

Following the business meeting of the afternoon many of the alumni spread their baskets of dinner together and enjoyed the same kind of good times and fellowship which had previously been their privilege.

Everyone thoroughly enjoyed themselves, the first meeting being acclaimed a great success. Those present express, through the pages of our paper, their regrets to those unable to attend. They, along with the officers and members cordially invite you to be present at the annual meeting next year and solicit your good will, interest and cooperation, and suggestions that you might have to its growth and success.

Mrs. Cam. White was a very pleasant caller at the Recorder office Monday. Upon inquiry of her son Herold, she informed us that he left Saturday afternoon for Annapolis to take the entrance physical examination. His attendance at the University Engineering College for two years makes him eligible without any other examination, except the physical. The Recorder wishes him the greatest success.

HEAVY RAINS ENDS DROUTH

DAMAGING WIND ACCOMPANY HEAVY . RAIN FALL EARLY SUNDAY MORNING—L A T E CROPS WILL BE ABUNDANT.

Early Sunday morning the longest and most severe drouth ever visited upon our county was broken in most every locality. Yet this feast for the not-too-greatly-damaged crops there came an ill wind, causing some damage. This consisted mostly in up-rooting, breaking, twisting trees. It was reported that slight damage was caused to barn and house roofs in various parts of the County.

Those who suffered slight damages were glad to take their loss, that the County's crops might be saved from perishing. A few more weeks of the hot, dry, windy weather would have completely laid to waste 75 per cent of the crops. As things presently look and from reports from the farmers throughout the County, late crops are going to be abundant.

Editorial of the Week

FEED PRICES

A greater portion of the hay crops failed to mature this year due to lack of early spring and summer rains. Such a shortage has not been known in our County for many years. This was not only true in our County, but in many of the surrounding ones and in other parts of te State. This condition has caused many of the farmers, with a large number of stock to feed, to become rather panicky. They immediately started buying their hay and making plans to buy, at enormously high prices, thinking that before the winter months had passed that the prices would go sky high.

As every farmer well knows, there are always gullible persons to take advantage of and gain from every situation, whether it be from the farmer, merchant or whom. And it has been said of some speculators that they are more unscruplous than any of these types. With this in mind, and a bit of logic, it is the opinion of many that feed prices are not going to be nearly so high as the "speculators" would have you believe.

In many parts of the country there are good feed crops. The feed is readily marketable from these areas, and hauling has now become only one of the lesser evils in the buying of your feed. Many of the farmers have their barns left partly filled, with several stacks left untouched. The early and late legume crops will furnish quite a large supply. Even though a smaller amount of this than usual, it will go much farther than the average hay you buy, due to the heavy quantities of protein and fat contained in it.

The very recent rains will greatly increase the corn crop over what it was first thought to yield. Farmers who thought they would get only a half crop, now find that they will get as much as from three-fourths to seven-eights. That which would not have even produced a good stalk of fodder will at least now grow a small ear of corn.

So with this corn crop, which will naturally bring with it lots of roughage, and the late roughage crops such as millet, rape and the legume crops, the farmers should not be induced to buy large quantities of feed at excessively high prices. It would be very difficult indeed for them to go any higher, so you will have the use of your money until you need the feed later in the winter months, in the event you do have to buy a small quantity.

No single utterance of Gov. Alf M. Landon in his acceptance speech was so prominently displayed in the ultra-conservative press of the nation as his near-bold assertion that President Roosevelt has been "fumbling with recovery." Editorially they proclaimed it a classic.

Then, almost immediately they were confronted with a "contra-seasonal" report from the Chamber of Commerce of the United States. And they put it inside, not always next to pure reading matter. In some of the great journals of reaction, the piece was whittled down to a few paltry paragraphs. Some left it out entirely, thus upholding the freedom of the press.

But the report was interesting, especially when laid alongside the prime utterance of the Republican nominee. It said:

"The course of events carried employment in manufacturing establishments in June, 1936, to a point higher than at any time since October, 1930.

"If the second half of the present year has usual relations to the first half, employment in manufacturing will be back to the level of the Spring of 1930.

"Manufacturing has not been alone in going forward. In the first six months of 1936, construction would seem to have aggregated in value at least 76 per cent more, for the country as a whole, than in the corresponding part of 1935. The figures published by the building trades unions show that more of their members ar now employed than in the Spring of 1930.

"The course of 1936 may show this as the best year in physical volue of business since 1929."

The only figure mentioned was the "at least 76 per cent" improvement in construction over the first six months of 1935. According to the Chamber's previous figures, that makes the gain in construction contracts actualy carried out since 1933, total 242 per cent. The Roosevelt recovery, it will be noted, as for example the gain of 1,297 per cent in net earnings of industrial corporations in three years, is cumulative.

Now while Gov. Landon's speech warned that President Roosevelt is infringing upon the freedom of citizens, his more loquatious running mate worked himself into a frenby on this point. As the publisher of newspapers in Chicago and New England and perhaps having in mind his experiences as general manager of the great Hearst chain of papers in maintaining freedom of expression, the colonel was more emphatic on the subject to which the du Pont Liberty League is dedicated.

But the day after Col. Knox had burst our ear drums, the civil liberties committee of the American Bar Association completed its two-year study and made public its report to the convention in Boston. Concerning "Constitutional guarantees of freedom of speech, of the press, of assembly and of petition," the report used these words:

"The careless assertion that the policies and practices of the present national Administration either challenge or infringe these political rights of the citizens has no justification."

Nor is that all of the blunt reproaches that have been heaped upon the Governor, the Colonel and Chairman Hamilton, even if unwittingly, from high sources that could not be called pro-New Deal. After both acceptances were recorded, we find the magazine Banking, which is issued by The American Bankers Association saying in its current issued the following:

"Business activity continues to expand with little regard for the traditional uncertainties of an election year. The quadrennial period of campaigning finds the country assured that defeatism has itself defeated and determined that the fruits of this major victor shall be held * * * It would appear that fundamentally more important at this juncture is the FACT of the recovery."

And this in spite of the speech Gov. Landon made to the American Bankers Association in September, 1933, against the Roosevelt policy of insuring bank deposits.

DROUTH MAY CHECK POULTRY INCREASE

Because of the drouth, the expected increase in poultry production may not materialize, according to the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky. Prospects of higher priced feeds are causing increased marketings of pullets intended for layers, and hens also. Eggs have been exceptionally high eggs and poultry may bring good priced for the season, and both prices through the later summer, fall and winter, according to present prospects.

Hatcheries in Graves county were unable to supply the demand for baby chicks.

Lesson for August 23

THE GOSPEL FOR ALL MEN

LESSON TEXT—Acts 11:5-17; Romans 1:15-17.

GOLDEN TEXT—For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life. John 3:16.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Peter Learns a Lesson.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Peter Makes a Great Discovery.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—First Steps in World Brotherhood.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Universal Brotherhood in Christ.

Christianity early found its progress impeded by a difference of opinion. Such a difference when met in a Christian spirit will not be a stone of offense, but when properly and tactfully settled may be a stepping stone to progress.

Jewish Christians at Jerusalem were disturbed by the report that Peter had received the gentile Cornelius as a Christian brother without requiring him to fulfill the Jewish law of circumcision.

Peter defended his action not by asserting his position or appealing to his apostolic authority, but by relating what God had done. Henry Drummond once said, "The best argument for Christianity is a Christian." The best proof that God has actually been at work is to present the unanswerable evidence of a redeemed soul. In thus making his plea Peter reveals that

I. He Had a Vision of God's Purpose (vv. 5-10).

God had spoken to him. When we meet a man who is in touch with God, we should at once give heed. He may be, and perhaps should be, the minister or a Christian leader, but he may be and frequently is some humble, unknown servant of God. But if God has spoken to him we will do well to listen. Peter had learned the great lesson that what God had cleansed man should receive as clean.

II. He Had Seen God Work (vv. 11-15).

The Holy Spirit had fallen on the gentiles and they actually had been saved. Is it not singular that in the early church they could hardly believe that a gentile could be saved? Now we are astonished if a Jew is saved! Why will we in our unbelief limit the Holy One of Israel?

The all-powerful gospel of the grace of God is still saving men and women, Jews and gentiles, from their sins. Have you seen it happen? It is a great inspiration to faith and service. God is ready so to encourage us—he is the same today as he was when he sent Peter to Cornelius. Are we willing to run his errands, proclaim his message?

III. He Had Received a Fresh Insight Into God's Word (v. 16).

The best way to learn the meaning of God's Word is to use it, live it, obey it. "If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God" (John 7:17).

Peter had learned anew that God's Word meant just what it said. We who are his servants should believe his Word and act on it in faith.

IV. He Knew Better Than to Withstand God (v. 17).

When God has not raised any barriers of race, creed, color, class, or social position, it is not for his followers, and assuredly not for his servants, to build "fences" which he would not authorize or countenance.

One of the needs of our day is that those doing God's work should not withstand him and his will. He who is the same yesterday, today, and forever is ready to work as powerfully today as he did in the days of Finney and Moody, and in the days of Abraham, Moses, Daniel, and of Peter. Let us give him liberty to work in and through us, not as we may wish, but as he desires. Who are we that we should withstand God?

V. In Conclusion (Romans 1:15-17).

This portion presents a magnificent declaration from Peter's coworker, Paul, the apostle to the gentiles, that the gospel is the power of God unto salvation for everyone that believes, Jew or Greek. Regardless of race or condition, we are all unrighteous, and there is but one way of salvation—through faith in Jesus Christ. It is our responsibility and privilege to make this message known to all men everywhere. Your neighbor and mine, whether in the next house or on the other side of the world, is our opportunity. Not one is unclean or untouchable, although he may be stained with the dark pollution of sin. God is ready and willing to save. Let us tell men the good news!

Kindness

I shall pass through this world but once; any good thing, therefore, that I can do, or any kindness that I can show to any human creature, let me do it now; let me not defer it, or neglect it, for I shall not pass this way again.—S. Grellet.

Pack Up Your Troubles

I make the most of my enjoyments. As for my troubles, I pack them in as little compass as I can for myself, and never let them annoy others.—Robert Southey.

FIREWORKS AT CONEY

The pomp and splendor of the Orient will be depicted in the brilliant fireworks spectacle, "India," or "A Night in the Orient," which will be presented as a free attraction at Coney Island, Cincinnati, "America's finest amusement park" every night, including Saturdays and Sundays, from August 28 to September 6, inclusive.

Coney Island is this season celebrating its fiftieth anniversary, and "India" is its golden jubilee treat to its patrons. A special feature will be "Golden Wedding Night," Tuesday September 1st. All couples who were married in 1886, the year Coney opened, are this year celebrating their golden wedding anniversaries, are invited to be guests of the management. They are asked to send their names, addresses, and dates of their marriage to Judge Otis R. Hess, Court House, Cincinnait, in order that admission tickets and reserved seats may be sent them. Judge Hess is chairman of the committee in charge of "Golden Wedding Night."

"India" is a brilliantly spectacular pageant, featuring a cost of 500 people, and in addition, elephants, horses and other animal actors. Before a background which represents the ancient city of Delhi, with its composite Hindu, Mohammedan and modern architecture, will be re-enacted the Durbar of Delhi, a religious pageant in which natives and officials of all India take part.

During the action of the drama, heralds are seen to traverse the city sounding the announcement that the festival is about to begingin. Elephants bearing the Royal Princess of Indiana and her retinue, costumed in the Oriental splendor that is India's, arrive and the pageant is on. Throngs of natives, the Viceroy, representatives of the King, British soldiers and officials, priests and merchants all take part in the review. Flashy uniforms of the English regiments form a striking contrast to the bright-hued turbans and vari-colored cloaks of the natives, who are seen carrying fantastic banners which represent their provinces. Conveyances peculiar to India pass along, bearing fruits of the fields. Before the Princess and the English officials, performers from their feats of skill.

As the masses depart for their homes, the sound of mutiny rises, and the subsequent battle between the natives and the British soldiers sees the entire city set on fire, amid the roar of artillery and the destruction of buildings.

It is one of the most colorful, most spectacular and most thrilling of these annual fireworks spectacles ever staged at Coney. C. H. Duffield and Ray W. Anderson, of the Thearle-Duffield Fireworks Productions, will be in charge.

Coney Island, in addition, will offer its usual galaxy of attractions, including the river ride on the steamer, Island Queen; swimming, dancing in Moonlite Gardens, and the many rides and fun devices.

STATE FAIR CATALOG PLACED IN MAIL

First copies of the 1936 Kentucky State Fair catalog have just been placed in the mail,, according to an announcement by L. B. Shropshire, Secretary of the Fair. Advance entires and requests for premium lists indicate thtat every department as well as the famous $10,000 saddle horse stakes will attract the largest number of competitors in many years. A copy of the 1936 Fair catalog is on file at the office of this newspaper for the public's inspection. If you desire an individual copy, address the Kentucky State Fair, room 1100 Republic Building, Louisville.

Every indication is that the 34th renewal of the State Fair will be the most succesful since 1930. Kentucky manufacturers and merchants are planinng many interesting exhibits in the beautiful and spacious $300,000 industrial building. Widespread interest is reported in the live stock department and other farm exhibits, and greatly increased participation in these activities is predicted. Officials recently anounced that the '36 Fair midway would be more varied and entertaining than any in recent years.

Gate admissions have been reduced to 25c; while season tickets cost only $1.00. This is another forward step taken by the Fair to insure a larger attendance and make the Fair bigger and better than ever. Redecorated buildings and beautifully improved grounds will greet the visitors and many new and novel contests and special attractions are planned.

Remember "It's Kentucky's Show —Let's All Go!"

Plans of the Kenton County Young Men's Democratic Club to sponsor a Fifth District convention of young Democrats in Covington, September 19, took definite form Thursday night when Edward Nie was named Chairman of a Committee on Arrangements. George Bitters and Edward Niewahner are to serve with Nie on the committee.

Appointment of Nie was made at a meeting of Directors of the club Thursday night at 908 Madison Avenue, Covington. In addition to appointing the Arrangements Committee, Richard Kenkel, President of the club, named Walter Merland to contact officials of other Young Men's Democratic Clubs in the fifth District in planning for the convention.

Nie and members of his committee are to begin their work of arranging for the convention at once. Nie requested last night that anyone having suggestion for the convention call him at HEmlock 3065.

Drainage plans have been made for several fertile areas of bottom land in Estill county.

WALTON METHODIST CHURCH NEARS GOAL IN SUBSCRIPTIONS

The Walton Methodist Church only lacks $248.00 in subscriptions of having its remaining present indebtedness of I$1,556.00 well underwritten. Within the last week the indebtedness on the church building has been reduced by $515.-37, or from 2,071.37 to $1,556.00. Approximately $700.00 has been paid on this debt during the present conference year which ends September 1st, besides interest.

In addition to the foregoing achievements the church has been well repaired, furnished beautifully decorated within, and a Hammond Organ installed. The remaining indebtedness, of $247.00, which is not underwritten by good subscriptions, is expected to be subscribed very soon. It is believed confidently that the entire indebtedness will be wiped out within a few months.

ACP SURVEYS STARTED

Boone County ACP farm supervisors began the past week making a survey of performance on 1065 farms on which work shets have been filed, according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent.

Work did not progress as rapidly as expected the first week due to the program being new to the supervisor. Farmers are rendering splendid cooperation and the checking of the entire county is expected to be completed in about five weeks.

Farmers will greatly assist the supervisor if they will draw a rough map sketch of their farm, marking off the fields, listing the number of acres in each field and the crop in that field this year. The cooperation of the farmers will lower the cost to farmers and increase the net benefit payments.

SHOE MERCHANT MAKES FORTUNATE PURCHASES

Mr. Rose plans to give Recorder readers some very interesting details, next week, pertaining to the fall opening of the Quality Sample Shoe Shop. In the meantime, patrons may avail themselves of the store's special lay-away plan.

Adjournment came late Thursday, after a continuance of the above case, and the attendance by the court to other lesser business.

BOONE COUNTY RECEIVES ITS SHARE FOR SOCIAL SECURITY APPROPRIATION

The aged persons may at last look a bit more joyful toward the future, for Boone County has received its proportionate share from the Social Security Appropriation, provided by State and Federal funds for the aged ind infirm.

Two persons in Boone County have received their checks, they were Mr. W. S. Acra, of Burlington, he received $11.00 and the amount received by Mr. W. W. Dameron, of Beaver, was $7.50.

Mr. Evan Hance, of Walton, the County Old Age Pension Administrator, announces that there have been 172 applications to date. He expects something like 200 before they have all applied.

The other checks to be received by eligible applicants in Boone County are exepcted in the near future, he says.

THEY'RE NEVER TOO OLD

They never get too old to marry in Boone. Co. Clerk Dewey Benson could hardly be convinced, that Brack Boyes (colored) 85 years old, of Richwood, and Rosie Williams, from the same place wanted a marriage license. From force of habit, Dewey asked them if they were old enough. Without affidavits as to their age, the license was issued.

GAS LINE TO BE LAID SOON

FROM LIMABURG TO FLORENCE—BOONE COUNTY MAY BECOME IMPORTANT GAS PRODUCING SECTION.

Most recent gas developments, makes more clearly, a reality of the early prediction, that Boone County may become one of the important gas producing counties in the State.

In the last few days, in the Limaburg vicinity, two fast producing wells have been struck, and at no great depths, on the Rouse farm at 369 ft, and on the Pettit farm at a depth of 350 feet. Immediately after capping of these two wells, the machinery was moved to the Hubert Conner farm near Hebron, for drilling purposes.

On the Ross Russ farm, close to Limaburg, they still continue to drill for oil, after having spent several days over-hauling machinery. Already they have drilled 1,000 ft. Mr. McCury, in charge of the drilling, reports that negotiations are well under way for the laying of 6-inch pipe line from Limaburg to Florence. Besides that of agriculture, it looks very favorable, that Boone County will have another paying industry. The landowners are cooperating beautifully. More evidence of Boone County's fine citizenry.

CORN FODDER WILL HAVE EXTRA FEED VALUE

It is pointed out by the University of Kentucky Experiment Station, that corn fodder will have extra feeding value this year, due to the fact that strength that ordinarily goes into the ear, will remain in the stalk, leaves and blades. The College estimates that, where corn is shucked standing in the field, and the field then pastured, that 50 per cent of the value of the fodder is lost. They may find it advantageous to sell grain and hay, because of the fairly good prices, and save for their own feed, corn fodder and cheaper hays. In some instances where crops are fairly good, more livestock may be purchased for carrying through the winter. Indications point to good livestock prices another year.

PULVERIZER BEGINS WORK

CRUSHING LIMESTONE UNDER PLANS OF BOONE COUNTY SOIL IMPROVEMENT ASSOCIATION.

The crushing of agricultural limestone under plans of the Boone County Soil Improvement Association was scheduled to begin work this week, according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent.

R. M. Auton, pulverizer operator, will begin work at the farm of O. E. Senour of the Frogtown Road, proceed on a route to Walton, Verna, Beaver, Hamilton, Burlington, Firence, Hebron. Mr. Auton is an efficient operator and should average around 50 tons of stone per day. The cost of pulverizing will be 70c per ton with the operator furnishing all labor after the stone are piled.

The ACP program will pay farmers $1.40 per ton on the soil building allowance on agricultural limestone applied before October 31st when applied at the rate of at least ½ ton and up to two tons per acre. While more stone may be applied per acre, two tons per acre is the mamium rate for payment.

The ACP farm program is offering farmers a wonderful opportunity in the use of agricultural limestone for pasture and hay improvement. The Soil Improvement Association is offering to every farmer the cheapest price for pulverizing ever available to Boone County farmers. More than 100 farmers have already taken advantage of this opportunity. All who are interested and have not listed their names in the last six weeks should notify the County Agent's office in Burlington immediately. Many farmers will actually be paid a profit in benefit payments by using limestone before October 31st.

LICENSE LAW TO BE ENFORCED

ACCORDING TO LETTER RECEIVED BY A. D. YELTON, CIRCUIT COURT CLERK. POLICE TO VISIT EACH COUNTY.

In a letter received Monday by Circuit Court Clerk, A. D. Yelton, from the Department of Revenue, Division of Motor vehicles, they anounce that beginning Sept. 1, the State Highway patrol, plans to conduct an intensive survey for the enforcement of the Uniform Operator's License Act.

The police will visit each County for a number of days and will cite motorists who have failed to purchase their license. The motorists will be given arrest slips, and will be allowed ten days in which to obtain their licenses. If they do not obtain licenses within that time they will be prosecuted.

Mr. Yelton reports that there are approximately 675 people in the County who have not yet obtained their operator's license.

Because of the peculiar construction that different ones have placed upon the law in regard to the licenses, the following quotation comes from a ruling of the Department: "Pursant to the provisions of the Uniform Operator's License Act, it is a ruling of the Department of Revenue that a person having a driver's license is not required to have the operator's license prescribed in the Uniform Operator's License Act in order to operate, as a part of his employment, a truck or any other motor vehicle owned by his employer. However, when such person operates a motor vehicle in connection with his own personal affairs and not for hire, it is not necessary for him to have an operator's license."

There has also been a misconception as to the age requirements under the law. Under the new law no person under the age of sixteen years of age can obtain an operator's license, and between the ages of 16 and 18, the father must sign the application. Parents should guard against their children under the age of 16, operating a motor vehicle.

The open season on doves will be September first to November fifteenth, instead of September 21st to December 15th as last year.

Editorial of the Week

THE NUSJ

Each presidential campaign for many decades has brought with it the development of another political party. And with its development there comes always a certain following. These are the people who are always prone to follow anything except that which is normal and expedient and have never nor will they ever, assisted to any great extent, toward the betterment of our society. And well for our recognized parties, that these followers have accepted their present faith and choice, for their aid would be a dire responsibility to us. So should our parties be grateful, that those leaders have chosen other fields, for the trend of their mind is always destructive rather than constructive.

With the development of the 1936 campaign, we find the evolution of this party. This time it is most unusual, in that it is made up of the most peculiarly typed individuals. We find them confederates for many reasons. They give the most fallicious reasons for having accepted such a faith. They have accepted such irrational leadership. The sky is the limit to which they will go, in that they might succeed in carrying out their meaningless objective. Long ago, have they forgotten and abandoned all their sense of justice. No longer are just parts of our socialistic system wrong, but they seriously contend that it is all bad, and that he that is at the head of it is a "liar," and that he cares not one iota for human. It is often remarked that, "What is more unkind than man's ingratitude." How applicable there. They claim that Mr. Roosevelt is radical, but yet they advoate nothing except an absolute dictatorship.

With the propaganda machine of National Union for Social Justice going at full speed and with Coughlin, Smith, Lemke and Townsends speaking their absurd, dogmatic and fallicious theories thruout the country, short lived will be their party and of those bitterly opposed to sane and just government. Never in the history of our country have the people made such a choice, and we can rest assured that they will continue as in the past.

Many of our people listen and talk such nonsense only for the purpose of entertainment, because occassionally life is dull, but they do not discuss for the purpose of discerning between right and wrong, for well do they know that. They are all too conscious, that it isn't under the leadership of a Lemkeite, Coughlinite, Townsendite, or a party going under the assumed name of the National Union for Social Justice, that sound, economical government can be assured.

When the opportunity presents itself and the occasion necessitates, every person who so desires is justified in publically denouncing the advocacy of their theories. So we shall not totally ignore them, but we can dismiss from our minds any real fear of trouble form their camp this fall.

William Lightfoot of Ripley, Tenn., walked 2,500 miles in a campaign for election as county clerk, but lost to a one-legged opponent who campaigned from an automobile. There are several morals to be gleaned thereform, but one that we see so manifest, is, don't run for political office, you can't win anyway.

—o—

A dentist in Lima, O., who operated a moving picture while treating his patients, claims to do it for the purpose of distracting their minds, but we think it is for the purpose of bolstering business, and what he really meant, was to distract from their jeans, (pockets)

OIL POSSIBILITIES

Due to the possibilities of Boone County becoming an oil center and its people becoming rather oil conscious, it will be interesting to note what would happen should some strange blight suddenly obliterate all petroleum products in America.

26,000,000 automobiles would immediately be stalled along every street and highway in the country; airplanes would be grounded; thousands of vessels would lie motionless in their moorings; lights would blink out in nearly every home, farm and factory in the nation; elevators would be stationary, and the great skyscrapers of the nation practically useless; road building would be halted; many medicines would be wiped out of existence, the never-ending battle against disease would be dangerously hampered; appliances for home convenience would be unusable; wheels of nearly every description would stop turning and industries of all kinds would be paralyzed; farm work would revert to the drudgery of former generations; millions of homes and other buildings would be without the means of warmth; cities would no longer receive the steady flow of fresh fruits and vegetables which so are so essential to health through long winter months; an estimable number of men and women would be thrown out of work; more than one billion dollars a year would be lost to the nation in direct takes alone, plus $876,000,000 spent by the petroleum industry for supplies, $200,000,000 given farmers and other land owners for drilling privileges and $1.216,764,000 paid out in wages.

GOOD ADVICE

"Once I asked a very rich man, who invested in things concerning which he had no knowledge, how he avoided losing his money. 'Well,' he said, 'when a man brings a proposition to me that looks good, I don't spend a minute looking at the good side of it. I do my best to find something wrong with it. If I can't, I call in my people and they try as hard as they can to find weak spots. If they fail, I turn the matter over to an expert in that line in whom, I have confidence. If his report is good I put some money into it."

"It is a great pity that politicians, when they reach position of any importance, don't submit their advice to such a grilling. As long as they are struggling to reach their ambitions, they (the smartest of them, at least) cultivate an abnormal insensitiveness to public opinion. They can hear a voter spit on a blade of grass. But the moment they obtain important offices, or 'become powers behind the throne,' they fall into the hands of 'yes men,' who either want something for themselves or have schemes of their own to work."

This is a part of an editorial which appeared in the Aug. 13 issue of the Woodford County Sun, published at Versailles, Ky. The Falmouth Outlook also commented upon it editorially. This a most timely article, and containes much horse sense, that can be of inestimable value to every one, particularly now, when so many questionable theories and investments are laid before them.

The frindly hand of Uncle Sam was stretched out last week to rescue thousands of bank depositors from the effects of two bank failures, one in the little town of East Hampton, Connectitcut, and the other in Newark, N. J. Had it not been for the protection afforded by the Roosevelt Administration, tthrough passage of the bill providing insurance for bank deposits up to $5000.00, every one of these depositors would have watched his life savings disappear when the banks went to the wall. Instead, they were paid off at the rate of 100 cents on the dollar within two weeks after the bank's door were closed. If this were the only accomplishment of the Roosevelt Administration, it would be sufficient to constitute a valid claim upon the nation's gratitude.

When the average middle-aged man can't protect himself against the evils of the world, we would suggest to William Everett, of Omaha, Neb., 112 years old, who is looking for a wife, that he, at the same time, advertise for a bouncer to protect him.

—o—

Six brothters-in-law of Philadelphia who married the six Carson sisters have formed the Brothers-in-law Association and meet every Friday night to discuss methods of getting along with their wives. We commend them for wanting pleasant homes, but we suggest something even more feasible, that of forming a Future Brothers-in-Law Association, and meet every day until some method is suggested by which the Dionne quins can be married and sell stock in the association.

Lesson for August 30

BEGINNING OF WORLD MISSIONS

LESSON TEXT—Acts 11:19-26, 13:1-12.

GOLDEN TEXT—And he said unto them, Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. Mark 16:15.

PRIMARY TOPIC—On a Journey for Jesus.

JUNIOR TOPIC—The Gospel Starts Around the World.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—New Adventures With Christ.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Holy Spirit in Missions.

The normal expression of salvation in the life of a believer is a passion for the conversion of others. The early church soon began to fulfill the great commission of its Lord and Master. Its first missionary enterprise was in the great and wicked city of Antioch, only 150 miles from Jerusalem, but far from God. In this unpromising soil we find growing:

I. A Model Mission Church (vv. 19-21).

Its establishment was in accord with the plan of God, for it was:

1. The result of a faithful testimony (vv. 19, 20).

Those who were scattered abroad by persecution had but one crowning purpose—"preaching the Lord Jesus."

2. A gathering place for all God's people (vv. 19, 20). The truth was preached to both Jews and Gentiles.

3. A living witness in a wicked city (v. 21).

"The hand of the Lord was with them." Little wonder then that "a great number believed and turned unto the Lord." Note in verse 26 that it was in Antioch that the followers of Christ were first called by the beautiful name "Christians." In the midst of the most evil and degraded surroundings the sweet flower of Christian faith may grow.

II. The Model Mission Church Becomes a Model Missionary Church (13.1-12).

We have here the first step in the world-wide missionary movement which continues to our day and which has influenced the destinies of men and shaped the course of world history.

This first missionary enterprise presents the essential principles and methods which are vital to true missionary work, even in our day. To begin with, there must be a proper base of operation, namely:

1. The home church (vv. 1-3).

God calls his messengers right out of the church membership. On the Sunday that this lesson is taught missionary leaders of the next generation will be in the classes of some crossroads Sunday school. How important it will be that the teacher present the truth of God's Word plainly and faithfully.

Notice that this church was spiritually alive. It was a church that prayed, fasted, and ministered the Word of God. It was responsive to the guidance of the Holy Spirit.

Next we have indicated the type of men called to be:

2. The missionaries (vv. 2-4).

a. The strongest men in the church (v. 2).

When you want something done, ask a busy man to do it. God's missionary program calls for the best the church can give, not misfits or failures.

b. Spirit-led men (vv. 3, 4).

God chooses and sends men into service. He separates and places them.

3. Missionary experiences (vv. 5-12).

a. Minister to all people (vv. 5-7). Paphos was a Greek city of high culture and low morals. It was ruled by Sergius Paulus, a Roman officer of noble character. With him was Barjesus also called Elymas, a wicked Jew. The missionary messenger rejoices in the opportunity to preach to Greek, Roman, and Jew.

b. Meet satanic opposition (vv. 8-10).

The devil has his servants who live only to oppose the gospel. Notice that even as God has children so also there are children "of the devil" (v. 10). We choose our spiritual family connections.

c. Proclaim judgment on sin (v. 11).

This is not an easy thing to do but is required of one who is "filled with the Holy Spirit."

d. Lead men to Christ (v. 12).

In this case it was the result of fear, which is a powerful factor in the conversion of some men.

The Master's commission, "go ye into all the world and preach the gospel," has never been altered, modified, or abrogated. It is still the great "unfinished business" of the church.

Learning From Suffering

I have learned more of God, and of myself, by one week's suffering than by all the prosperity of a long lifetime.—Bishop Hall.

More Work, Not Less

"We get out of our troubles only by working harder, not by working less."—Roger W. Babson.

Possessions

To know how to dispense with things is to possess them.—Regnard.

RECORDS SHOW PROFITABLE INCOME

Complete farm account records were kept in 1935 on thirty suburban dairy farms and forty-one general type of livestock farms in Boone, Kenton and Campbell Counties. These records by R. E. Proctor, field agent in Farm management were analyzed by David Colville, Assistant County Agent, showing that the average farm made a net labor income of $951.00 and $1415.00 respectively. These records show the most profitable farming conditions since 1929. The following report shows a more detailed analysis.

Dairy production was the most important source of income in 1935 for farmers in Boone, Kenton and Campbell counties. On thirty representative farms dairy cattle provided more income than the combined sales of all crops and the net income for all poultry. On these thirty farms 253 cows provided an income of $26,067.00. The sale of all vegetables amounted to approximately $200.00 per farm and the sale of all fruits, including berries was about $170.00 per farm, while the average sale of tobacco was only $130.00 per farm.

Important factors of organization and management leading to higher net earnings are as follows: 1. Higher production per cow. 2. Higher production per hen. 3. More poultry per farm. 4. More dairy cattle per farm. 5. Higher crop yield per acre. 6. Higher per cent of land in truck crops and fruits. 7. Higher receipts per $1.00 spent.

To successfully operate hill farms it is very important to have a crop rotation which provides a sod crop on the land a large part of the time. Most pastures would be materially helped by the use of limestone, phosphate and a good pasture seeding mixture. Dairying is well suited to these farms where cheap feed in the form of hay and pasture is abundant. Hay and pasture must be produced in the cropping rotation if soil fertility is to be maintained. Dairy cattle have a comparative advantage over other roughage consuming livestock due to the nearness to market. Beef and lamb can be produced farther from market than whole milk. Tobacco, dairy cattle, sheep and hogs were the most important sources of income on the Northern outlying bluegrass farms. Tobacco provided $654.00 per farm in an average of $242.00 per acre in tobacco. Dairy cattle provided $530.00 income per farm or $87.00 per cow.

A few of the important factors of organization and management which made higher earnings possible are as follows:

1. Higher receipts for $1 expense.
2. Higher receipts per sow.
3. Higher yield of crops per acre.
4. Higher percent of land in tobacco.
5. Higher quality of tobacco.
6. Higher receipts per dairy cow.
7. Size of farm larger than average.
8. More livestock per 100 acres.

It has been very profitable farm management over a period of years to maintain soil fertility and control erosion. The most successful farmers have been following a crop rotation that includes a winter cover crop on cultivated land. Pasture ocupies the land a large part of the rotation. The steep land is left in permanent pasture or plowed only occasionally to help control pasture filth and renew the seeding of grass and clovers. By caring for the land in this way and by following good seeding practices the improved pasture is very effective in lowering the cost of livestock production.

Many factors in management should be kept in mind: 1 Crop yields should be increased by improving the fertility of the land through more legume pasture, longer rotations, more cover crops and the use of limestone and phosphate where it is needed. 2. Higher quality of burley tobacco is needed. Select well adapted land and use better methods of handling in the field and in the barn. 3. Hay and pasture are most economical feeds. An abundant supply should be provided. A higher dairy production should be provided thru more legume hay and pasture and well selected cows. 5. More grazing livestock should be kept. 6. Earlier lambs usually pay better.

WELL YES, IT'S SINGULAR

"The budget law passed under the administration of Harry Woodring made it illegal for any subsequent Kansas Gov. to unbalance the budget. It is singular that this law, put on the statute books by a Democratic governor, later became the sole recommendation for his successor's nomination for the Presidency on any kind of ticket." —Holden (Kansas Signal (Dem).

In a one-room shack in the mountains near Tucson, Ariz., with a dog for a companion, and dressed in denim and deer skins, lives Johanna Smith, who as, Lita Love, was the toast of Broadway 40 years ago. Wonder if she doesn't blush to think of Sally Rand, who also wears a deer skin and whose sole companion is her fan?

DEMOCRATS PLAN RALLY

FOR LATTER PART OF SEPTEMBER—TO BE FASHIONED AFTER RALLIES OF LONG, LONG AGO.

Plans for a Democratic Rally fashioned after those held by the Boone County Democrats of the long, long ago, are now in the making for the latter part of September at the Harvest Home grounds. Everything that it took in the past to make one a success, such as bargoo, high strains of beautiful oratory, brass bands and the hearty political handclasp, all will be present to make it one great day of laughter and festivity for many Democrats of the Fifth Congressional District.

Senator M. M. Logan has promised to be present for the occasion. Gov. A. B. Chandler will be extended an invitation and there are possibilities of his being present. Congress Brent Spence will also be among the notables to attend. Many other prominent persons throughout the Fifth District, who have been prominent in the political arena, have expressed their anxious desire to be present.

The rally is not being held under the auspicies of any partcular organization, announced Walter Ferguson. It is for every person, both young and old who resire to come and spend an entire day of thorough entertainment.

HOMEMAKERS ENJOY DAY

Those congenial Homemakers of Burlington enjoyed a full day of entertainment last Friday in the Smith woods, with a group of 48 present.

A large portion of the day was taken up with games and other means of amusement. And election of officers was also held and Mrs. Catherine Easton was chosen to succeed herself as president. Other officers elected were: Mrs. R. C. Garrison, vice-president; Mrs. Howard Ryle, Sec'y and Treas. Mrs. Catherine Brown was chosen as program conductor and Mrs. Catherine Cropper and Mrs. Helen Clore as project leaders, with Mrs. Kirtley Cropper assisting.

Miss Gillaspie, organizer, of the Homemakers Clubs announces the formation of the 10th club in the County, at Constance. Mrs. Frank Fischer was elected president. She also anonunces that there will be an Advisory Council meeting of the Homemakers at the court house Tuesday, Sept. 8th. VOTERS URGED TO REGISTER

ONLY SEVENTY-FIVE PER CENT OF VOTERS HAVE REGISTERED, ACCORDING TO C. D. BENSON.

Under the recently enacted registration law, it is necessary that every voter who desires to vote in the regular November election, must register before he can vote. An opportunity was given to the voters of the County to register in the August primary. This was taken advantage of by many, by others it was passed up. But the law still provides for those persons to register between the dates of August 15 and up to October 10, including that date.

County Clerk, Dewey Benson announces from his office that approximately 75 of the 1500 voters to register ,have done so to date. This is a very small number in comparison to the total who have yet to register in that office. No doubt, every one of that number are intending to vote in the November election. This, they will be unable to do, unless they register before or on October 10. Many person may have been under the impression that it would be possible for them to register at the polls on the date of the election. This However, is not true.

This is a law that no member of either party should resent. It was enacted for the purpose of making stronger, and keeping intact each of the two parties. And it is the duty of every public-spirited person to vote. So let every person visit our County Clerk's office and register, if you have not done so to date.

BOONE COUNTY SCHOOLS TO OPEN SETEMBER 14TH

There have been no changes in the text books from those used last year.

HARVEST HOME FAIR SEPT. 12

TO BE LARGEST FAIR IN HISTORY—WILL BE FIFTIETH ANNIVERSARY OF HARVEST HOME.

That annual affair which incites more interest than any other during the whole year, that occassion upon which every community is allowed to come together for one day's festivity is to again become a reality. The Harvesct Home Saturday, September the 12th.

The modest Kentucky cook, of which there are dozens in every community is making ready to display that delicious pastry, the shy country lad, who has spent his leisurely moments in currying his prized Jersey calf, is beginning to sleep restlssly at night for the Big Day of the year is only a short time away.

Plans have been developed to make this the most successful of Boone County's Harvest Homes. This is the fiftieth aninversary and those in charge have tried unsually hard to make for the people that will attend a very happy and enjoyable day.

Generally the largest attraction of the day, the baby show, is again to be one of he features of the day and the same inviting prizes will go to the winners.

This day, affords those who have labored hard during the hot summer months, to come out and enjoy a pleasent day among your long acquaintances. Those who appreciate Boone County hospitality will not miss this greatly anticipated day.

AGRICULTURE ADVANCING

IN BOONE COUNTY. DEPENDS ALMOST ENTIRELY UPON SIENTIFIC FACTUAL FINDINGS.

Agriculture, like many other industries, has advanced to the stage, where its own industry depends almost entirely upon scientific factual findings, that have been compiled and worked out over a period of many years, given to hard work, intelligence and in many instances, dire sacrifice. Great sums of money have been spent in order that the correct course might be pursued. Now, with prices on a par, agriculture can be carried on profitably, by the use of such methods, where formerly it could be done only at a loss.

Many of those formerly failed and refused to accept these scientific theories and truths are now using them and finding them most profitable. For this reason, the Recorder will give to its readers a weekly column, devoted to some timely discussion, along these lines. In order that it may be more clearly understood, it will be in the form of an interview, between H. R. Forkner, county agent, and some prominent farmer in different parts of the county, who is interested to know these facts, that they may be successfully used in carryon his farming program.

This week we have chosen William Hill of the Ildewild neighborhood who has been one of Boone County's most prominent and successful tobacco raisers.

Mr. Hill: I understand that a very extensive program is being carried on in Kentucky, in an attempt to better conditions ,as to the correct methods of curing and housing tobacco. For the past several years I have been having trouble with houseburn and poorly cured tobacco, and this seems to be very prevalent in this locality. Are these methods expedient and available to the people in our county?

Mr. Forkner: Yes.

Mr. Hill: Is this method an expensive one?

Mr. Forkner: No. It is not expensive when the higher quality crop produced is considered.

Mr. Hill: From the amount of houseburned and improperly cured tobacco in Boone County in the past, what percentage of that could be saved, by the use of such a method?

Mr. Forkner: Practically 100 per cent if proper equipment is used.

Mr. Hill: What is considered proper equipment?

Mr. Forkner: A barn in which the ventilation system can be controlled, cheap or homemade coke stoves, a supply of coke (oil coke preferably) and a wet and dry thermometer commonly called a hygrometer.

Mr. Farmer: Why use the coke?

Mr. Forkner: The house burning organism causes no damage until the leaves begin to yellow or die and the weather has been cloudy, rainy and damp for 24 hours or longer. Heat properly used in the barn at this time starts a circulation of air and drives out the exmoisture that allows the house burning to develop and again brings about proper curing conditions.

Mr. Hill: How long do you have to fire with coke under these conditions?

Mr. Forkner: Depending on the weather, usually not more than 24 hours. The weather usually makes a change by that time to properly carry on the curing conditions of tobacco.

Mr. Hill: Briefly what are your recommendations for every tobacco grower interested in preventing house burning and improving the quality of tobacco during the curing process?

Mr. Forkner: Secure a supply of coke, prepare one can for burning coke for each bent of the tobacco barn, secure recmmendations of the College from the County Agent's office and talk with farmers who have had experience in the use of heat in the artificial curing of tobacco. One farmer who has probably had more experience than any other in the county is Emmett Elliott of near Idlewild. His crop last year averaged $32.59 per hundred. This was over seven dollars per hundred more than the average of his neighbors.

Miss Ruth Ligon is spending this week with relatives in Owenton.

RAINS VERY BENEFICIAL

TO LATE CROPS IN ALL SECTIONS OF COUNTY—CROPS HAVE WITHSTOOD DROUTH REMARKABLY.

The most general rain to be received by this county in many months fell last Saturday morning. The lightest part of the rain fell in the northern part of the County, but throughout this section earlier rains prevailed.

The rain, although very late in the season to materially help the growing crops, it is thought by many to be very valuable to late crops. It has been rather unusual for crops to withstand the drouth as they have during this rarely dry season, and the rain coming at the time it did, many crops that would not have matured will now be a salvation to the farmers this winter.

Rains which have fell in this County have come in a mild manner, with no damage attached.

NEW BOAT FOR FERRY

WELL UNDER CONSTRUCTION AND WILL BE IN USE IN NEAR FUTURE—BOAT CONSTRUCTED OF SOLID STEEL

Capt. Henry Kottmyer, owner of the Anderson Ferry, has recently announced that he has already let the contract for the construction of a new ferry boat that will be in use in the near future.

This new boat will be constructed of steel and will of such structure that it will not sink under any conditions. It will be propelled by steam egines, and will at no time be halted or not in operation because of rough water. According to Capt. Kottmyer the only that will stop this new boat will for the Ohio to freeze to the point that it will be unsafe for water transportation.

Capt. Henry Kottmyer and his father have owned the Anderson Ferry since 1864, and have not, in all these years had an accident to occur on the ferry while it was in operation. This is a record that is hard to match as the river is among one of the most dangerous of all places to work. This work is in a class to itself, and only the skilled are able to master it.

This new ferroy boat will mean better and safer transportation for the residents of Boone County, and Capt. Kottmyer is to be complimented for his ability to serve the public.

OUTLOOK BRIGHT FOR BOONE CO.

IN REGARD TO GAS AND OIL PROSPECTS—REPORTS INDICATE IT WILL BE LARGEST FIELD IN STATE.

Speaking now in the realm of realities where formerly it was in glittering generalities and by sheer imagination, that we talked of the gas industry in Boone County. For we have already more productive gas wells in our County than any other in the State of Kentucky. Also according to Mr. McCurdy, not in his experience of drilling, have they drilled the number of times in another county that they have within ours, and struck fewer dry holes. Mr. McCurdy says in the average drilling, there are three dry holes to every gas well struck. Todate, none of that sort have been found in our County, under his supervision.

On the following farms, wells have been drilled and capped and now awaiting pipes to be laid to their opening: F. E. Crigler farm; H. B. Tanner, A. J. Ogden, Rouse sisters, T. G. Reinhardt, James Pettit, Emma Farrell, Sadie Tanner and George Griffith farms.

They are now in the process of drilling on the Hubert Conner farm, J. P. Tanner and the Joel Gray farms. They have gained various depths; on the Gray farm they have reached 128 feet; on the Conner farm 405 feet, and on the Tanner farm approximately 300 ft. These wells are expected to develope at any moment.

Using the old expression, "it never rains but what it pours," may prove to be true with the prospecting industry of gas and oil of Boone Cunty. Having struck a large well of gas on the Emma Farrell farm, near Limaburg, they immediately set in to drill for oil. To date they have gone downward 1020 feet. No oil has yet been found, but Mr. McCurdy has not become discouraged. They plan to go a great deal farther before abandoning their present plans. The richest producing wells in Oklahoma have been found after exceeding 5000 feet.

So many fictional stories have been written of the discovery of oil and gas that the people of our County were very skeptical at the beginning, as to the prospects of Boone County becoming a gas producing locality. Now, after it has been proven that there are great possibilities of this, this skepticism is beginning to wane, and real optimism is taking its place.

Mr. McCurdy, the one who has taken all the responsibility of the prospecting, the one who has shouldered the total expense and responsibility still seems very modest, but underneath we can not help but observe that he sees for this County a much brighter future than that formerly prophesied.

The people of the County have cooperated marvelously with Mr. McCurdy and they are to be commended for doing so, because he has done our County a great service to date, if he should not do another thing. He is asking the people for nothing except their good will and he has been very fortunate in receiving that. By doing so ,we shall make for Boone County that which some of our foresighted predecessors had hoped.

Editorial of the Week

PROSPERITY OF BOONE COUNTY BANKING

Much can be said and many things attributed to the success and soundness of Boone County's banking system. A rather small county in comparison to some, and not a great deal of industry, except that of farming, yet with several banks that are excelled by none in the State.

It cannot be denied that the most important thing, and the thing that has been the most important factor in making them the safest, is the honesty of the officials. The next most important thing, is good sound business sense, of those in charge of the bank's administrative affairs.

There are many other things though which have been influencing factors in holding our banks above ridicule and distrust. The period from 1900 to 1905 saw many banks being organized in Boone County as well as other counties of the State, and in other states. But before there was reason to become alarmed over the situation, those responsible saw the necessity for consolidation, that the County could not financially support that number of banks. As a result, in many of the communities, consolidation did take place, lessoning competition, this making for sound loans and better general banking business as a whole.

In selling the stock of the banks, it never became a necessity for the officers to go outside the county. A great majority of the stockholders are Boone County residents, who do their business here, spend a large portion of their money here, and always deposit their money here. The directors of these banks are stockholders, and local people, who know the business conditions of our County, and who are not possessed with wild-cat stock ideas.

When the crash came in '29 and then later the nearly fatal time of '33, the loans of our banks, due to the sound judgment of the past, could easily have been liquidated, and money could easily have been borrowed on the investments, for they had been safe ones. And as a direct result, not a single one of Boone County's nine banks failed Nor did you ever hear a stir or a grain of uneasiness among our people. This was certainly not true of a great portion of the other counties of the State. We saw in many of them, hundreds of persons losing their life's hard-earned wages. When an elderly couple had totteringly stalked in to one of our banks and left their meager life's saving, it meant something to our bankers. It meant that without them an untold of amount of suffering and anguish.

Now, since the enactment of the Federal Depositor's Insurance Corporation, Boone Cunty's banks have been made absolutely safe against all contigencies. Wise, was such legislation, for it is with the banks that every person, who for convenience and security, must deal. Through membership in the corporation, every one of the bank's depositors are guaranteed in case of failure, that they will be paid 100 cents on the dollar. The bank in order to become a member must pay to he corporation, one twelfth of one percent of their interest, payable annually. It is not compulsory that a bank becomea member, but as you would expect, every bank in Boone County has become a member of that corporation. This, every bank should rightfully do, that it might give to its depositors that which every person expects when he leaves his money for their safekeeping.

Fortunate for our people, that Boone County's banking industry has not fallen into the same catagory as that of retailing and manufacturing and other paying businesses.

As it has been with them, our people thought we were too near an important metropolitan center and it would be impossible to support such industries. This could have been just as true with banking, for it is in Cincinnati, that one of the largest clearing houses in the country is located. There are also large and very substantial banking houses situated there near too, but this has not deterred the people of Boone County from having faith in a system, just as sound and one enabling the people to have the same service that has been provided in Cincinnati.

So long as our banking institutions grow, we can rest assured that those industries of our County that make this possible, are prospering too.

Lesson for September 6

TURNING TO THE GENTILES

LESSON TEXT—Acts 14:8-13, 19, 20; Romans 10:8-15.

GOLDEN TEXT—I have set thee for a light of the Gentiles, that thou shouldest be for salvation unto the uttermost part of the earth. Acts 13:47.

PRIMARY TOPIC—What Happened in Lystra.

JUNIOR TOPIC—When the Gospel Came to Lystra.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Trials and Triumphs of Missionaries.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Christianity Facing Other Religions.

The progress of the first missionary journey into gentile territory had brought Paul and Barnabas from Cyprus to Antioch of Pisidia in Asia Minor, where Paul preached with great power. Persecution by leading Jews then led them to go on to Iconium where they tarried for a long time preaching "the word of grace" in the face of many difficulties. Next they came to Lystra, in which city we consider first the experiences of

I. The Messengers (Acts 14:8-13, 19, 20).

They were immediately faced with the case of a man crippled from birth — outwardly hopeless, but having that inward faith which Paul at once recognized. He speaks, and God works in mighty

1. Power (vv. 8-10).

Faith releases the unlimited power of an infinite God. It did in Lystra almost nineteen hundred years ago. It does today wherever men believe God. The miracle of healing which took place created a sensation which resulted in great

2. Popularity (vv. 11-13).

The heathen people were looking for an incarnation of their gods. The supreme god in their mythology was Jupiter, and his chief attendant was Mercury. In Paul and Barnabas they thought they saw these two gods, and began to give them acclaim and honor.

The flesh loves popularity. Few temptations are so appealing and so treacherous to the Christian worker as a desire for popularity. Paul and Barnabas might have argued that such public esteem would help them in their later proclamation of the gospel. Or they might have fallen into the specious fallacy of those who say that the approach to the heathen is by way of an appreciation of their religions, and by an adaptation of gospel truth to their philosophies.

True servants of God like Paul and Barnabas were not to be misled into either of these pitfalls. They vehemently turn away the false popularity and earnestly urge the people to "turn from these vanities to the living God." Such faithful and self-denying witness to the gospel is greatly needed.

There followed at once a startling change in the attitude of the people. The fanatical Gentiles are joined and stirred up by equally fanatical Jews who had followed the missionaries, and we soon find them meeting

3. Persecution (vv. 19, 20).

Fickle and short-lived is popularity with men. Let us labor to please God rather than men.

Paul was stoned and left for dead. But God had not forgotten him. He never forsakes his own. It is believed by many that even while being stoned and near to death, Paul was having the experience which no other man ever had, and which he describes in II Cor. 12:2-5. Be that as it may, God miraculously brings him to life and full vigor at once, and the messengers go on their way to Derbe. As they continue their ministry we turn aside for a glimpse into one of Paul's epistles to consider

II. The Message (Rom. 10:8-15).

The carrier of a message is important, but of far greater import is the message that he carries. The word which Paul preached, and which you and I must teach and preach if we are faithful to our calling is "the word of faith." It is the glorious good news that "Whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved."

Reader, have you called on his name? Have you admitted your need of salvation, and in your earnest desire to be saved have you abandoned every trust in self-righteousness or self-improvement and believed on him in your heart as your personal Saviour? If not, "Now is the day of salvation." If you have, it is your privilege and your duty to confess him "with the mouth," telling everywhere by faithful life and testimony that Jesus still saves.

The Getting of Wisdom

True wisdom is a thing very extraordinary. Happy are they that have it; and next to them, not those many that think they have it, but those few that are sensible of their own defects and imperfections, and know that they have it not.—Tillotson.

Money and Health

Money is the thing most envied, but the least enjoyed. Health is the thing most enjoyed, but the least envied.—Colton.

Next week the Recorder will present the regular monthly rotogravure magazine feature, our State Farmer Section. Again crowded with pictures and special articles, our section will bring, not only to the farming people of this community, but to all of those concerned with ur basic wealth producing industry, information of vital interest.

What the farmers of Kentucky have determined as the best program for the future development of the farming interest in this State is a subject of an outstanding feature in the September issue of our State Farmer Section. The feature deals not academically but practically with the subject in a way that will permit the individual farmer to adjust his own plans in harmony with the basic State plan. special feature will not stop at the The value and interest of this State line but will be of equal value and interest to farmers in Tennessee and other adjoining states.

A general review of drouth damagfie in Kentucky, and prospects for the immediate future is outlined in another of the leading features in this September issue.

A picture section, the usual column page, the poultry section, are among the outstanding features in the section. Homemakers will find a complete Fall and Winter style review in the section devoted to the interest of our women readers.

In this season of State, sectional and county fairs, the complete listing of fair dates and other information, will prove of interesting value to Kentucky farmers competing in livestock and crops exhibits.

A fair crop of grapes will be the only fruit produced in Lee county this year.

As yet we have no county or state relief to take care of providing clothing for the poor and unfortunate, so let us take care of these children in our midst.

This is an opportunity for you to do some home missionary work.

Also any one having clothing such as overalls, pants, shirts, shoes dresses, underwear or coats, suitable for children between the ages of seven and sixteen, please call me or notify me in some way and I will call for them or if convenient send them to the office of the Supt. of Schools. —Sibbie Reimer

The new piano presented by Rev. and Mrs. Brewer has been quite an aid in these services as well as Miss Pauline Holbrook's services as song leader. The Holbrook sisters have rendered several special selections that have been enjoyed by all.

Rev. Brewr brought to us on Wednesday night, Sept. 2nd, "If Christ Should Come." Thursday, Sept. 3rd will be "Procrastination." Friday. Sept. 4th, "The Judgment I." Saturday, Sept. 5, "The Judgment II." Sunday Sept. 6, "What's the Use?"

On Sept. 6, is the all-day meeting and home coming featuring special music by Mr. Waldo Larkby, of Cincinnati and special song Service. Come bring your friends and lunch and enjoy a good day. Hear the old fashioned gospel preached the old fashioned way.

CARD OF THANKS

We desire to express our heartfelt thanks to our many friends and neighbors for their sympathy and kindness shown us during our recent bereavement. Especially do we thank the donors of the flowers; Chambers and Grubbs for the efficient management of the funeral and Bro. Brewer for his consoling words.

TRAIL OF THE LONESOME PINE

ANSWERS AND QUESTIONS CONCERNING OLD-AGE PENSIONS, ARE GIVEN

Many people have become interested in the Old Age Pension, who have no source from which to receive first hand information, except by writing or by visiting the office in the coutny, which proves to be an inconvenience to the elderly people, and from the Welfare office in Frankfort.

Dr. A. Y. Lloyd, Director of Old Age Assistance in the Department of Welfare, has very capably compiled a series of questions and answers. These will include those problems that have proved in the past to be most doubtful in the minds of those who thought possibly they were entitled to some compensation.

Q. What is old age assistance?

A. It is money given in the form of a monthly check to aged, needy citizen from funds provided by the State and Federal Governments.

Q. Then it is a pension?

A. No. A pension is usually a regular allowance given in consideration of past services. Old Age Assistance payments are not necessarily the same amount each month. As a matter of fact, since they are based on the actual need of the individual, they may vary in amount from month to month or even be discontinued during some months.

Q. How old must I be to receive old age assistance?

A. Sixty-five years of age.

Q. How long must I have lived in Kentucky?

A. Five of the last nine years, and continuously during the twelve months preceding your application.

Q. Must I be a citizen of the United States?

A. Yes.

Q. What do you mean when you say "needy"?

A. If, after counting all income, all help from relatives and friends, an aged person still does not have enough to live "in dency and in health," he is considered needy.

Q. Are there other requirements?

A. A few. The needy person who lives in an institution, public or private, is not eligible because he is already being cared for. (Temporary care in a hospital is not counted as institutional care). If because of physical or mental condition he should be taken care of in an institution he cannot be given old age assistance. He must not give away his income or property just so he will be eligible for old age assistance.

Q. How do I go about getting old-age assistance?

A. First by making an application to the field workers who are now in your county in an office provided by the county judge. Field workers already have hundreds of applications on which they are working. In order to be sure the money goes to those people who need it most and in order to comply with State and Federal regulations, each person who asks for old age assistance must be visited in his home and his application carefully considered.

(Some questions to be answered next week:

How soon can I get old age assistance?

Will I get two checks each month —one from the Federal Government and one from the State?

How much money will I be entitled to?

Must I hire a lawyer or some official to help me make out my application?)

U. OF K. ADVOCATE USE OF TATOO TO THWART CHICKEN THIEVES

In a bulletin received from the University of Kentucky Agricultural Dept., they advocate the use of the tattoo to thwart chicken thieves, livestock and brands for implements. This method of tattooing is said to be highly effective and was recently endorsed at the annual summer meeting of the Kentucky Poultry Improvemnt Association at the Experiment Station in Lexington. We do not doubt the expediency of such a method, as tattooing chickens and branding livestock, but we are glad to be able to make the assertion, that the residents and good citizens of Boone County have not as yet had to resort to such methods. The simple fact being, that theiving has not become so prevalent, that it is necessary. We are not blind to the fact that there are occassionally chickens stolen, but never has it. or any other kind of thieving become a commercial pastime with any of Boone County's citizenry, and for this we commend all that respect the law sufficiently to refrain from such acts and thinks sufficiently of his neighbor and that he will work for his daily bread, instead of stealing from others.

At a dinner Wednesday evening in honor of the graduating class, Hon. Keen Johnson, Lieut. Governor of Kentucky was the principal speaker, and Harry W. Peters, state Supterintendent of Public Instruction greeted the graduating class.

They say each decade brings with it something new, this time it is a Willie Smith, with a middle name, and it is five-eighths.

Mr. Atkins was standing on the pole approximately 25 feet from the ground, when a fellow workman noticed him release his grasp and fall to the ground. He was killed almost instantly. After a coroner's thorough examination, however, his death was pronounced caused from electrocution.

BELLEVIEW TAKES TWO FROM VISITORS

The Belleview nine brought two more victories to their credit over the week-end and Labor Day, by defeating Branche Cafe Sunday, and again defeating the Lawrenceburg boys Monday.

Deck was on the mound for Belleview against Branche Cafe, and pitched a good game. The final score was 7 to 4 in favor of the home boys. Burg was the twirler for the visitors.

Williamson for Belleview and Shinkle for Lawrenceburg were the opposing pitchers in the Labor Day special. Both men gave the fans a very interesting ball game, but the Belleview boys came through with a final victory of 5 to 2.

There has been some good games at the Belleview park this season, and when we think of baseball, we always think of the Belleview boys, as we can always depend on them for a fine team each season. Whether it is natural talent or hard work that makes this possible, at any rate Boone Countians are proud of our Belleview nine, and who knows but what they may develop a "Dizzy" Dean or Carl Hubble right from our own little county of Boone. of which we are all very proud.

ANOTHER GAS WELL REPORTED

WAS BROUGHT IN EARLY WEDNESDAY MORNING BY DRILLERS ON THE FARM OF JOEL GRAY NEAR BURLINGTON.

Another natural gas well was brought in Wednesday by the local drilling crew on the farm of Joel Gray, near Burlington. This brings the total to eleven wells now ready for output.

The well on the Gray farm was brought in at an approximate depth of 400 feet. This is second to the Ogden well in depth, it being brought in at 369 feet. This well is said to be as strong as any struck up to the present time.

Although there has not been any oil struck as yet, the machines are still busy and expect to continue until they have gone all the way through the Trenton, a layer of rock formation that produces oil. The well on the Russ farm is the deepest well at present, being almost 1300 feet below the surface of the ground, but still in the Trenton.

Bids are being let this week to contractors to lay the main gas line from Florence to Limaburg, the work to be started by October 1st. The contract has already been made with the Columbia Gas & Electric Company to take the natural gas produced in this county, the first to be sold October 15th. The contract specifies that the county must produce five million feet of gas daily, and that is why the wells have been centralized in one location up to now so that this demand could be met.

Mr. McCurdy has already announced that he has enough wells at present to meet the five million feet daily, but will continue with present equipment until after October 15th. After that time, according to the manager, there will be probably a hundred drilling outfits moved into this section, and drilling will be done more extensively.

NEW MELON VARIETIES

PRODUCE QUALITY AND RESISTANCE — BOONE COUNTY MELON GROWERS HAVE BEEN FIGHTING WILT FOUR YEARS.

Four years ago leading Boone County melon growers set out to find watermelon varieties resistant to wilt. The following questions and answers will help the melon growers to solve their problems:

Question: My Watermelon vines die each year just about the time the melons begin to set. Can you tell me what was the trouble?

Answer: One would have to see the vines to be sure. The trouble in all probability is wilt.

Question: What is the cause of wilt?

Answer: The main cause of wilt is a bacterial infection that is found both in the ground and carried from plant to plant by insects..

Question: How can wilt be controlled?

Answer: Protection from cucumber or melon beetles when the melon plants are young and new melon ground is a big help. Wilt-resistant varieties give most promise.

Question: Have Boone County melon growers ever tried wilt resistant varieties of melons?

Answer: Yes, in 1932 and again in 1936 leading melon growers requested the County Agent to secure seed from wilt resistant varieties. Duke V. Layton, of Iowa Experiment Station was found to have more work along this line than any other man. Three varieties were secured from Mr. Layton in 1932. All three of which were found to be highly resistant to wilt but of poor quality.

Question: What is the experience with the vareities this year?

Answer: Two varieties were tried by leading Boone County melon growers this year, Stone Mountain No. 5 and Kleckley Sweet No. 6. Both varieties were found to produce good quality of fruit and a fair yield.

The Kleckley Sweet No. 6 was found to produce fruit of more uniform quality but due to the drouth some melons were small at the stem end. The shape of the fruit improved remarkably following the recent rains. The quality of the fruit was excellent.

The Stone Mountain No. 5 showed slight variation in color, good stone mountain type, quality and yield varrying from almost as good to equal that of the Stone Mountain variety commonly grown.

Question: Your discussion sounds good, but I would like to talk with some farmers who actually grew these two new varieties this year.

Answer: The actual experience of the men who are growing the varieties is always best. Leading growers from whom reports were collected the past week on Kleckly Sweet No. 6 and Stone Mountain No. 5 are John J. Klopp, Petersburg R. 1, J. H. Huey, Peters R. 1 and Louvett Rogers, Peters R. 1.

Question: Do you think these two varieties are perfect?

Answer: No. We must always look forward to greater improvement.

MODERN CAMARA IS PURCHASED

TO BE USED FOR LOCAL PHOTOGRAPHY THROUGHOUT THIS COMMUNITY — LOCAL PICTURES TO APPEAR IN PAPER.

The Recorder has just recently purchased a new modern Graflex newspaper camera that will be used in connection with this paper each week. This camera is the same as used by all modern daily newspapers, and has the special attachment for flashing inside pictures as well as all outside work.

The purpose of this camera is to localize our newspaper, giving accounts of outstanding happenings in pictures, accompanied by a news story. It is going to be impossible each week for us to know of everything that may be going on in the county, so if there is an event in your community that you would like to give publicity, please communicate with the editor of this paper, informing him of the event to take place, and a request that he be present. There will be no charge on such occasions, provided the picture is of general interest to the public.

The camera will be available to the public for private purposes, at a very reasonable charge. It will at no time be loaned to individuals, but will be accompanied by someone who is familiar with the use of same.

This camera is modern in every respect and will take pictures inside and out, moving or sationary objects.

RECORDER TO BE ENLARGED

IN ORDER THAT WE MAY MEET PRESENT NEED IN BOTH NEWS ITEMS AND ADVERTISING—LAST ISSUE OF PRESENT SIZE

Sometime ago we announced that the Recorder would be changed to seven columns instead of six to satisfy our need for more space. Since that announcement, we have found it rather hard to purchase the equipment we needed, and were unable to make the change at the time we had planned.

At the present, however, we have the necessary equipment that is needed for the change, and your County paper will be published in its new size next week, September 17th.

Our advertisers have found the Recorder an excellent medium in which to advertise, and it has therefore become necessary for us to arrange for more space, as we often are compelled to leave out articles that would be of interest to a great many readers.

This enlarged paper will furnish our readers with approximately 216 additional inches of reading material, at no increase in the subscription rate. We are endeavoring to give the citizens of Boone County and adjacent counties a better and more complete County paper at no additional expense to our readers, and think that this is just another step forward toward that achievement.

With the splendid cooperation we have been receiving in the past, and the determination to accmoplish our goal, we trust that we will give our readers not only a more interesting, but a more educational county newspaper. —The Editor

BEING A GOOD NEIGHBOR

You so often, in regard to many things, hear this remark "It wasn't that way when I was such and such an age, or such things didn't take place when I went there." Yes, we admit that this is true in regard to many things. There is one instance that we can not help but take cognizance of, one too, that means so much to us in our every day life. 'Tis this one: All of the people in our locality used to be good neighbors, when I was growing up. Now, it seems that each has attempted to become a separate and distinct family, living apart from those that were formerly so close.

It may seem rather peculiar that we choose this seemingly unimportant topic and write so critically about it. But after all, we are still just country people, living in much closer communion than those people of the cities. We don't have a lot of the conveniences that make our lives so comfortable and pleasurable that we can forget those that live within a close range. And it might be well not to look too optimistically into the future, for many of them we shall never have them.

So, what many of the country people ought to do, is calm down a bit, take a little closer analysis of themselves to see wherein they are being very neglectful, and enjoy a little neighborly fellowship with the one who lives just across the hill from you.

The machine has not speeded things up to the place where we do not need good friends. When half the family is down with the flu, a neighborly call and a gallon of rich vegetable soup looks awfully good. Mary isn't so beautiful after she is grown, but what she wouldn't make a good match for neighbor Jones' boy, possibly a lot better than the city boy who couldn't help Pa out a bit when they had to come home to live, after he has lst his job.

We have observed men who have been neighbors and who still are, shown themselves worthy of being and who have upon every occasion designated as being a friend of man and a neighbor. We know that when that time comes many will turn tearfully away and say, "No finer man has every lived, not even once did he deny one that he knew, let alone thrice, and "he lived beside the road and was a friend to man."

EVERY MAN'S TAXES

There is a mistaken theory that the rich are the only ones soaked by taxes. The levies upon them are direct, and the rich know what the taxes represent. The average citizen does not make it his duty to dissect his tax bill. Of course he knows what part he pays for gas at a filling station, and for cigarettes and tobacco. But he is not apt to realize that there is an average tax of $62.70 for the first year's use of a light automobile. He certainly can't understand how it comes about that at least 52 different kinds of taxes accumulate on a loaf of bread, thereby adding about two cents on every loaf. The surprising statement has been printed in the Congressional Record that "through the manufacturer 94 taxes, and through the druggist 78 more taxes are on a bottle of medicine at the drug store." And in the same copy of the Congressional Record the question appears: "Do you know that in paying for a funeral you pay 157 taxes?" The explanation is furnished that of these 56 are paid by the manufacturers of funeral supplies, 51 by the funeral directors, and 50 by the burial places.

A staff writer for the Saturday Evening Post states that "one company with 16,000 men pays an average tax per employee of $1,525 a year as against wages of $1,725 a year."

By Pete Gettys

You can stand on a street corner an' watch the fire engines go a-lickety-splitin' down the crowded street—sirens "sirening"—or whatever they do to make that fiendish noise—an' some one'll say, "Ain't no use goin' that fast—they will make a bobble or detour or somethin' some day an' kill a dozen people." But guess the feller at home whose house is burnin' up don't feel that way about it, an' is cussin' the firemen an' whole city government for havin' such a slow, pokey fire department. It all depends on whose toe is bein' stepped on as to how you feel about such things.

The Dept. of Agriculture comes along now an' says there's 279 million acres of land in the western part of the U. S that is the biggest battle ground on which a sure enough forestry campaign will have to be pushed against such awful floods as those which swept through the thickly populated areas in several states jest last Spring.

Two hundred seventy-nine million acres is a considerable stretch of land—cost a good deal to ride over it—an' when you think of replatin' it in forests—treatin' it in other necessary ways to prevent rapid run-off of big rains, an' all that's required to stop such floods—it's going to cost a lot of dollars, an' the fellers not livin' in the flood districts ain't very strong for it—nor near so hot about it as the feller who stood by an' saw his farm an' home an' stock washed away. Sure, he thinks good old Uncle Sam ought to do somethin' about it—so there you are!

Did you ever taste a "garlion"? Never did even see on, but it's a cross between garlic and onion.

Surely you've eaten "topeppo"—that's somethin' you can have when company comes, it's a cross between a tomato an' a pepper.

An' they are growin' cucumbers on vines that look like lemons—a great old big cucumber as long as your arm an' that they say it retains its moisture and crispness.

An' did you ever see string beans 3 feet long?

A Jap feller out in California has developed a melon that's something fancy, an' ought to take a prize at the County Fair. This melon has a smooth yellow rind—is bigger'n a cantaloupe an' has delicious salmon-colored meat.

But talkin' about melons—one feller made the statement that the meat in a water melon wasn't red until you cut it—and who knows?

THE HIGHWAY DILEMMA

Daily, there are serious accidents upon our highways. A greater percentage of these happen at night. In spite of the fact that the bulk of cars are operated almost entirely during the day, well over half of the fatal accidents occur at night. Sixty-nine per cent of the victims were pedestrians.

These facts present a rather depictable plight. It means that no longer is it safe for a man, woman or child to go upon our open highways at night and to be safe from the horde of crazed motorists. Those who are unable to provide means of transportation, must stay home or take to the open fields.

People are not by nature that way, they have only become too intensively infatuated by that scientifically developed thing called speed. They are thinking very shallowly and very greedily, for if they were doing otherwise, they would be considering the value of human life, not only of others but that of their own.

The pedestrian, of course, is not wholly free from blame. It has been extensively publicized that one should always walk on the left side of the highway, facing oncoming traffic—but a great many night walkers apparently haven't heard the news yet. And many of them also don't realize that to walk on a dark highway wearing dark clothes is an invitation to the coroner. Light infraction is an eccentric thing, and a darkly-dressed pedestrian often can't be seen by the motorist until it is too late.

So, with the number of State highways increasing in our County, and the problem of traffic becoming a more pressing one, we need education for the pedestrian as well as for the auto driver. But in the meantime the driver should take every precaution—and even to go to what may seem ridiculous lengths to operate his car safely. After all, he is in command of a potentially lethal vehicle that literally kills more men than does war. Let's not take a chance.

THE COUNCIL IN JERUSALEM

LESSON TEXT—Acts 15:22-29; Galatians 2:1, 2, 9, 10.

GOLDEN TEXT—For ye, brethren, were called for freedom; only use not your freedom for an occasion to the flesh, but through love be servants one to another.

PRIMARY TOPIC—How to Settle a Quarrel.

JUNIOR TOPIC—How to Settle a Dispute.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What Is Christian Living?

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—How to Live as a Christian.

Although the first council at Jerusalem (Acts 11) had decided that "to the Gentiles also hath God granted repentance unto life, the question did not stay settled, for there were persistent Judaizing teachers who now contended that even though the Gentiles could be saved, they had to come into the church by way of Judaism and fulfill the Jewish rite of circumcision. This raised the vital and fundamental question of

I. Grace versus Law (Acts 15:1).

The entire future of the gospel ministry was in a sense dependent on the solution of this problem. Christianity is the only religious faith in the world that presents justification by grace, all others follow the path of works. The question now was, shall works of the law be mingled with grace—can Jesus Christ alone save men, or is salvation through Jesus Christ, plus something else. How was such a serious question to be settled? Should argument and strife be permitted to go on until the stronger party prevailed? Better judgment indicated the desirability of

II. Council Rather Than Controversy (vv. 2-21).

There may be times when it becomes the duty of the Christian worker to take an uncompromising stand for the truth of God and refuse to be moved, come what may. But certainly there should be no such spirit in dealing with differing interpretations of Scripture on the part of sincere and earnest Christian brethren.

The question was honestly and carefully considered by the second council at Jerusalem, with the result that there was a

III. Vindication of the Preachers of God's Grace (Acts 15:22-29; Gal. 2:1, 2, 9, 10).

After presenting a plain disavowal of those who had troubled them and subverted their souls (what a serious thing it is to teach error concerning God's Word!), the council being of one accord gave recognition to Paul and Barnabas as men who had "hazarded their lives for the name of the Lord Jesus."

No man should think more highly of himself than he ought. Humility is a Christian grace which well befits a sinner saved by grace. But the Bible abounds with admonitions to honor one another, to recognize the laborer as being worthy of his hire, to give recognition to those who are over us in the Lord. How long is it since you or your church comforted and encouraged some faithful teacher, preacher, missionary, or other Christian worker, by giving such recognition as the council at Jerusalem gave to Paul and Barnabas?

The final decision of the council is sent not only by Paul and Barnabas, but also by a committee from Jerusalem, a gracious gesture of fellowship. Courtesy is not out of place in dealing with even such difficult things as controversies on Christian doctrine — in fact it should be most in place in such a situation. But as a matter of record they also sent

IV. A Letter Which Brought Great Joy (Acts 15:23, 31).

After addressing the Gentiles as "brethren," this letter, which has been well called "the Magna Charta of Christian liberty," reviewed briefly the history of the matter, disposed of the subverters, commended Paul and Barnabas and then without mentioning circumcision at all puts upon the Gentiles "no greater burden than the necessary things." And what were these? Purity of life, as those who were enjoying Christian liberty. The law of Moses need not be kept as a ground of salvation. They were saved by grace. But grace can never be the cloak of careless living, nor can liberty in Christ be interpreted as license to live in sin. We are set free in Christ, not that we may sin, but that we may "go and sin no more."

MORE CHILDREN DEAF THAN BLIND

It Is Said One -Sixth of Population In The U. S. Have Defective Hearing

Following the last U. S. census, otologists have revised their estimate upward of persons with defective hearing and it is now believed that the number of persons with defective hearing in this country is about 20,000,000, or about one-sixth of the entire population. Surveys made of school children indicate that about fifteen percent of children of school age, or about 3,000,000 children, have detectable hearing defects showing an impairment of this important faculty of about 30 percent.

The average persons does not realize this wide prevalence of faulty hearing, for very few persons wear ear aids as compared with the millions who wear glasses, because of prejudice of admitting ear defects. This prejudice is gradually being overcome, and it is expected that the day is not far distant when as many persons using aids for the ear will be as common as spectacles. This movement is being hastened by the development of a small, compact device called the Teutonophone. Perfected by European scientists and utilizing the new principles of radio in the magnification of sound, the the Teutonophone is bring a new joy of living to many thousands of deafened persons in this country. The device is made in many styles and sizes, and is designed to be even less conspicuous than are ordinary eyeglasses.

The causes of deafness are many. More children are born deaf than are born blind. Children's diseases may impair the hearing. The noise of modern life is distracting, fatiguing. Our high pressure habits tire the nervous system, which may affect hearing. The public, say hearing experts, should be given as much warning and instruction on the prevention and alleviation of defective hearing as they are now given on eyesight.

ERLANGER HORSE WINS IN MAJOR EVENT AT ALEXANDRIA FAIR

Ennis King, sterling saddle horse from the stables of Charles M. Williams, Erlanger walked off with the five-gaited saddle horse event, sweepstakes of the horse show at the Alexandria Fair, Sunday night by capturing the silver loving cup for his owner.

The cup was presented before a record-breaking crowd by Lieutenant Governor Keen Johnson, Acting Governor of Kentucky. It was donated by Charles A. Sargeant, Cincinnati. Johnson was introduced by Charles B. Truesdell, Fort Thomas.

Second place went to the entry of William McCann, Augusta, Ky., and third place to the entry of John Fagin, Walton.

A special event to choose the champion lady rider in which horsemanship alone counted, was won by Miss Nora Rich, Covington.

Dr. John Todd, President of the Campbell County Agricultural Society, estimated that 17,000 persons were present Sunday night. There were 15,000 in the afternoon, he said.

Highways near the fair grounds were so congested that even the Lieutenant Governor had difficulty in reaching the grounds. Many are said to have been unable to get through.

With the 8,000 seats in the grand stand occupied early Sunday night, gates to the grand stand were closed. The fair closed Monday night.

William Saunders, Millersburg, Ky., was given the blue ribbon for having the best roadster stallion or geldings, any age ,in the horse show Sunday afternoon. Robert Mitchell, Harrodsburg, was given the red ribbon.

The blue ribbon for the best three-gaited mare or gelding, not exceeding 15 hands high went to Marion Huttenbauer, Cincinnati. Nona Rich, Covington, received the red ribbon.

Bobbie Burke, Fort Thomas, was adjudged the best gentleman rider, horsemanship only considered. Burke's five-gaited Shetland pony also received he blue ribbon in the Shetland pony class. The red ribbon went to Helen Ellis, Williamstown, Ky.

Two Covington entries were given blue ribbons for having the best fancy turnouts and the best five-gaited saddle horse, mare or gelding, three years and under four. The first was won by Nona Rich, Covington, and the second by Louis Meyers, Covington. Red ribbons in the two shows went to Andrew Burke, Fort Thomas, and William McCann, Flemingsburg, Ky.

McCann also won the blue ribbon for having the best five-gaited mare, four years and over, and the best light-harness mare or gelding, three years and over. The red ribbons in these two shows went to Fred Hartweg, Fort Thomas, and Marion Huttenbauer, Cincinnati. Hartweg's horse was trained by by John R. Fagin, Walton.

The horse of Colonel Charles M. Williams, Cincinnati, was given the blue ribbon for being the best five-gaited saddle gelding, three years and over. The red ribbon went to John McCann, Flemingsburg.

The County Home, Georgetown, Ohio, won five of the blue ribbons in the draft horse shows. Rings won by the County Home were for mare, three years and under four; horse, mare, or gelding, one year and under two; mare three years and under four; mare, four years and over, and best draft mare and suckling colt. Horses from this home also drew several red ribbons.

Others who drew red ribbons for prize draft horses were Frank S. Thatcher, Alexandria; Pickerall Brothers, August; C. M. Bealle and Sons, Clarksburg, Ind.; Pamerana Stock Farms, Alexandria; Joe Anderson, Carthage, Ky., and L. F. Suit, Maysville.

Abe Goodman, Cincinnati, of the Southern Ohio Horse and Mule Commission Association judged the draft horse show.

Previous to the showing of draft horses, a parade of all cattle, horses, and bulls taking blue ribbons was held in the arena. Cattle of the following owners who drew blue ribbons were in the parade:

STATE SCHOOL OFFERS ADVANTAGES TO BLIND

The Kentucky School for the Blind, Louisville, Ky., provides for the visually handicapped children of the State full educational opportunities from Kindergarten through an accredited High School.

Boys and girls without sight or whose sight is so defective as to prevent them from attending Public Schools are admitted as pupils if capable of education and in good health. Instruction is also given in vocal and instrumental music, industrial, vocational occupations and physical training. (There is no charge for Tuition, Board, Laundry or Books).

There are separate schools for white and colored children, some distance apart, each with its own staff of teachers.

The State has endeavored to make these schools everything they should be for the education, health and comfort of the blind children of Kentucky.

The buildings are beautifully situated on rolling grounds with magnificent forest trees and filled with every possible device for the training of the blind. The teachers are the best that can be had, thoroughly experienced in teaching those who cannot see.

Opportunity is provided for those qualified to pursue higher studies or to take advantage of work in music or vocational fields.

The school session opens the second Wednesday of September and closes the second Wednesday in June, the children going to their homes for the summer vacation.

If you know of such a child, write to Miss Catherine T. Moriarty, KENTUCKY SCHOOL FOR THE BLIND, 1867 Frankfort Avenue,

SMITH TO SERVE 20 YEARS FOR ATTACKING GIRL, 12

Jury Deliberates Ninety Minutes. Nine Jurors Favor Death Penalty. Trial Completed In Two Days

Henry Smith, Covington, was sentenced to 20 years in the State penitentiary by a Boone County jury Tuesday night, after it had found him gullty of a criminal attack on a twelve-year-old Covington girl last summer.

The jury of 12 men took six ballots before it fixed Smith's punishment. On the first five ballots the jury stood nine for death and three for the twenty-year sentence.

When the jury received the case late this afternoon at the conclusion of a two-day trial it had the alternatives of acquitting Smith sentencing him to from 10 to 20 years in the penitentiary, or of sentencing him to death by hanging. It deliberated for an hour and a half before raching a verdict.

Smith, 24, years old, Covington, was accused of having attacked the twelve-year-old girl as he, his wife, Lena; his sister, Ethel, and the girl were walking from Verona to Walton the night of July 19, after attending a dance at Verona. His wife and sister are under indictment in Boone Circuit Court as accessories to the crime for which Smith was convicted.

The crime was termed by Ward Yager, Commonwealth Attorney, as "the most outrageous against a female in this district since I have been Commonwealth Attorney."

Hundreds of persons, both men and women sat in the Boone County Courthouse for two days to hear the story of the twelve-yaer-old victim, two Covington physicians, a former Covington police matron, a Covington gasoline station attendant, Smith, and his brother, David Smith.

The story of the victim took practically all of the first day of the trial, and that of the others the second day.

The girl testified Smith's wife, purchased her a "party dress" at a Covington store. Then Mrs. Smith and the girl arranged with Bob Mathews, Covington gasoline station attendant, to drive them to Erlanger. Smith accompanied them. When they reached Erlanger, Matthews was induced to drive them to Verona, where members of Smith's family lived.

Matthews refused to remain at Verona, acoording to the girl, telling her and the Smith he had to return home to open the station the next morning. He invited all of them to return with him, the girl said, but the Smith said they were not ready to return and Matthews having learned that the girl was away from home without permission, refused to take her with him.

The Smith and the girl attended the dance, after which they visited Smith's home where they remained until 4 o'clock in the morning. At that hour Smith, his wife, his sister, Ethel, and his brother, Dave, went to the Verona railroad station to await a train to Covington. They tired of waiting, the girl said, and all except Dave started to walk to Walton.

When members of the party had walked a short distance, they sat down on the roadside and Smith attacked her, she said. She declared when she fought him and screamed, he threatened her with a knife. She said she appealed to Ethel Smith to aid her, but that Ethel, at Smith's direction held her while he attacked her. Mrs. Lena Smith refused to heed her cries for aid. she declared.

Smith admitted the trip to Verona and the return to Covington by walking and thumbing rides but stated that he did not attack the girl.

Davie Smith testified he had seen Matthews and the girl in a quasi-compromising position in the automobile at Verona. Mathews denied the charge.

Smith was taken to Frankfort Wednesday morning to start serving his term by Sheriff W. B. Cotton and Frank Walton, Deputy.

FARMERS SHORT ON ALLOWANCE

IN SOIL BUILDING, SAYS JOHN E. CRIGER, SECRETARY BOONE COUNTY AGRICULTURAL CONSERVATION ASSOCIATION.

Many farmers who have signed work sheets on the new farm program have not used up all their soil building allowance, according to John E. Crigler, Secretary Boone County Agricultural Conservation Association. This allowance is computed by multiplying the number of acres of crop land on the farm used in 1936 for soil conserving crops zby $1.00, except that if such acreage is less than 10 acres the soil building allowance shall be $10.00. Each farm according to this definition has a certain soil building allowance which can and should be used for the carrying out of soil building practices on which payment will be made for this part of the program or payment will be made only for the practices carried out.

The following are some of the ways that this allowance may still be used: The seeding of blue grass, orchard grass, red top, alfalfa, winter vetch, crimson clover, 60 per cent timothy may also be seeded in a mixture with any of the above. Small grains are recommended with the grass a winter cover crop to prevent erosion. Further practices include use of limestone or phosphate on soil conserving land.

It is also frequently found that when performance is checked on the farm this year by the supervisor that a sufficient number of acres have not been seeded this year to qualify for the full Class I or soil conserving payment. This part of the program provides that if all land on the farm which has been used for either a hay or other soil depleting crop since January 1, 1930 is not used for either a depleting or conserving crop this year, or in other words if there is any idle crop land, then there must be seeded this year before October 1st to a soil conserving crop a number of acres equal to at least 15 per cent of the general soil depleting base and 30 per cent of the tobacco base if the producer is to receive payments for the full diverisin permitted.

LUDLOW MAN IS KILLED IN CRASH

AUTO PLUNGES OVER EMBANKMENT TWO MILES SOUTH OF WALTON SUNDAY—SKULL IS CRUSHED.

His skull crushed when his automobile left the road on the Dixie Highway two miles south of Walton early Sunday, Charles J. Lanigan, 25 years old, 422 Elm Street, Ludlow, died before medical aid could reach him.

Unaware of his nearness to the scene of a tragedy that had stricken his family, the victim's father, Joseph Lanigan, Southern Railroad engineer, passed the place of the accident later at the throttle of a locomotive drawing a northbound passenger train. It was not until he arrived in Ludlow, where he was relieved by another engineer, that he learned his son had been killed within sight of track over which the train had sped.

Dr. James P. Riffe, Kenton County Coroner, said the machine apparently had left the road, the left fender hitting a concrete culvert. Although the car came to a stop in an upright position it was evident it had turned over at least once, Dr. Riffe said.

The question as to whether a mechanical defect in the automobile might have caused the accident was raised when members of the young man's family said that he had worked on the machine Saturday afternoon. He left home at about 8 o'clock Saturday night for a fishing trip. Three fishing rods and reels and a rifle were found in the wrecked automobile.

Lanigan was popular among the younger set of Ludlow. Surviving him, besides his father, are his mother and one sister.

HEADQUARTERS FOR DRILLERS

TO. BE. AT. BAKER'S GARAGE, LIMABURG, KY.—TWO MORE MACHINES ARE MOVED THIS WEEK.

The headquarters of the drilling crew for gas and oil in Boone County will be at the old Baker garage in Limaburg, according to a report from drilling manager. There will be an office maintained in this place, with telephone connection at all times.

There has been no more wells brought in this week, but there have been two changes made in drilling machines. The machine at the Russ farm struck sulphur water at an approximate depth of 1300 feet, and has now been removed to the farm of Hubert Beemon, near what is known as the Geo. Rouse bridge. The other machine has been brought back to the Tanner farm near Florence. There has already been a small gas well found as this place, but the machine that was doing the drilling before was only capable of going 1000 feet. The new machine now at this place is capable of reaching approximately 3000 feet below the surface of the earth.

According to Mr. McCurdy, drilling manager, that is about all the gas news, with the exception that all the machines are still in operation and that the gas mains will be laid before October 1st, and the gas will be going out before October 15th.

ROOSEVELT ON WAR

President Roosevelt said at Chautauqua, N. Y., August 14, 1936, "We can keep out of war if those who watch and decide have a sufficiently detailed understanding of international affairs to make certain that the small decisions of each day do not lead toward war, and if, at the same time, they possess the courage to say 'no,' to those who selfishly and unwisely would lead us to war." We accept those words from Pres. Roosevelt as being heart-felt, for there is ample evidence from his past action that he has dealt wisely on international affairs and has certainly been very conscientious in regard to them. So plainly has he spoken, that during the Italian-Ethopian strife, not a single person or a nation was at a loss as to know exactly the stand that was being taken by our country, the reason being, that at the very utset, Pres. Roosevelt made it very clear. Never has there come before the people or the nation, a question to perplex them, that he has not immediately made a very intelligent analysis of the situation, gave his decision and stuck by it. He makes no changes, or as we often hear it said, "strade the fence," or "change horses in the middle of the stream."

However, we can not say that Gov. Landon can boast of such a splendid attribute for a leader. On many occasions and upon many questions the people have not been able to find out exactly where he stands, and exactly what he would do, had he the opportunity to make the choice.

Gov. Landon on Feb. 11, 1933 said "Dictatorships have been established all over the world. I do not view the granting of additional powers to Pres.-elect Roosevelt as belonging in this class. I do not believe it would endager our democracy." But on February 29, 1936, he said, "The centralization of control in Washington has brought about a lamentable and costly break down of local responsibility." The blind could even feel there is such change of position.

The Philadelphia Record seems to have summed up the situation most accurately. They say, "Clear the decks—Make way for a bang-up campaign by Gov. Landon, the famous opponent and supporter of the New Deal, that distinguished friend and enemy of experimentation, that statesman with both feet on the ground—and a fence between them."

Would the people want a man who has taken so many stands on important issues as those, to deal with the even more thing so acute as war? We know what Mr. Roosevelt will do, for Mr. Landon, no one has been yet able to figure what he might do.

ACTUAL FACTS

Can they justifiably object to the election of President Roosevelt and conscientiously carry on an anti-Roosevelt fight, and say that great sums of money have been spent unjustifiably when the following figures and statement recently given by A. P. Giannini, noted financier and founder of the Bank of America are true.He said "Certainly the debt of the nation had increased. Let's say that $11,000,000,0000 has been spent in restoring confidence and bettering conditions. Of this, $5,000,000,000 will come back from the RFC and the Home Owners' Loan Corporation. $2,000,000,000 will come back from th stabilization fund.

"That leaves the total cost of unemployment, relief and depression around $4,000,000,000.

"What does $6,000,000,000 increase in indebtedness mean in light of the fact that the nation's national income has been raised from $35,000,000,0000 to $65,000,000,000? How can anyone say that it is excessive? We gave away much more than that to the European Countries after the world war. Mr. Hoover increased the debt by $4,000,000,000 and what did he do with money?"

In times such as these with both parties flooding the papers with propaganda, we can not help but take cognizance of statements such as these coming from the lips of a man, who for the sake of th nation's financs would not utter a false statement, that any particular party might advance their cause.

Farmers still keep a watchful eye on those who promise farm relief and especially candidates for Congress.

ROOSEVELT RUINING THE COUNTRY?

If the screams of the president's critics are true, then business in the country has indeed gone to the bottomless pit. They insist that the sole aim of the New Deal is to ruin business. Let's look at some of the dreadful things the New Deal is doing to business. Let's go over the Financial Page of the New York Times. In one recent issue of the paper we pick the following headlines at random:

"Savings Banks Top Ten Million Mark. Deposits within $10,000,000 of Record July 1—Accounts at New Peak in Number. Assets at Highest Point. Reach $11,349,582, with surplus account also largest in History."

"Financing Concern Shows Record Net.. Commercial Investment Trust for the half year earns $3.16 a common share. Business also at a peak. Total assets on June 30, at $409,587,591, compared with $297,183,889 on December 31."

"General Motors Increases Income. $88,108,372 net for quarter of June 30 is highest for period since 1929. Half-year total also up. 12 Months' profits $224,069,218. Bringing earnings on Common to $.01 a share."

"New York Utility Votes 50c Dividend. Directors of the Consolidated Edison Company of New York at a meeting held recently declared a dividend of 50c a share on the common stock, against 25c a share paid in the five preceding quarters."

"Youngstown Steel Rate at 80 per cent . . . the best July from an operating standpoint since 1929."

"Sterling Securities Gains. Net assets were $19,486,550 at close of first half of the year."

So it should be plain to the dullest that the New Deal is ruining the country and sending its people back to the days of chaos and despair such as we experienced before the advent of the Roosevelt Administration.

FORMER REPUBLICAN GOVERNOR SCORES GOP

"I am a Republican, as I always have been, but that does not make it necessary for me to delude myself or to blind myself to obvious facts," said former Governor Alex. J. Groesbeck, of Michigan in an interview published in the Detroit News.

"By and large,"he continued, "President Roosevelt has done a pretty good job for the people and it is silly for the Republican party to blind itself to that fact. It is, I think nothing short of ridiculous for Republicans to try to attack the New Deal in its entirety. We all know that this country was stymied in the early part of 1933. Hoover had proved himself incapable of handling the situation. Shoals of Republicans voted for Roosevelt because they recognized that fact. The new Administration came into power facing a situation that was unprecedented in our history. Something had to be done—and something WAS done.

"It is only sensible—and honest—to admit that a lot of the acts of this administration have been proper and helpful. Certainly no one can take exception to the taking over of the burden of the mortgage situation. The Federal Housing Act was good legislation. Maybe some can criticize details of the AAA, but it must be remembered that both parties had been promising aid to the farmers for years and this was the first time anyone had delivered. Repeal of prohibition helped, too.

"None can deny that currency legislation was necessary, and the fact that business has improved so enormously is proof positive that the legislation passed along this line was helpful. I think the banking situation was aided by legislation.

"I'm tired of this ballyhoo about expenditures. I was never known as a spender in my three administrations as Governor of Michigan but sometimes spending is absolutely necessary. The states, including Michigan, in 1933 were absolutely unprepared for the crisis. They had not provided the reserves to care for the millions of unemployed. The Federal Government saved the situation and it had to spend to do it. What were they to do? Let the people starve?

"The talk about the Constitution being in danger is pure bunk."

Introductory to the Groesbeck statement, which created considerable comment in Michigan, the Detroit News, an independent paper, said:

"For those who have sensed something incomplete, something unusual, about the current state campaign, this department is now prepared to say just what is missing. It is the figure of Alex. J. Groesbeck, who until this year, played a prominent part in every campaign in Michigan since 1912. In that year he became chairman of the Republican State Committee. In 1916 and 1918 he was elected attorney general. In 1920, 1922 and 1924 he was elected governor. From his place on the sidelines, he has developed an attitude of political aloofness which makes it possible for him to criticize the tactics of his party with out running the risk of repercussions and he has criticisms and plenty of them."

what Irvin S. Cobb thinks about:

Pensions for Veterans.

SANTA MONICA, CALIF.—Merely another little prophecy by old Doctor Cobb, the amateur soothsayer, who never said a sooth he's surer of than this one:

Agitation for a blanket pension to cover all World war veterans, regardless of ratings or physical condition, will start as soon as those lately-won billions are distributed. At first some veterans' organization will oppose it—not for long, though. At first congress will be lukewarm. Then it'll see a great light, and this new pension act—one that will be to all previous pension acts what a whale is to tadpoles—will be passed.

Irvin S. Cobb

At least the veterans have the argument of patriotic service on their side. And isn't it true that to nearly all of us has come a new conception of the national figurehead? No longer is it square-jawed, self-dependent Yankee Doodle. It's a generous, jolly smiling Santa Claus bringing free checks for everybody; that is, free until the taxpayers start paying the bill.

Defying the Almighty.

FOLLOWING the example set some years ago by a certain famous personage, a cock-sure infidel made a speech lately, defying God to smite him dead on the spot. It seemed, first off, a very sound idea, but nothing happened, so the gentleman took this for proof there was no God and went his way rejoicing.

Some look on this as blasphemy, but, granted that every man is entitled to speak his opinion on religion, I'd call it pure gall. Think of inviting the Almighty to suspend the entire cosmic scheme while forging a thunderbolt to abolish one solitary copycat of an amateur Ajax. Would you call out the standing army of the United States to kill a cockroach?

Lady Killers.

IT HAS been in print so often you must know it by heart, yourself: At sight of her recreant gentleman friend, the poor bruised butterfly felt a great sense of her wrongs—the wretch wanted to go back to his wife or something equally dastardly—and the next thing she knew she was holding a smoking automatic that accidentally happened to be in her handbag along with some lipstick and a recipe for fudge; and he was deader then the prosecutor's chance of convicting her for the killing. But just prior to that "everything went black before her eyes." There's one detail which never varies—that going-black-before-the-eyes business.

It was in the case they tried recently in New York. It's in this latest case at Chicago. 'Tis a sore affliction, always marked by total lapse of memory and frequently coupled with temporary insanity, but it's certainly fine for marksmanship. The lady scores a perfect bull's-eye, invariably. I wish I could go blind to order that-a-way. I'd be the best quail-shot that ever came out of Kentucky, instead of the worst.

Brawls in Hollywood.

NATURALLY, I have hot southern blood, which seems to be the hottest there is, although down home I never noticed it. But up north, if trouble impended, people would speak of my hot southern blood when all the time I thought I was having a nervous chill.

Being thus all hot-blooded up, I adore fighting, if somebody else does it. Since our movie heroes always stage their combats in some utterly secluded spot, such as a cafe or a night club, I hurry hither and yon hoping to be present when an embittered star satisfies his honor by bouncing a special order of sweetbreads under glass with mushrooms—twenty minutes, 90 cents—off some rival's classic profile.

But it's hard enough for me to get in touch with a waiter, let alone a good plate-tossing contest. Today the war correspondents report two brisk battles on the Hollywood front, and I'm absent, as usual.

In the main bout, both gladiators were script writers, proverbially a tigerish breed. Believe it or not, a Mr. Riskin tangled with a Mr. Ruskin, the presumption being that one of the gentlemen regarded the other as a typographical error.

English Reds Again.

SOMETHING printed here recently about the way the English handle their reds and pinks prompted an English gentleman to write giving further details.

"Twould seem that over there all public servants, including, notably, state-paid school teachers, must swear to uphold the crown, which means they cannot preach communism to their pupils without violating a solemn oath and, if caught so doing, they lose their official heads instanter. Moreover, no avowed or suspected agent of the Soviets may use the radio to preach the overthrow of the existing government in favor of the Russian plan.

In other words—forgive the pun, please—Britain never shall be Slavs.

But, on the other hand, Americans always will be suckers!

Lesson for September 20

CHRISTIAN LIVING

LESSON TEXT—Romans 12:1-3, 9-12. GOLDEN TEXT—Christ liveth in me.—Galatians 2:20.
PRIMARY TOPIC—How Jesus Wants His Friends to Act.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Paul Explains How to Act.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What Is Christian Living?
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—How to Live as a Christian.

As a fitting conclusion to a three-month study of the Spread of Christianity to the gentile peoples of Western Asia, we consider the teaching of the great apostle to the Gentiles concerning "Christian-Living."

The early chapters of Paul's epistle to the Romans present the greatest exposition of profound Christian doctrine ever written. But even as it is true that the fruit of Christian living can grow only on the tree of Christian doctrine, it is equally true that the knowledge of Christian truth should result in Christian living. "Faith without works is dead."

Our lesson pointedly presents the true Christian life as being

I. A Life Yielded to God (Rom. 12:1-3).

A recognition and deep appreciation of the mercies of God leads to a yielding of body and mind in living sacrifice to God. If we are Christians our bodies are the temples of the Holy Spirit. We must not lend our bodies to activities which destroy their usefulness or hinder our service for God but rather yield the body with all its abilities to God!

But after all "it is the inside of a man that counts." The presenting of the body in living sacrifice is possible only when there has been the inner transformation by the renewing of the mind. One cannot live physically without being born; it is equally impossible to live a Christian life without having been born again.

The Christian life is yielded to God not only for its own peace and satisfaction, but it is to be

II. A Life of Service (vv. 9-15).

We are not saved by serving but we are saved to serve.

In the first place the Christian serves the Lord. He abhors evil, but his life is not merely negative, for he cleaves to that which is good. He is not lazy, but diligent. His spirit is aglow with zeal for God and his cause. He is full of joy and hope, patient under trials, a man of steadfastness in prayer.

Such a man will not fail to serve his fellow-man. He will really love the brethren, not merely make a hypocritical show of loving them. He will seek the honor of others rather than his own glory. He will be given to the almost lost art of hospitality. He will be ready to stand by his brother, in the day of joy or of sorrow. He will go even further, for he will bless those that persecute him.

The measure is not yet full for we note next that the Christian lives—

III. A Life of Humility (v. 16).

In these days when we are urged to assert ourselves, to demand our rights, to "succeed" at any cost, and when men are measured by their worldly achievements, it sounds rather old-fashioned to talk about humility, about condescending to lowly things, of not being "wise in our own conceits."

But humility is still the crowning grace of a truly Christian life. Those who follow the lowly Jesus, in fact as well as in profession, are still strongest when they are weak, and mightiest for God when they are humble.

Note also that we follow a victorious Christ who calls us to

IV. A Life of Victory (vv. 17-21).

It is possible to talk much about the victorious life—to discuss it at length as a theological question—and have little real victory.

Paul speaks plainly. The Christian is honorable in all things. He meets every obligation. He is a man of peace. He is not concerned with avenging himself upon one who has done him wrong. Spite fences, boundary disputes, family quarrels, are not for him. Evil is not to overcome him. God gives the victory.

A great lesson, and one that we cannot study without some disquieting thought. Christian, how does your life and mine appear as they are held up to the mirror of God's Word? Let us make a covenant that by God's grace and power we shall go forward in real "Christian living."

A Human Being

There cannot be a more glorious object in creation than a human being, replete with benevolence, meditating in what manner he might render himself more acceptable to his Creator by doing most good to his creatures.—Fielding.

Visions of Better iLfe

FOSTER HOMES WANTED

At the Kentucky Children's Home Society, Lyndon, Kentucky, there are 430 children anxiously waiting for foster homes. Placements have been slowed up considerably during the past two months and in addition many children have been returned to the Home due to the effects of the drouth. The Home is now housing 430 children with accommodations for only 250.

With long experience in the care of more than 7,500 dependent children the Kentucky Children's Home Society has a service to offer of much value to the child as well as to the foster parents.

Homes are needed especially for older boys and girls ranging in ages from 7 to 14 years. For children of this age it is felt that a small town or a country home is much better than a home in a larger city. Many of the older boys and girls are looking for a home where they can go to school and where they can do chores or odd jobs to help pay their minor expenses.

These children respond to kind treatment and love almost beyond realization. Each child has his own peculiar, individual needs and in finding him a home it is necessary to consider his temperament and other personal traits.

Boys and girls can only grow up once, so think of these little ones in terms of those near and dear to you. "Some other time" may mean "Never in the life of a helpless dependent child."

If you feel you can give a boy or a girl a home, communicate with the Kentucky Children's Home Society, Lyndon, Kentucky.

POSTMASTERS OF NATION TO MEET OCTOBER 20-23

Irvington, Ky., Sept. 16—R. L. Frymire, president of the Kentucky Postmasters' Association, has announced that, according to all indications, this year's delegation from the State to the National Convention, will be the largest ever to attend such a meeting.

The National Convention will be held at St. Paul, Minn., and will begin on October 20, continuing thru October 22. Every county in the state is expected to be represented at this meeting, as it is distinctly to the advantage of the postmaster to attend. This is especially true, at this time, for the fourth class offices, according to President Frymire.

A bus has been chartered by Mr. Frymire to convey his fellow postmasters in Breckinridge and Meade counties. This idea will undoubtedly be taken up by other counties since the expense will be lessened and the trip made more enjoyable.

In commenting on the convention, the State President had this to say: "Any postmaster who is worthy of his office is striving to be a more efficient postmaster."

"To be an efficient postmaster he must keep up with the changes which occur daily and one of the best ways is to be a League member and hear these questions discussed and explained by representatives of the Postofice Department Washington, D. C."

And as a last word to fellow postmasters, Mr. Frymire says, "Postmasters, join your League! It will help you to become a more efficient postmaster."

UNIVERSITY WANTS OLD STORE RECORDS

In a study to compare living costs before the World War with those of the present, the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture is searching the state for old store records. Another purpose is to preserve records of historical value.

At one of the oldest grocery stores in Lexington it was found that in October, 1892, chickens sold for 20 cents each; bread, 5 cents a loaf; lard, 10 cents a pound; flour $2.75 per 100 pounds; and sugar, 5 cents a pound. I n June, 1896, eggs brought 10 cents a dozen; butter, 20 cents a pound; kerosene, 15 cents a gallon, and coffee, 25 to 30 cents a pound.

J. H. Clarke is making the survey in Kentucky, and the study is being made in cooperation with the U. S. Bureau of Agricultural Economics. Persons desiring to cooperate should write to the Department of Markets and Rural Finance, Experiment Station, Lexington, Ky.

CLARK'S PITILESS EXPOSURE OF LANDOON'S "GREAT SYMPATHY" FOR TAXPAYER

Senator Robinsn having exposed in a radio talk some of the outstanding fallacies and absurdities of Governor Landon's tax speech, Senator Bennett Clark of Missouri in a statement published Monday, punched a few more wide and deep holes in it.

Senator Clark said that Governor Landon's Chautauqua speech was obviously intended to "remove the Hearst curse" but that after having made that attempt, Mr. Landon in his Buffalo speech "proceeded to do obeisance to Hearst on the one subject vital to Hearst with his vast enterprises and to the multi-millionaires of the du Pont Liberty League.

"'What I am really interested in is taxes,' Mr. Hearst is reliably reported to have said to Governor Landon in that famous secret conference which preced the bestowal of Mr. Hearst's pontifical blessing on Mr. Landon as a candidate. And judging by the Hearst papers the kind of taxes he is interested in are not those that the average man and woman pays but those that affect the owners of great fortunes.

"The Republicans candidate for President refers to the Revenue Act of 1936 as a 'cock-eyed' measure. No one has ever claimed that the act is perfect. I myself voted for the bill in the Senate, but voted against the conference report because I thought that it might be further improved. But when Governor Landon refers to the measure as cock-eyed he is simply attacking the general principle of preventing the evasion of the sur-tax on incomes by the levying of a tax on corporatet surpluses. If Governor Landn means that, and his words mean nothing else, we will gladly meet him on that issue.

"And it may be remarked that if there is any strabismus connected with the subject it could be more easily discovered in Governor Landon himself, who seems to have one eye cocked on the electorate and the other cocked at Mr. Hearst and Wall Street.

"In his discussion of taxation Governor Landon, sets up a new basis of comparison, but even by his own standard the comparison he makes is both palpably unfair and a revelation of gross ignorance. In using the year 1932 he ignored the fact that the fiscal year ending June 30, 1933, was the most disastrous part of the Hoover administration and that during that fiscal year the so-called hidden taxes on consumers jumped from 41 per cent to 58 per cent. The same taxes decreased to 38 per cent under Roosevelt.

"Either Mr. Landon did not know or was not frank enough to tell the American people of the difference between the figures he gave and those I am submitting, which is in the main accounted for by the $518,000,0000 in revenue collected as the result of the repeal of the 18th Amendment. Gov. Landon's figures do not take account of this. Perhaps he has not heard of Repeal.

"Another startling misstatement in Gc ernor Land's speech is that durin the depression private industry paid out 20 billion dollars more than it took in and that 'that helped to cushion the depression and keep employes working.' The simple facts are that this alleged 'payment' of private industry was mostly pure bookkeeping. It included all sorts of things, such as depreciation, bad debts, depletion, inventory losses and plant write-down. Statistics show that from 1929 to 1932 all non-financial corporations reduced their surplus account 15 billion dollars, mainly by these bookkeeping methods, and at the same time actually increased their cash and investments by $3,800,000,000. So that the great boost to employment which Governor Landon tries to make out was merely to keep at work a few already employed bookkeepers and adding machine operators. Instead of using cash and investments to pay wages, they piled them up in their treasuries.

"Candidate Landon professes great sympathy with the little fellow's burden of taxation, but the revenue act of 1936 which he would 'immediately repeal' distinctly favors the small enterprise and that is one reason why it is hated by the big fellows. By this act small corporations receive preferential treatment as to the tax on undistributed earnings. The small business is not only given a lower normal tax rate, but if it chooses to retain a greater portion of them at less tax cost than the large corporation. Governor Landon plainly says he would repeal these advantages to small businesses. His love for the little fellow is submerged and disappears in his greater love for the Hearsts, the du Ponts, the Ogden Millses and the Joe Grundies."

BANKERS WILL MEET IN ANNUAL COUNCIL

Business Men Also Invited to Present Their Views on Services of Banks to the Public

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Robert V. Fleming, President American Bankers Association, has announced that the organization's annual convention will be held at San Francisco, September 21-24, and its program will call in not only bankers but speakers from various lines of business to present their viewpoints and advice.

The plans for the convention discussions take into consideration the fact, he said, that one of the major problems of banking today is to develop its operations along lines that will create greater public understanding of its methods and services.

"It is my earnest conviction that such public understanding of banking is not only an essential defense against attacks from whatever source but is also requisite to reestablishing it upon a firm and satisfactory basis of profitable operations," Mr. Fleming said.

General Improvement Cited

"The improvement in general conditions which is now taking place should be of material aid to bankers in carrying forward a constructive program for increasingly useful relationships between banking and business, as well as one of more helpful personal business services to all our people. Sound banking conducted in ways the public need and understand must be the aim of successful bank management.

"How can the banker make his operations and policies more understandable to the people of his community? How can better and broader financial services be soundly provided? How can banking improve its operating methods and income? These and many similar questions demand the earnest attention of all bankers They call for a fresh counselling together and a new interchange of experience and advice among the members of our profession.

"With these thoughts in mind, we have built the convention program with the view of also calling into our councils speakers from various lines of business to give us their viewpoints and advice. I can say without reservation that this is to my mind one of the most crucial years in the evolution of American banking, and that we are passing through a period demanding, as never before, cooperation and mutual exchange of viewpoint among our members and others."

Radio Commencement Exercises

More than 200 widely separated chapters of the American Institute of Banking, the educational section of the American Bankers Association hold annually in September a simultaneous commencement exercise at which they listen to the speaker of the evening by radio. This is said to be the most extensive graduation ceremony held by any educational institution. The aggregate membership of the chapters, which are located in cities and towns throughout the United States, totals about 35,000 bank employees and officers. The graduates number each year more than 2,500, and total graduates are now over 25,000.

The Business Outlook

NEW YORK.—The natural forces of recovery have demonstrated their strength and have a momentum which may reasonably be expected to carry the country into new high ground, says "Banking," the publication of the American Bankers Association, in its August issue. The momentary stimulation following the distribution of bonus funds to the veterans has practically died away and is no longer an important business factor. A certain degree of uncertainty arising from the national political campaign is unavoidable, the magazine says.

Foreign Trade

The Commerce and Marine Commission of the American Bankers Association has made a report which shows that the foreign trade of the world for the year 1935 on the basis of its estimated physical volume was 78.9 per cent of the 1929 level. This was 2.1 per cent above the volume of 1934 and is the highest since 1929. The gold values of world trade were much lower due to the lower commodity prices in January, 1936. The combined index of 75 countries showed 35.7 per cent of the 1929 average.

National Bank Growth

Comptroller of the Currency O'Connor announced recently that total deposits of the 5,374 national banks in the United States on June 30, 1936, the date of the last call made for statements of condition, aggregated $26,200,453,000. The figure is a new high record for national banks, exceeding by $1,340,998,000, or 5.39%, the amount reported as of March 4, 1936, the previous high record. The current figures show also that deposits increased $3,682,207,000, or 16.35%, over the amount reported as of June 29, 1935, the date of the corresponding call a year ago.

$7,000,000 SPENT ON SCHOOL BUILDINGS By W. P. A. In Kentucky, Who Ranks Fifteenth in U. S. A.

When the Students of Kentucky return to school this month some 15,000 will attend classes in new and modern class rooms that have been completed with the aid of Public Works Administration in cooperation with the State, Counties, Municipalities, and Boards of Education throughout the State. An additional 6,000 will be accommodated during the current school year when projects now under construction are made available, was announced by Mr. Geo. H. Sager, Jr., State Director of the Public Works Administration.

Ninety-three buildings consisting of 538 class rooms which were constructed in the President's Public Works program in Kentucky not only made available to school children more modern and sanitary educational buildings and facilities but was of great value in reducing relief rolls and placing men in private employment Mr. Sager said.

In addition of 45 Elementary Schools, 37 High Schools, and 11 College Buildings to the state school system, Mr. Sager said has materially aided in the State Department of Education's drive to life Kentucky from near the bottom of the list of States in the matter of school facilities. While Kentucky ranked about fortieth in value of school property it is fifteenth in the list of states taking advantage of P. W. A. help in increasing school facilities.

The monetary value of the buildings which exceeds $7,000,000 cannot be compared with the physical, social, and educational benefits which will be derived by the future citizens of Kentucky.

The gratifying results obtained in this school building program were made possible through the efforts of civic-minded citizens who alert to the needs of their communities, and, anxious that their children be given every advantage in the game of life, applied to the Federal Government for aid in the construction of these essential facilities.

Mr. Sager asks that all citizens residing in or near the 65 communities benefited by the President's Public Works Program, visit and inspect the work that has been done in order that they may recognize the permanency of the work and appreciate the continuing social value and added prestige afforded by these structures.

WHICH KIND OF INSURANCE DO YOU PAY FOR?

Insurance is insurance when it is. There is some that is not. You buy insurance with all the faith and trustfulness of your nature: sometimes you pay a fair price and get full and complete protection and all is well. Sometimes you save a little, or are promised insurance at cost and a dividend," But saving or dividend does not stem the tide of your indignation when you are asked to pay an assessment to help cover the Treasury Deficit, or does it pay a claim against you that turns up after the company has joined the Hundreds that failed to pass the endurance test. Bargain Counter Insurance is generaly unworthy of your attention.

I represent an old line Company with Captial, Stability, and rates that are made according to a standard and an Ideal. Such a Company sell Protection Instead of Promises.

FOOD PRICES ARE GOING UP
---but electricity is cheaper than ever

FOOD prices have risen steadily from their depression lows. Today it costs you one-third more to fill your market basket than it did four years ago. Clothing, shoes and other items in the cost of living also have advanced in price. In fact, probably the only thing you buy that has not increased but actually decreased in cost is electricity—which costs the average customer of this company 20% less for the same amount of use than it did four years ago. While other prices have been going up, electricity has been coming down. Your electric dollar is worth more now than ever before in history.

TO HELP PEOPLE WHO LIVE ON LAND PURPOSE OF RESETTLEMENT PROGRAM

The purpose of the Resettlement Administration, is to help people who live and work on the land to achieve a better living. But, often the statement is made, "Let those persons who are unable to amply provide for themselves, without the aid and assistance of others, starve." Seldom do those persons who make such wide assertions stop to think.

We have, living on thousands of acres of waste land, hundreds of large families, who are in no way responsible for their present existence. They were the victim of circumstance. We find the same, only to a much larger extent, in dreadful slum sections of the larger cities. Because of their many years of being surpressed, they will continue to be the inhabitants of the poor waste lands and the filthy slums, unless sane-thinking and God-caring people lead the way. That is what is attempting to be done under the Resettlement Administration. This plan will be carried out, unless the radically conservative and the greedy secure control of our Government.

These are a few of the accomplishments under the Resettlement program: More than 34,00 distressed farm cases, many involving threats of foreclosure, have been adjusted since September, 1935, through effects of voluntary farm debt adjustment committees throughout the United States.

The adjustments thus brought about in a friendly manner gave farmers a total reduction of about $26,000,000, or about 25 per cent on a total indebtedness of 102,000,000. Taxes totaling $1,900,000 that otherwise would have remained delinquent were paid to local governments as result of the settlements.

The total cost of the farm debt adjustment activities of the Resettlement Administration from the start of September, 1935 through, June, 1936, was approximately 1 per cent of the amount of the indebtedness involved in cases adjusted over the same period.

The Resettlement Administration estimates there are about 650,000 farms, embracing 100,000,000 acres, on which families are now trying to make a living, although the quality of the land is such that crop farming cannot except to succeed. Those lands, should, they say, be used either by private owners or by government assistance and be converted to forestry, grzing, wild-life conservation recreation or other non-farming uses.

LARGE CLASS IN EVENING SCHOOL OF UNIVERSITY OF CINCINNATI

The largest and most comprehensive program of classes in the 25-year history of the Evening School, University of Cincinnati, will open September 28, according to V. H. Drufner, Director of Evening and Extension Courses in the College of Engineering and Commerce.

Two hundred and ninety-one beginning and advanced classes in commerce, engineering, applied arts, and general subjects are included in the program, Drufner stated.

The University's early-evening classes provide an effective and convenient opportunity for those living in Greater Cincinnati area to take courses designed to increase their efficiency on the job or to advance their cultural interests. Last year more than 4,600 were enrolled for one or more evening courses, nearly one-third of whom lived outside of the city of Cincinnati. Included in this group were a number of Burlington residents.

Registration for all evening classes will be held the week of September 21, from 6:30 p. m. to 9:00 p. m. in the Engineering Bulding, University of Cincinnati campus. Conferences about courses are being held daily between the hours of 10 a. m. and 9 p. m.

BUT IS THE LONG ARM OF COINCIDENCE THAT LONG?

"It seems very possible," writes H. R. Jacobs to the New York Evening oPst, "that the coming Literary Digest poll will give Landon quite a majority, judging by the experience of this household. We are six registered voters—six Democrats and one Republican. To date one ballot has been received, addressed to the one Republican. It is impssible to figure any classification or list from which that name could be taken except the actual list of registered Republican voters. This might be ascribed to the long arm of coincidence, except that none of my Democratic friends elsewhere has received a ballot either. I have taken the trouble to inquire of many, some of whom have telephones listed in their own names and also possess drivers' licenses."

LIMESTONE PULVERIZER AT WORK IN BOONE COUNTY

The limestone pulverizer operating in Boone County started work Thursday, September 3rd at Dr. O. E. Senour's farm on Frogtown road. The pulverizer route is from the Frogtown Garage down Route 25 to Walton and from there to Verona, Beaver and Hamilton, respectively. From Hamilton the other parts of the County will be served.

There are over 2000 tons listed here in the county. Mr. R. W. Auton, the operator says that he can pulverize on an average of about 50 tons per day. He charges 70c per ton for pulverizing the limestne. Mr. Auton furnishes all labor, equipment and supplies.

Under the new Federal Soil Conservation Program payment is made to farmers for applying lime at the rate of $1.40 per ton, according to certain specifications. The difference is a return of 70c to the farmer besides realizing all the benefits which lime gives to the soil. All farmers are urged to take advantage of this lime program.

Farmers who intend to have limestone crushed this year are asked to leave their names at the County Agent's office. The route for the pulverizer is being planned so there will be no back tracking until after the County is covered. Those who expect to be served first are urged to notify the County Office immediately.

ANNOUNCE IMPORTANT CHANGES IN PROGRAM OF FARM CONSERVATION

Important changes in the Agricultural Conservation program are announced from the Kentucky College of Agriculture.

Regulation for the program have been so amended that a producer may establish performance on the basis of more than one farm owned or operated by him. This means that a farmer having more than one farm may include all of them or as many of them as he chooses when making out an application for payment. However, the producer's performance will be determined on the basis of all land owned or operated by him. In other words, the producer will be allowed full joint performance between his various farms or operating units.

Another change provides that no deduction will be made from any payment with respect to any farm where the 1936 acreages of general soil-depleting crops are in excess of the general base of the farm. This means that there will be no deduction made from tobacco payments or soil-building payments where the farmer has planted an excess acreage of corn, wheat, oats and other crops included in the general soil-depleting base.

A supplemental regulation has been drawn up which contains a provision that land from which no soil-depleting crop is harvested in 1936 will be classified as used for the production of a soil-conserving crop, provided a soil-conserving crop is seeded on it before Sept. 1, and also that any idle crop land may be considered as soil-conserving crops as seeded before Sept. 1.

There also has been a reclassification of crops whereby spring-seeded grain mixtures grown in combination with or immediately followed by a legume, will be considered soil-conserving during the year 1936.

Wonders of the Southland Are Varied and Interesting

By Mrs. R. G. Huey

We're off again! Through a snow bound winter, Mr. Huey planned his southern tour. It's just as hot now as it was cold then. But riding along in our open truck we culd frget the high temperature were it not for the parching fields.

I feel like that old woman who lived in a shoe, for we have 38 children. They are: Mrs. R. B. Huey, Miss Estelle Huey, Mrs. John Walton, Mrs. Pepper Smith, Mrs. Ella Jarrell, Mrs. Josie Maurer, Miss Lucy Lee Grant and Mrs. Ephriam Clore, of Boone county, Miss Ruby Hunter, Beryl Glenn, Christine Lawrence, Alleen Lawrence, Thelma Watson, Lucille Watson, Harriet and Patsy Huey, Fay Moore, Ruth Prather, Mrs. Amanda Wilson, Mrs. Henry C. Taylor, Mrs. Thomas Overton, Mrs. Ned Berry, Mrs. Lizzie Cox, Mrs. Laura McIlvanine, Mrs. John Cheap, Frank Jones, Billy Hildreth, Dexter Eldridge, Mr. and Mrs. D. D. Porter. Our drivers are Gene Dye and Lucien Watson.

We are packed snugly but comfortably into the big truck, with our bed rolls, our cooking utensils and some food. A canopy tempers Old Sol and we would be glad indeed if a good rain would make it necessary to lower our curtains.

We left Ewing at 6 a. m. Saturday, June 20, a jolly boisterous crowd. The plenteous beauty of our Bluegrass section, as we drove by Dixiana, through Lexington and Nicholasville, the prosperity of our Knob region with its cities, Stanford and Somerset, and our mountainous McCreary county, gave us many ideas for discussion.

Surely no state in the Union has such varied climate contour, soil occupations and people. We saw homes which represented the extremes of wealth and poverty. We wondered if, during our fifteen days spent in eleven states, more beautiful than our own grass, the trees native to our state, our laurel and rhododendron, the corn flowers which border our ribbon like roads with blue, our corn, tobacco co crops, or any stock the equal of our sleek cattle, our horses, our sheep and our poultry.

Near Hall's Gap the highest point in Lincoln county is the source of Green River. Two weeks from today we shall cross this river after it has become great from a few hundred miles' meandering.

Highway No. 27 follows a highland across Tennessee. We spent our first night at an attractive tourist camp called Cold Spring. Due to drouth, water was scarce. Each member of our party discovered undreamed wealth of ingenuity. Apricot cans and pickle bottles to be used as bath tubs, were at a premium. A few slept in the clean, cool cabins, but most of us preferred to spread our beds under the trees.

After a very early breakfast, we settled in our wheeled home, and chatting, singing or napping, we rolled along through Tennessee. A torturous pull brought us to the top of Lookout Mountain, where we ate our lunch of Kentucky ham and beaten biscuits, friedchicken and cake. The view from here is mangificient. This great mountain rambles up from Alabama for almost 100 miles and stops at Chattanooga, where it is 2400 feet high. Below the majestic Tennessee River makes the Moccasin Bend, through rich farming land and a highly industrialized section. What a paradise this must one have been for the Cherokee Indians, who claimed this region for their hunting ground. Here are the relics left from the carnage wrought during the Civil war. Innumerable markers, monuments and old cannon, grim evidences of strife that marred this fair landscape.

Back in Chattanooga, while Mr. Dye did some work on his truck, venders of popsickles and ice cream cones did a heavy business with forty representatives of Kentucky. Less than two days of camp-travel usually reduces us all to the elemental. We are no longer fastidious people with dainty habits. We enjoy food, cold water to drink, a place to lie down for rest and a bath. Leaving "Jeff's Place" early Monday morning we traveled through the land of candlewick bedspreads, but being behind on our schedule, we did not stop to be tempted to buy.

Georgia is an interesting state, different from its neighbors and proud of it. Unfortunately the best homes face side roads which tourists do not see. We commented on the absence of paint on outbuildings and the poverty stricken appearance of the homes, but there is reason for this. Southerners have not experienced the discipline of rigorous winters. Lumber and labor are cheap, chickens can roost in the open the entire year. Firewood is handy, and can be picked at meal time. The most common form of farm power, the mule with his rope harness, is not corrupted by moth or rust but honestly prefer to live out his time in the great open spaces. There is no need for fences, for there isn't much stock. The scarcity of sheep is not due to lack of grass for there is abundant pasturage. It is the inalienable right of every citizen to keep as many dogs as he wants and every politician knows the "poman's dawg" is sacred. There is little lawn grass, but the yards are swept clean and often there is a lovely crepe myrtle shrub with its coral flowers, or an immense yucca with its bloom spike as tall as the house. The houses are built high off the ground to insure coolness in summer and to prevent destruction by termites. Asked why trees were not planted about the houses, an old negro answered "Hit ain't a good idee to have trees near a house, 'cause when dey's ress too much." We were struck by the bright colored and white clean clothes worn by everyone chopping in the cotton fields. I missed the blue painted door and window facings usually found on the homes of darkies. Evidently evil spirits are better trained in Georgia and stay in the grave yards, where they belong.

We turned left at Atlanta toward Stone mountain. This phenomenon is 600 feet high and is a solid granite boulder. Perhaps you can get an idea of the size of this pebble on the earth's surface when you learn that 36 people sat at a banquet table on Lee's shoulder. This memorial to the Civil war leaders which will eventually be finished is chiselled high up in the mountain and looks like a picture in nice proportion to the wall of a room.

We had lunch in a grove at a mineral spring nearby, and took time to send home cards from this world wonder, which was traded for a violin by a former owner.

Trying to make up our lost time, we did not stop in the beautiful gardens. A few miles which was a great disappointment. I wanted to see the star in the steps of the capitol building where Davis took his oath back in those saddest days of our country's history. And I wanted to see the composer's original draft of "Dixie" which is there. But we had to make ourselves contented with a view of the dome of Alabama's capitol. Our hurried drive through this city gave us a glimpse of lovely women in the cool shade of their beautiful gardens. A few miles farther one, we saw other women on lonely hill farms, barefooted, chewing, and splitting wood and we wished there were some way to even things.

On we drove, the panorama ever changing. Pecan growers, goat dairies, convict labor in marble quarries, forked telephone poles, magnolia trees among forest trees, poles with many gourds suspended, for bird houses, peach orchards, cotton mills and gins, turpentine forests, peanut fields, waste land, nurseries, cotton fields, soy beans—we see it all from our truck. Lunch at Ft. Deposit, in a county with a population of 23,000, 4,000 of which are white people. As papershell pecans sold for 10c a pound, we all bought some to supplement our lunch.

As we drew near Pensacola, we passed orange groves, and avocado orchards, many varieties of palms, growing in the white sand. We found a delightful camp on the bay and slept with the waves lapping the sea wall near us. This was not a good place for bathing however, as shells cut our feet, so we enjoyed that sport early in the morning. Mr. Huey asked a colored woman who was sweeping the walk in front of a pretty home, to tell him the nearest way to the beach. As she didn't know, her mistress came to give directions, and who should it be but Mrs. Will G. Prather, whom you all know. We marvelled over the fact that among hundreds of homes in Pensacola, we found Fleming county friends. After a delightful time spent in the water, Mr. and Mrs. Prather piloted us t othe army and navy airport, with its great training fields. They told us the names of many trees and flowers, and of the expense and difficulty of keeping a grassy lawn in the sandy soil, and patiently set our inquistive minds at rest on many questions.

On our way to Mobile, the city of five flags, which was born of exploration, gold hunger, conquest and love of peril. Pirates, yellow fever, hurrciane and siege guns tried the soul of Mobile. Truly peace and good times do not make history. Gallant, tolerant, courteous Mobile, the city, is charming beyond description. Our time there was short, only about four hours. We bought vegetables and fish at market, and everyone went shopping at the 10-cent store. We ate lunch at Arlington on the shore where our boys and girls enjoyed watching the antics of the monkeys. Bienville Square, a public park with its moss hung live oaks, oleander, palms and brilliant crepe myrtles, is beautiful.

On Government Square are the homes of many people who helped to make Southern history. Again, we are thankful that we can look over the garden walls and the exquisite wrought iron fences. Even the haughtiest lady in the city would not begrudge our pleasure.

In 1540, Herando de Soto, in helmit and coat of mail, astonished the giant Indian Chief Tuscaloosa by sending a cannon ball crashing through the forests of Alabama. In return for this entertainment, the old chief, riding on the first horse he had ever seen, took de Soto to his capitol, Maubila, above the injunction of the Alabama an the Tombighee rivers. It was a walled city, built of wood and mud, large enough to shelter 80,000 people. Surfeited with entertainment, consisting of pagan chanting, drum beats and nimble dancing girls, the white chief and the red chief quarreled. After a nie-hour fight, the city was burned.

The creeks, or Muskogees, formed great Indian confederacy, crossing the rivers on log ferries pulled over with ropes of twisted grape vines. They had real ideas of engineering and many of these savage trails are still in use. Today the railway from Montgomery to Pensacola follows the old trail blazed for trade with the Seminoles. Due to continual strife between Spaniards, French and Indians, the fertile lands of Alabama were not sought for homesteads until after 1800. The Cherokee Indians copied the methods of the white man. They grew cotton and owned cottons gins. They bought slaves and cattle, but alas! they were exiled to Oklahoma. They left many euphonious names to make Alabama geography interesting to school boys—Tuscumbia, Sylacauga, Tallapoosa, Talladego, Opelika, etc.

Until our great war, cotton was king in Alabama. With slave labor, and navigable rivers Alabama grew, fortunes grew. Cultured southern life was at its best on the great plantations. After the years of war and ruin came one-crop drudgery, debt and poverty. Then slowly came the growth of the coal industry, rail roads, lumber yards, iron mines, steel mills, paper mills, tire factories, dairying and poultry farms and electricity. As we make our leisurely way across the state, we see everything and I have decided that if I didn't live in Kentucky, I would want to live in Alabama.

As we rolled along the road away from beautiful Mobile, our eyes took in a new type of scenery. Palms and pines, poinsettas, magnolias, colorful crepe myrtle hedges camellias, wistaria heavy with purple blooms, gigantic moss draped evergreen oaks, figs pineapple pears, camphor trees, scupernong vineyards, pecans, satsumas, mimosas with their brilliant flame colored blooms, truck gardens, great mounds of oystersheels, lovely homes of varied types—there was so much of interest that we were quietly thankful for balbearing necks. There are 14 miles of bridges between Mobile and Biloxi. As we were looking forward to a fish supper, we made camp early at Ocean Spring, which the Indians called "Holy Ground," on account of healing waters, 14 miles east of Biloxi. Our group of home economic girls tackled the task of frying 34 lbs. of ocean trout, mullet and red snapper, which with boiled potatoes, tomatoes, iced tea and peaches, made a good supper to be eaten in the cool of the evening.

In Biloxi, I saw my first tung tree. The nuts of this tree produce the finest oil obtainable imported in great quantities for varnish and paint, from China. This city is known as the largest shrimp and oyster packer in America. More than 500 boats gather in these seafoods.

On one side of the Old Spanish Trail lies the waters of the peaceful blue Gulf, with the world's greatest sea wall road protection. Lazy with boats, steams and pleasure craft which dotted the broad expanse of water in the early morning absorbed the interest of many of our crowd. On the other side of the highway is a continuous succession of enormous hotels fine homes, churches, schools and stores. The average mean temperature of this section is 68 degrees. The health-giving artesian water, cool Gulf breezes in summer and blooming rose gardens in the winter, make the Mississippi Gulf coast an ideal place to live. We were all so delighted that we decided to spend the day and night at Gulfport. So by 10 a. m. our ladies were established in beautifully furnished cottages at Moody's Tourist camp. Some of us camped at the fairgrounds with the truck. Here we found an unlimited number of shower baths, courtesy and desire to make our stay pleasant. We all met in a park for our meals. Gulfport is fronted by a seawall, but at the end of a long pier, our party found delightful bathing. Mr. and Mrs. Dave Porter celebrated their 28th wedding anniversary in this manner.

A million dollar pier and warehouse is under construction. Sugar, fertilizer and bananas are the principal imports, and ships leave loaded with cotton, lumber and telephone poles. In this city is one of the world's largest creosoting plants, and other plants for converting waste pine materials into turpentine, rosin and oils.

At 2 p. m. we boarded the Cavalier for an 18 mile voyage to Shipp Island. This island is now in possession of the American Legion as a memorial to Civil war and World war heroes. There, the government now maintains a lighthouse, but at intervals since 1699, campfires and torches of white men have burned. This peaceful island, a haven to many with its pines and semi-tropical shrubs at one end and its vast expanse of white sand at the other, has at intervals in history been the scene of undreamed of cruelty. Marquette, Joliet, La Salle, O'Iberville—many men well known to school boys have lived on Shipp Island. The story goes that a priest, the only survivor of a wreck, swam to the island only to find that the 14-mile long island had no food or water to drink. He prayed that crows and vultures would not devour his body. To this day, these scavengers of the air circle above the bodies of dead animals but do not come to earth on Shipp Island.

We were guided through Ft. Massachusetts, which was designed by Jefferson Davis constructed by Abraham Lincoln, with the work done by Confederate prisoners under the direction of Union soldiers. This fort is circular in form, with its arches and circles made of hand ground brick. One dungeon is in a perfect state of preservation.

We tolled through more than half a mile of snow white sand toward the light house before we discovered that bare feet made traveling easier. The view from the top, 78 feet, through powerful glasses was worth it all. On our return, we picked up beautiful conch shells in which hermit crabs had made homes. There is a reason why these shells never reached Kentucky. We shall never forget the cruise back to Gulfport, thru the sunset. Great leaping fish, sea foll, the rainbows in mist and foam and the interesting conversation with new friends.

The men of our party went for a night of deep sea fishing with Captain De Baun, but they had the same luck as when they fish in Fleming creek. Perhaps had they been able to stay longer—O, well, hope springs eternal in the fisherman's breast.

After a breakfast of crab cakes, eaten on the seawall as the sun rose, we started for New Orleans. The bridge across Bay St. Louis, is 1½ miles long at the end of which the highway leaves the Gulf coast. On both sides are bana trees sheds, and eating places covered with thatch of palm leaves. Farther on, are canal-like ditches on both sides, with swamps extending back as far as we could see, covered with water hyacinths. The beauty of this mass of delicate color made us forget that these thousands of acres were worthless, except as the paradise of duck hunters.

Mrs. Overton's coat blew away and as Billy Hacker ran back after it, he cut a few cat tails which he gave his special friends to be used as back scratchers. In that capacity they are really very effective. An enormous soft shelled turtle ambled across the road, and some of our party saw crocodiles. It is said that bear and deer hunting is good, the methods of swamp hunting being quite new and interesting to our men.

The bridge across Lake Poutchartrain with its approaches is 10 miles long, but the toll was only 50c. Across this great lake, again the scenery changes. Horses wear hats, houses have balconies or galleries with handwrought iron lace bannisters. Architecture is a blending of Spanish and French, the branches of great oaks, weighted with moss, sweep the ground.

Dazed with the romance of this, the most interesting American city, we made camp at the Dixie Tourist Court. As we made a hasty lunch of sandwiches and watermelon we wandered about examining the plantings. Here were Japanese plums, aocacia trees and bana trees, whose fruit did not tempt our boys because it was green. However, bananas could be bought on any street corner, two dozen for 15c. All too son, Mr. Johnson, our guide, came to pilot us over the city, with his wife in the cab to direct our driver. I can't begin to tell it all.

We saw the homes of Huey Long, Dorothy Dix, Marguerite Clark and many other well known people; Tulane and Loyola universities and Sophia Newcomb college, Audebon Park, with its 500-year-old oak trees, which is the site of the old plantation where sugar was first made from cane juice, the duelling grounds, and suicide oak in City Park, the seven miles of steel and concrete docks with their cargoes of bananas, coffee, mahogany, sisal molasses, cotton, etc., a trip over a passenger ship from bow to stern down Rue Royale, with its antique shops and many sits of historical interest. This street was the first in the city to be paved. Ships loaded with their ballast to the city government and returned to the continent loaded with American products.

Through famous old St. Louis Cathedral, the Cabildo (Spanish word for town hall), the Little Theatre, Jackson Square, the most historic spot in the Mississippi valley. Here the "Casquet" girls met their husbands in 1727; here came the Acadians in 1755; here were staged military parades, the ceremonial Louisiana Purchase in 1803; reception to Jackson after the battle of New Orleans, or Chamette, as we have now learned to say. The Baroness Pontalba planted the square in 1856, with a wonderful collection of importations which have become naturalized. Here, from an old negress, we bought pralines, that famous southern candy made of maple sugar and pecans.

Metairie cemetery, the most beautiful in the United States did not interest us as did St. Louis cemetery, where poor people are buried in the walls and rich ones in the vaults. In the vaults, the simplest tombstone must cost as least $5000, but in the walls, one's remains can be stowed away for $16.50. Of course you know that surface water makes it necessary that all burials are above ground. Here we saw the name of one of the La Salle brothers and dates as far back as 1720. Louisiana law prohibits cremation.

Back at camp, we dressed for dinner at Martin Bros. You would have been proud of your Kentucky neighbors. Out of small traveling bags came unwrinkled silk dresses, lovely artificial flowers, white felt hats and white shoes. Mr. Porter donned the seersuckers he had been saving for Dallas. The forty of us were seated at one long table. The menu was typically Creole, and was so bountifully served that none of us could get away with it. This house has patented the "Poor Boy sandwich," which they claim is so large that you have to sit on one end while you eat off of the other.

Some of our group went to a show while others took a "nite-life" tour. We saw the several buildings where are played the many games of chance. Near the Casino are grounds where hundreds of cars can be parked. Canal street, once a gala water way, is now a beautiful boulevard, with long narrow parks of tropical plantings. The lighting system of the entire city is splendid and I wondered what it would look like during Mardi Gras. We saw the rose garden, a giant wheel composed of 127 varieties, the McDonogh schools, the result of blighted romance; the famous—rather, infamous red light district, which is near the wharves, and is now literally boarded up. Pirates Alley, the Old Absinthe Bar—O, there are so many places in New Orleans which arouse emotions of pity, anger, delight or romance. Being a housewife, I wanted to do some midnight marketing, for in New Orleans, markets open then. In the days before refrigerations, markets closed at noon and meat was buried in cool soil during the heat of day. That old custom still prevails, but our party was too tired to visit the French market.

Early Saturday morning we passed through Baton Rouge and as we ferried the Mississippi river we looked back for a splendid view of the new Capitol building which is 33 stories high. On we went across the state which operates its schools on smoking tobacco, and builds its fine system of roads with its gasoline tax. These road beds are made of shells, and we marvelled at the ways in which people of such low-lying country have mastered their problems, by using their own natural resources. In this state is a spillway with flowage capacity twice that of Niagara Falls; here are found in use the world's most powerful pumps; great levees must be built and kept up; water purification is a real problem, malaria and diseases natural to such land must be wiped out—and always, always, there is the menace of Old Man River.

We passed through high producing land, which requires no fertilizer or terracing. Fine cattle, many a cross between our own domestic breeds and water buffalo, corn, fields, apiaries, sugar cane, cotton, nurseries, seed testing fields. No longer are there moss draped trees as they exist only within 100 miles of the salt water coast.

At Alexandria, many of the buildings and homes are made of manufactured marble. This is known as the only city which has no cemetery.

At Pineville, we found the post office closed due to the 40 hour week. Needless to say, there were some disappointed people. This Saturday night we spent at Riverside Tourist camp. After looking at the water of Red River, no one wanted to swim. Our beds on the clean, close cropped grass under the cotton woods made the best outdoor sleeping of our entire trip.

Over the Texas line, we found gasoline at 12c. The East Texas oil field is the largest in the world. It is 15 miles by 35 miles and contains 24,000 wells, most of them free running. A salt mine and the Morton Salt factory were on our road. Nearing Dallas, through broad fields covered with gay gallairdias, and erect dried bluebonnets, Mr. Huey stopped at a filling station and telephoned "Tent City" for accommodations for us. Dr. and Mrs. Martin drove out to meet us and greeted us with far famed Texas hospitality. Soon we were busy in the laundry, showers and kitchen, looking forward to three nights of real rest on the new Simmons beds. These remarkable people had cleared some vacant lots three blocks from the gates of the Exposition ground and erected this convenient "City" for Scouts, 4-H clubs, and people who have ambition but not much money. And so we have these new friends to thank for this unexpected comfort and convenience which costs us only fifty cents each a day.

I can't begin to describe the Texas Centennial. The low white buildings are substantial; the colors are brilliant, but subdued. There is a largeness, a cleanness about the whole thing. In no instance, did I discover anything short. Food, excellent food, was more reasonably priced than in our own home town. There was so much to be seen, but the air was invigorating and Tuesday was cloudy, so we all put in our time to advantage. Tuesday was Kentucky day, and our badges helped us to get acquainted with other Kentuckians. The outstanding thing at Dallas, in my opinion, is the Cavalcade, that pageant of Texas history. The enormous out doors theatre which seats several thousand people, gave us an opportunity to really see the Texas sky. If you've never been to Texas, please go and look at that particular piece of sky which hangs over the Lone Star state. Unfortunately, taxi drivers were on a strike, so we saw little of the city. Mrs. Taylor and Mrs. Overton visited Fleming county friends, and Mrs. Crain spent time at the hom of her son, Curtis Crain. Mrs. Smith and Mrs. Clar visitd Boone county friends in Fort Worth.

Wednesday morning a drizzling rain helped us to make a quick get away, with only a sample of Texas mud. All day we drove through rain, so hard that we felt it was falling on our own fields and gardens. Uncomplainingly we held our hats under the drips in our canopy. At Fraadelphia, we spent the night in a lovely Colonial tourist home. Our steak supper was served in a covered garage, after which, we walked about in this spacious city; which is the home of two colleges.

With great consideration, rain held off until we were loaded into our truck and then it fell in torrents, for 640 miles. Arkansas fields were flooded, and at one place on the highway, water rose into our truck, and drowned the engine. Our driver considered sending a dove back into our ark to see if a dry leaf could be found. But from the 36 chilly, damp people no word of complaint. They sang, joked, traded recipes and yarns.

Luck favored us, for at the Chickasaw camp at Memphis, our rooms had gas heaters where we dried our bed rolls. Our group of 7 men cooked supper—fried ham, turnip greens, spaghetti, vegetable salad and lemonade. How good that hot food tasted, and how we bragged on the cooks.

After we drove through Nashville, the beautiful capital of Tennessee, with its several colleges, and the replica of the Parthenon, we began to fear that rain had not reached our home state.

Everyone was in high spirits as we made camp at Lost River Cave, near Bowling Green. July 4 we spent at Mammoth Cave. While our crowd went through the cave, some of us cooked a vegetable dinner in the fireplaces in this National park. In the late evening we stopped at Lincoln Memorial and spent the night in Hodgenville. Sunday morning we visited My Old Kentucky Home and the Harrodsburg fort.

As we crossed Brooklyn Bridge we realized that our camping tour was over. But even as we said "Auf Weidersehen" to our eight friends from Boone county, we looked forward to meeting again next July for our New England trip.

There is Always a Good Market for LIONS

By H. S. MOSHER

If raising lions for the market down in South-Florida isn't putting the climate to work for you, then what is? A look at a map of the world will show that the lower part of the Alligator State is "on a line" with northern Africa where some of the world's largest and fiercest lions roam about in the wild desert country of the Sahara. And so down in southern Florida two enterprising farmers have taken up lion farming!

The lion raisers (fanciers) are J. H. McKillop, farm manger, and P. M. Hutton, a partner in the venture. Mr. McKillop spends most of his time on the farm—sleeps within thirty feet of some of the largest and fiercest beasts, in fact. The McKillop-Hutton lion farm is located two miles north from Fort Lauderdale, in Broward County, right on the highway into Miami, so thousands of tourists stop each year to see the lion farm in operation. The huge cats don't seem to mind the attention. The lionesses go right on raising huge families of cubs, while the lions strut majestically up and down their enclosures, roaring their defiance to all man-kind.

"Yes, we raise lions for the market. There is always a good market for lions. Zoological gardens, circuses, owners of animal shows, and others, buy them for good prices. Right now we are unable to supply ten orders for youngsters. And if, in addition to our regular business of lion farming, the public insists upon being let in to look at our operations, isn't it a good idea to charge them a few dimes a head? Well, we do that and we find that both raising lions and letting tourists pay you to see lions raised are profitable!" is the way J. H. McKillop explained his novel venture.

In Natural Surroundings

The Fort Lauderdale, Florida lion farm is an imposing looking place. There is a high wall around the outside and as one enters, it becomes evident that the lions are quartered in several old rock quarry pits. The great gaping holes in the earth (rather in the rock) make the finest quarters imaginable for lions. Even the largest and strongest of the King of Beasts can't leap up over the side of these pits. And pools of beautiful, clear water in the lowest parts of the quarry-holes, add much to the beauty of the farm. Mr. McKillop has built a huge, artificial waterfall which comes tumbling down over a rocky bed between the largest of the old quarries. Huge lions strut about below—they are not caged—and onlookers are told that some of the scenery is typical of the African veldt.

"Yes, we keep our lionesses working. Lions are just big cats. They have lots of kittens, frequently, or rather one should say cubs!

"It takes only 120 days for lion cubs to come into the world. There are from one to three cubs, as a rule, but mostly we have twins. Because we take the youngsters away from their mothers at two months after they're born, you can see we average nearly two litters per year to the lioness. The lions do their part!" Mr. McKillop explained while conducting the STATE FARMER reporter about the premises.

Some distance from the imposing looking entrance and "African veldt" lion caves in the rock, the lion farmers have a "lion house" which is just a wooden building, full of steel cages, where they keep the "main supply" of lions while additional quarters are being prepared out in the quarry-pits.

Mussolini From Ethiopia

At present only a few lions are roaming around in the open, so to speak, down in the rock. The others are still quartered in cages in the lion house.

Natural surroundings are a factor of the Florida lion farm.

"Yes, that's Mussolini roaring," Mr. McKillop said, as we entered the place. "Mussolini is a lion from Ethiopia. He was captured alive there and has always resented it. He is the meanest, fiercest brute I've ever seen and a killer!"

Fortunately it was feeding time. Negroes entered with huge chunks of beef. All the lions in the house, nearly a dozen of them, began roaring at once. What a racket! The 10-pound slabs of raw beef were tossed to the front of the cages and the lions pulled their rations through the bars.

"We have 21 lions now on the place. We feed them 200 pounds of beef a day—six days a week. On the seventh they are given medicines, good for their inwards. The small range cattle of South-Florida are cheap and often a carcass won't weigh more than 200 pounds. But the beef makes fine lion food," Mr. McKillop explained.

There were dozens of people in the lion house watching the lions eat; hearing their roaring. When the "roasts" were handed out the huge cats became silent and fell to eating—all but Mussolini. This huge, dark-maned lion, Mussolini, held his portion of beef between his paws and roared fiercely at the humans just out of his reach. Every few moments with a roar he would charge toward the front of the cage. Mussolini acted much as a cross dog acts with a bone. After "showing off" for fifteen minutes this big lion finally ate his dinner.

Guard-rail Protects Spectators

There is a guard-rail between the place where onlookers stand and the cages. On this rail are signs, reading: "Not responsible for persons reaching over guard-rail." When Mussolini stuck his huge paws some distance out of his cage, through the bars, showing his claws, the reason for the sign was evident.

Other interesting lions in the house include Princess, a sleek lioness, quartered next to Mussolini. She pays no attention whatever to his growlings and fierce display. Nell, a huge fat lioness, has had 21 cubs already and soon will have more. Walter, a brother of the lion who appears in the movies to introduce films made by a motion picture producer, is just as big as Mussolini, but he is peaceful, gentle and quiet.

Henry Pringle, a colored lion attendant, says "all de lions are gentle, boss." But Manager McKillop says "Henry" is the only negro they ever had who didn't arouse the lions to a fury—the moment the darkey was spotted! Seems the big cats always have disliked negroes, Henry excepted.

Back in the "veldt" country, beside the waterfall, and seated under a cocoanut palm tree, Mr. McKillop disclosed that he had to pay as much as $700 to $800 a piece for some of his lions, at the start. He said most of his youngsters sell for $200 to $400 each, depending upon their appearance. He expects the lion farm to pay—both from the standpoint of producing lions and because thousands of people pay him to see his unusual livestock enterprise.

"Menelek," with Cole Bros. Circus, is valued at $5,000 by Clyde Beatty.

"Some days we've had as many as 1,500 people visiting our place. This would be on Sunday in the winter. But from 200 to 600 daily attendance is common." Adults are charged 35c each, children less. It looks like no matter how well Mr. McKillop's lionesses produce cubs—that he'll make money anyway!

Sleeps Under Waterfall

Mr. McKillop pointed to the "lucky" lions which roaming around in the lion pits, near at hand. Then he pointed to the artificial waterfall.

"I sleep under the waterfall—in a little apartment we've built there at the top of the stairs. The lions wake me up nearly every night when they get to roaring. That's part of lion farming," he observed.

David Kirkbride, the keeper, is one of the most experienced lion men in the business. He was brought to Fort Lauderdale by Mr. McKillop to give the lions expert care.

The Fort Lauderdale lions are as neat and clean as an old maid's pet Persian cat. They are, actually, in the pink of condition. Cages are kept clean and sanitary. And of course those lions who are fortunate enough to have quarters in the "veldt" section of the farm are living almost as they would live in Africa. In time Mr. McKillop expects to have all of his beasts living naturally, that way.

There was the grandaddy of all drouths in Middle and East Tennssee the first part of the Summer, a hangover from Spring. Note the knee-high corn as late as July 1, in foreground, and burned out pasture.

Here is how one Tennessee farmer fought the drought before the rains came. The field is located in Knox County. Water was pumped into the sweet potato patch during June and kept the plants thriving.

Drought-Breaking Rains Bring Cheer to Farmers

By A Staff Writer

A SERIES of downpours giving Tennessee two and a half inches of rain early in July, and good rains in Kentucky in the Blue Grass Region and over much of the state the first week in August did much to restore optimism, and to insure in many sections of both states fair crops with total cash return, due to higher prices, probably equaling, possibly bettering, last year.

While 70 counties in Kentucky are on the official drought list, the August rains did much to improve pasture, corn and tobacco. In the extreme western part of the state the corn crop is estimated at normal, but in the rest of the state it will run about 60 per cent.

The Kentucky tobacco crop will average about 65 per cent of normal but higher prices will offset to an extent the short crop. Burley is expected to bring 25 cents or better. Last year it averaged 20 cents.

Soil Conservation and AAA payments in Kentucky will total around $13,000,000. Much sudan grass, soybeans and cowpeas, and other hay and pasture crops will be sown this fall and there will be large seedings of rye and wheat for fall pasture.

In Tennessee, the heavy rains early in July were followed by a short dry spell which gave farmers an immediate chance to replant crops destroyed by the early spring drought. Tennesseans were further encouraged by the announcement from the Department of Agriculture in Washington that farmers cooperating in the 1936 Soil Conservation Program could plant feed, forage and food crops above their original basis and not lose their soil building payments.

While the crop estimate for Tennessee made on June 1, 1936, was the most pessimistic on record, by the third week of July with more inches of rainfall recorded, it was difficult to remember how the brown, sun parched fields had looked six weeks earlier.

Tennessee harvested 4,532,000 bushels of wheat this year, more than the 1935 crop. Corn will be 2,500,000 bushels under 1935. Tobacco suffered heavily. It is believed that the 1936 yield will be approximately seventy million pounds, almost 20 million under the 1935 crop. The oat crop is the lowest on record.

The late crop of potatoes put out early in July in Tennessee, is expected to pay a handsome dividend. While the hay crop will be considerably under 1935 should favorable weather last for 10 days beyond the average frost line of October, there would be extra cuttings and a consequent gain in tonnage, but August expectations were for a total crop of around 900,000 tons.

One cash crop that escaped serious damage in Tennessee despite the late winter, prolonged cold weather, and the summer drought was cotton. Excluding an early killing frost, experts estimate 400,000 bales.

In spite of the optimism created by July and August rains drought took a definite toll from Kentucky and Tennessee farmers. Truck gardners had almost a total loss in roasting ears for early market. Feed prices advanced sharply, affecting both dairymen, feeders and poultry producers, and all crops were injured to greater or less degree. How far increased prices will offset yield losses remains to be seen.

The animal husbandry and crop division of the Tennessee extension service advised the planting of forage crops to offset increased costs of feed. In Tennessee, the college advises the time limit for seeding crops as follows:

Alfalfa and Red clover up to September 15.

Rye from August 20 to November 1.

Rye grass, September 1 to October 15.

Barley, September 1 to October 15.

Wheat may be sown in October.

Winter oats, September.

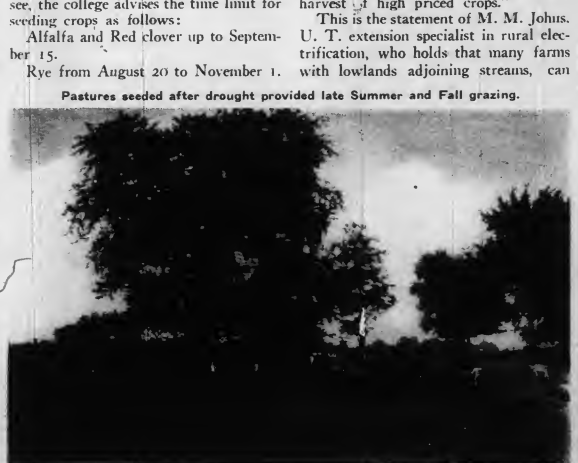
"If Tennessee valley farms were operated by westerners accustomd to irrigation, there would be streams of water flowing through the fields and pastures, and the farmer who was foresighted enough to be prepared to furnish his own rain would be reaping a good harvest of high priced crops."

This is the statement of M. M. Johns. U. T. extension specialist in rural electrification, who holds that many farms with lowlands adjoining streams, can flourish despite such a drought as damaged Tennessee and the rest of the southern states, excepting not more than three, this year.

Now Mr. Johns does not advocate irrigation, such as is practiced in the west. Other agricultural specialists know that soil types are different from the irrigation area of the west, that rolling and hillside land, most of it with rock just underneath, would never repay any investment in irrigation, let alone the problem of perventing wash.

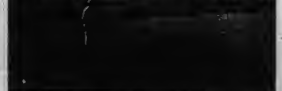
"But there are low, flat fields, with deep soil, that can be supplied water from rivers, small streams, ponds, springs or wells, according to Mr. Johns. "It is not necessary to go to the west coast to find examples of profitable irrigation," Mr. Johns says. "There are a number of irrigation plants in Virginia, pumping water on truck crops and apple orchards, which have paid for themselves out of the profits of one or two years operations. There is scarcely any section of the country where rainfall is so evenly distributed that supplemental irrigation would not be profitable on certain types of crops.

"Intensive crops, such as vegetables and fruits, will frequently pay good returns on a reasonably large investment in an irrigation sprinkling, or pumping system. At the Mississippi experiment station good results have been obtained from a small stream. Even pastures have shown unexpected profits from the application of irrigation water in such semi-humid areas as the western part of Oregon.



"In this section of the country there are many locations where the application of irrigation water would mean merely the placing of a temporary dam across a creek and the plowing of ditches to conduct the water to the fields. Farmers in the hilly section of Union county, Georgia, have taken advantage of this opportunity during the drought. A dozen or more farmers diverted water from small streams and applied it to their gardens and potato patches with the expenditure of a few days labor.

"If large quantities of water are available, distribution may be made over the surface by flooding. Row crops usually are irrigated by flowing the water in between the rows. These furrows must have a slight grade, which means that they should be laid out carefully to permit the water to flow, and at the same time to prevent washing.



"It is too late to plan for irrigation after crops are suffering for moisture, unless the water is at hand and easy to supply. The time to think about next year's irrigation and do some planning for it is right now, when the drought is fresh in mind."

"In order to get the best results from irrigation one must study how to apply the water effectively, how to prepare and lay out the land and ditches, and what type of pumping equipment to select to do the job most economically.

Pastures seeded after drought provided late Summer and Fall grazing.

Duck Season's Opening

A Tennessee River duck hunter. Note the green cane blind on the bow of the boat.

By DICK WOOD

The opening of the duck shooting season is a major event in the lives of over a million sportsmen. Ducks are widely distributed and popular game with all shotgun users.

Migrating ducks often light and tarry for days on ponds, sloughs and creeks, providing sport and duck dinners alike for the farmer lad with his single barrel "Long Tom" and the crank sportsman with his automatic.

Jump shooting on rivers requires considerable skill and provides more real sport than deer hunting. The usual procedure is to engage a local riverman to paddle his skiff on a float down river.

Thrills Around Bend

The start should be made on a considerable 'tide' (freshet) which keeps the ducks near the banks, and the colder the morning, the better. The hunter invariably follows the convex bank, and the skilled boatman keeps the craft hugging drooping foliage, and paddles quietly, from the stern. One or two shooters sit in the bow and bang away at ducks along the banks, within range.

This sort of hunting is far more enjoyable and sportsmanlike than sitting in a cold blind, firing into the occasional flock that drifts into a bunch of decoys.

The river duck hunter anticipates thrilling action around every bend. When the ducks come out or rise perpendicularly, skill is required to hit them from a moving boat. Sometimes a small bunch of ducks will be sighted far down the bank and a long stalk by boat begins. If a straggler or brace of mallards are kicked up on the way down, the hunter has to make a hasty decision on taking the bird in hand or trying for the two in the bush. It usually pays to pass up no fair shots. Sometimes ducks are not frightened by shooting beyond half a mile.

Conservation Problem

It is illegal to use an automatic shotgun of more than three shots. Since wild ducks were diminishing rapidly, something had to be done by the conservationists. I contend it is not the gun, but the man back of it, who hogs the game. My idea would be to restrict hunters in areas where ducks are abundant, such as on the marshes of Maryland, to single shot arms; the river duck hunter will seldom kill the legal limit with the five shot automatic, and the extra shots do save a lot of cripples.

The 12 gauge is almost universally accepted as the best duck bore, but the 20 makes clean kills at slightly shorter ranges and is a more sportsmanlike gun where ducks are abundant. If using a single barrel, I prefer a 30-inch full choke. If a double barrel, 28-inch, right modified, left full choke. None but the best grade duck loads should be used.

BY PETE GETTYS

Maybe there is and maybe there ain't somethin' that God made that's prettier 'n a Jersey heifer—but whatever it is, I ain't never saw it—and evidently there's some who don't share in this opinion for out in Kansas they had a "Beauty Bovine Contest"—open to all the breeds and not judged on the regular points—any cow—scrub or pure-bred, with sufficient "it" could enter the race, and the pickin' of winners was made strictly on the grounds of charm and beauty—artificial beauty aids, of course, were allowed, an' beauty shops did a landoffice business. Rouge, lipstick an' mascara were freely painted on, hoofs were carmined an' eyebrows penciled an' curled, bovine coiffures were baked an' frizzed into permanents that'll be the envy of the barn lot for many months." But the judges selected a registered Holstein as "Miss Bovine America," an' left out the Jersey queens.

Like the old feller who jumped a ten-rail fence—he said he had to 'cause a bear was after him. A lot of us fellers have done a lot of things durin' the last few years that we thought we couldn't, "'cause we had to—the old she-bear depression was crowding us." Now along comes the Dept. of Agriculture an' says when sufficient pressure of hunger an' heat is put on some species of grasshoppers, an' they can't get around fast enough a-hoppin,' they can change into fliers so they can get places quicker an' the young turkeys can't catch 'em. Grown at high temperatures, an' deprived of choice green food, grasshoppers in test cages grew longer wings, got slimmer, an' took on brighter colors.

Yes sir—hard times'll evolve a lot of things—an' make necessity the mother of invention with a vengeance.

When two fellers, both apparently about equally mentally equipped, an' one seems to get along better than the other, a reason's sure to crop out sooner or later. Over in the adjoining county there's a number of good farms and good farmers—all seemin' to get along pretty good—until the drought came this Spring an' their hay crops an' pastures dried up, an' they had to go to town for hay—except one—"just like a lot of other insurance I carry, I always have an extra silo to fall back on that carries me through, an' it has paid for itself many times over this Spring."

The feller who can't afford fire insurance is the one who can't afford to be without it, an' it's the feller who thinks he can't afford an extra silo that needs it worst.

—o—

"Neighbor, this shorely must be God's country around here—walnut an' hickory nuts an' chinky pins an' wild grapes and chestnuts, and a whole wagon-load of stuff that just growed. Now, if a feller just had a yaller hound dog that'd tree ginseng, an' shary nosed razorback hog to root it up—wouldn't he be fixed?"

—o—

It's mighty aggravating to hear some feller who doesn't know what he's talkin' about say that the farmer ain't progressive—that he's operating small producing units wastefully, while industry, puttin' together the efforts of thousands of workers under a single roof, has swept by him and left him hopelessly in the lurch.

The man who believes these things is no closer to the farmer than the caricatures in the funny papers would make him. Those who have worked with the American farmer know that he has set a new record in the history of man in contact with the soil by the quickness and intelligence with which he has assimilated the results of invention an' scientific research, an' made the changes in his daily practice which new appliances and new methods indicated.

Bookkeeping on the farm of course ain't the exact science it is in case of many other commercial businesses—but there are some reliable cross section statistics of our country's successful farming—

But these are gross incomes—still they ain't the total gross, an' every radish pulled, every quart of milk used by the family an' its labor, every chicken an' hog butchered an' every day of housing enjoyed must be added to make a true gross.

Agriculture's more than a profession for makin' a living. It's the life of families workin' at it. There's no other vocation which requires the entire family as does the business of farming. Men who make their livin' farmin' have never prospered to the same degree that some men in other trades and professions have, even with the same or even more capital invested an' the same muscle and brains applied to their business, an' it's doubtful if they ever will.

The farmer can't control the weather, the rain, insects, disease an' other factors entering into the cost of production an' the price at which the product is sold, with the same degree of accuracy as the man runnin' a factory. However, for one that likes farmin' there's other compensations. There's an independence an' down right pleasure in workin' in the open an' with growin' things that only people thoroughly familiar with the farmin' business can understand.

This Summer there was a moon-vine growing on a stump in our side yard. We sat out on the porch about dark an' looked at the buds and waited for 'em to open. As long as we watched, they didn't seem to stir, but take our eyes away for a few minutes, an' lo an' behold! there they were in full bloom just a smilin' up at you.

"Listen, Honey"—said the old Black Mammy—"Look over yonder, in de cawn-fiel.' See dem tall stalks move an' quiver? Yet there's nary a fiel'-hand near 'em. Hear dem big blades rustle? Yet ain't 'ary breath of wind to stir 'em from their sleep. Some one what comes to see sure, that our corn don' blight, that sun don' parch, nor rain don' mildew. Kentucky Farmers Map Future

15 per cent more cattle.
21 per cent more sheep.
21 per cent more poultry.
7 per cent more mules and work horses.
29 per cent less corn.
17 per cent less tobacco.
33 per cent more hay.
41 per cent more alfalfa.
21 per cent more tillable pasture
277 per cent more barley.
50 per cent more rye.
33 per cent more wheat.
17 per cent less cotton.
11 per cent more potatoes.

Groups of farmers called planning committees met in each of the 120 Kentucky counties last Winter, studied their soil conditions, the crops they would grow without any adjustment program, the livestock they normally produce, and then made recommendations regarding increases or decreases that would properly conserve the soil. The State College of Agriculture summarized the figures, which mean increases in forage and hay crops and decreases in intertilled crops.

In 1929, 1,446,000 acres of land in Kentucky were reported as idle or fallow, a large part of which presumably was left bare through Winter, a period of severe leaching. To reduce erosion such land should be seeded in the Fall to a cover crop such as wheat, rye or barley. Hence the recommendations of the planning boards that barley be stepped up 277 per cent, rye 50 per cent and wheat 30 per cent.

Approximately 29 per cent of the tillable land in Kentucky normally is devoted to intertilled crops such as corn and tobacco, and 54 per cent to hay and rotation pasture. A reduction of intertilled crops with a consequent devotion of about two thirds of the land to hay and pasture, it is thought, would do much to conserve the soil resources of the state.

Under Kentucky conditions, the growing of tobacco is considered less injurious to the soil than the growing of corn, because tobacco is harvested earlier than corn and a winter cover crop can be sown immediately.

The Experiment Station reports notes that failing markets, surplus production and the like may justify a reduction in tobacco, but soil conditions call for a reduction in corn rather than tobacco.

In order to maintain fertility and to prevent erosion, somewhat longer crop rotations than now practiced are advised by the Experiment Station. To assure grass crops that will help prevent erosion, more ground limestone and fertilizer must be used. If these practices are followed, it is believed that yields per acre of most crops will be increased and that the quality of pastures will be improved sufficiently to permit an increase in livestock.

More Livestock Possible

The Experiment Station is not entirely in accord with the planning figures regarding livestock increases. Speaking of sowing small grain and grasses at the same time in the Fall of the year, or grasses and clovers in small grain the following Spring, the report says that if this practice could be increased, together with increased grain production, the state might support an increase of 40 per cent in dairy cows, 200 per cent in beef cattle, 50 per cent in sheep and 30 per cent in poultry.

Four extension field agents of the College of Agriculture who travel extensively in the state supervising demonstrations in stock improvement and contacting farmers and county agricultural agents are Wayland Rhoads, Richard C. Miller, Grady Sellards and Stanley Caton.

Said Mr. Rhoads of beef cattle: "Enough distillery slop is being produced in Kentucky to warrant an increase of 40 per cent in beef cattle feeding, if all of it were used. Forty thousand cattle were brought into the state in 1934, when hay and pasture were abundant. Production of hays, alfalfa, lespedeza and other forages are increasing. We need more beef cattle produced on the farms, and could feed more brought in from the west."

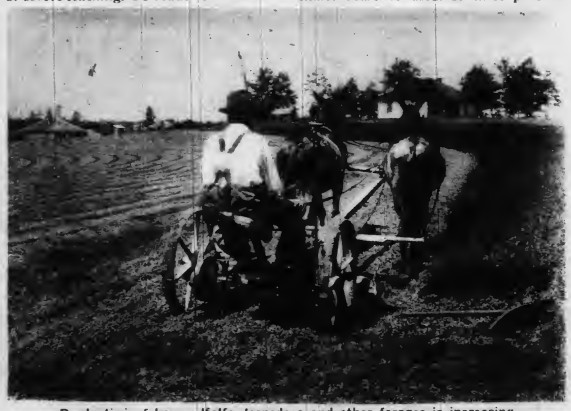
An authority on sheep, Mr. Miller thought there might be an increase from the present million head to a million and a half. Small farmers, especially in the western part of the state, should raise more sheep. Sheep eat a lot of material on the farm that otherwise would go to waste.

Mr. Sellards wants good hogs. The state should produce a million good ones annually, he believes. He also expressed the opinion that the mountain people should raise enough to provide their own meat.

Conservative Mr. Caton refused to get excited about poultry. Climate, nearness to market and general adaptability make Kentucky a good poultry state. Scavenger flocks are the curse of the chicken business, although the College of Agriculture has done almost a miracle job improving flocks of the state. Mr. Caton believes small farmers could well afford to give more attention to poultry. Turkey raising is developing rapidly in the state.

Soil Authority Quoted

Prof. George Roberts, head of the agronomy department of the Agricultural Experiment Station and College of Agriculture, preached soil conservation before many of the boys connected with the "New Deal" were born. "The soil is the fundamental resource of the people," he declared, "and when it becomes impoverished the people soon become impoverished along with it."



Prof. Roberts estimates that 35 million dollars is the annual value of the nitrogen, phosphoric acid and potash washed out of the soils of Kentucky. Plant food losses from erosion are 20 times as great as the removal of plant foods by crops, he declared. He suspects there is a close relation between the amount of soil erosion in a given area and the number of rural people on relief in that area.

This noted soil authority points out that in the bluegrass region of Kentucky, where the soil is still fertile, 60 per cent of the crop and pasture land is kept in pasture and 15 per cent in hay. In the 37 poor counties west of Louisville, only 44 per cent is in pasture.

Future Encouraging

The planning statistics, then, as well as the opinion of men in position to have ideas on the future of Kentucky agriculture, would seem to indicate that farmers need to attend first of all to the fertility problem.

For farmers in position to follow the recommendations of the state's Experiment Station and College of Agriculture, and to make adjustments in keeping with county planning and national conservation programs, the future holds encouraging prospects.

Production of hays, alfalfa, lespedeza and other forages is increasing.

To assure grass crops that will help prevent erosion, more ground limestone and fertilizer must be used.

Cottage Cheese Fruit Salad Ring

One food which makes a most appropriate hot weather dish because of its remarkable versatility in its many uses is cottage cheese.

Cottage cheese may be used as the main part of the menu and mixed with boiled eggs or nuts. In sandwiches, it may be combined with jelly, preserves, raisins, nuts or olives. Salads in which cottage cheese may be used are numerous and as a dessert, it may appear in the form of a pie, pudding or sundae.

A jar of cottage cheese makes an economical food because there are no waste portions to discard.

The U. S. D. A. summarizes the virtues of cottage cheese as: "One of the important meat substitutes. It contains a larger percentage of protein than many meats and furnishes this material at lower cost. In every pound of cottage cheese, there is about one-fifth of a pound of protein, nearly all of which is digestible." Here is the recipe for fruit salad ring:

FRUIT SALAD RING

2 pounds Cottage Cheese.

2 tablespoons plain gelatin.

½ cup water (cold).

Combine gelatin and water. Dissolve it over boiling water. Cool. Add mixture to cottage cheese that has been forced through a potato ricer or sieve. Pack into greased ring mold and chill until firm. Unmold and serve with favorite fruit salad in center.

The Trick of This

BY MARY BROOKS PICKEN

How smart she looks in her thoroughly tailored suit and fetching hat. But no less smart, and just at fetching, is her handbag made in a few hours' time. Crepe paper crochet did it, and she can well be proud, for it cost literally only a few cents, and the bag is sturdy, colorful, and right for any daytime occasion. The crepe paper is cut in strips 3-8 inch wide, stretched and twisted, and crocheted with a steel hook No. 0, 1, or 2. Cut the paper across the grain and do the stretching by hand or with the aid of an inexpensive little gadget called a twister.

The stitch is simple, being a single crochet combined with double crochet, picking up both loops of each stitch. Two contrasting colors of crepe paper were used, vermillion and sand. The directions are easy to follow, and you need only substitute your own chosen colors for the two given.

The bag is made in three pieces —one flat piece 10½ inches wide and 18½ inches long, and two gussets. Start with the flat piece, using sand crepe. Chain sufficient to make a 10½ inch width work will draw up slightly as you crochet). Ch 2 more and turn. Make 1 d c in each ch to end of row. Ch 1, turn. S c in each st, ch 2, turn. Fair Time in Tennessee

Lowing cattle, steaming hamburgers and lost children! Ice cold drinks and canned fruit! Horse shows and a merry go round!

We're right in the middle of the county fair season in Tennessee. Sunk in the red during the early depression years, the county fair is staging a rapid comeback, beginning with 1933, with attendance totals mounting yearly. Where the biggest day at the average county fair didn't run much above 3,000 a few years ago, the mark is now around the 10,000 figure. This year prize money is up, and entries are more prolific.

Tennessee's first county fairs started in August, with the largest number scheduled for September. A few will be staged in October, sponsors preferring to follow the state and district fairs rather than be in advance.

Knoxville, Chattanooga, Jackson, Memphis and Nashville have their fairs beginning in September. The state fair, of course, is at Nashville, but the other exhibitions named have as large attendance and exhibits. Lawrenceburg also has a district fair with attendance figures surprising for the population of the town.

For almost a decade, horse shows have grown in popularity as fair highlights. The larger fairs contribute to this interest with generous prizes and a variety of classes, harness and saddle events. Competition in community horse shows precedes the county affairs, and winners from these latter events usually, if considered good enough, go to the district or state fairs.

However, the county fair hinges about agricultural products, as always. Secretaries, as a rule, are working with state and extension service leaders in promoting purebred stock this year. The building of more creamery stations, construction of cheese plants and shift to livestock due to increased pasturage, launched first under the AAA and now going on as a result of the soil conservation program, has caused a boom in dairy herds. The distribution is beginning to be more general, especially in plateau counties where purebred Jerseys were a rarity a few years ago.

Beef cattle types are increasing also, and the promotion work of various agencies among young people, encouraging beef cattle projects, has been reflected in the fair prize lists, county, district and state.

Tennessee's oldest fair is at Alexandria. For 81 years the DeKalb County Fair has been a going concern and, as its secretary, Rob Roy declares, it is "the Grandpa fair of the south, with a record of every premium paid." Rob Roy is the tycoon of the county fair association and no state fair would be normal without his presence and aid.

The Tennessee State Fair is held this year from Sept. 21 to Sept. 26. Memphis stages the Mid-South Fair Sept. 14-19.

Knoxville, with the Tennessee Valley Fair, follows the state fair, its dates being Sept. 28 to Oct. 3. Chattanooga holds its exhibition the same week as the state fair in Nashville.

Jackson's West Tennessee district fair is to be held the week of Sept. 14-19, and the Lawrence district fair comes Sept. 28-Oct. 3.

Cotton

A cotton bag in which to package raw sugar has been designed by technologists of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, in cooperation with the North Carolina State College. The bag is to be put through a series of practical tests in transporting raw sugar from Hawaii to refineries in California, in comparison with sugar bags made of jute. At present, jute bags are used exclusively. All jute is imported to this country, chiefly from India. While cotton bags will cost more than jute, Bureau officials believe that this disparity in cost may be overcome by developing a cotton fabric that can be reused three or more times. The cotton bag will be definitely cheaper than jute if it can be used three times, since jute bags are used only once.

Ten thousand cotton bags will be used by the Hawaiian sugar association in making test shipments. Officials estimate that if cotton can displace the jute bagging, it will provide an outlet of about 10,000 bales of cotton a year. If all imports of raw sugar were packaged in cotton bags the consumption of cotton would be increased by about 50,000 bales a year.

Rural Electrification

Under the direction of the National Committee on Boys and Girls Club Work, in cooperation with state and community 4-H Club leaders, a national program on rural electrification, is this year, attracting nation-wide attention. In connection with this contest, 4-H boys and girls are offered a number of prizes including eight all-expense trips to the 15th National 4-H Club Congress to be held in Chicago Nov. 27-Dec. 5, and three cash college scholarships of $400, $300 and $200, which are provided by the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company.

Refrigeration

Apple growers of the Shenandoah-Cumberland section, who export to England, will get better returns on their early fall crop if the fruit is shipped under refrigeration, according to the Bureau of Plant Industry, U. S. Department of Agriculture. This is particularly true in September, when exceedingly warm outside temperatures are likely to bring about decay in fruit in transit. Apples shipped without refrigeration usually arrive on the foreign market fully ripe and with varying amounts of decay.

Drought and heat sent an unusual amount of corn into silos.

Farmer's Share

The farmer's share in the consumer food dollar is the subject of a recent study made by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics. The study shows that the average city working man's family spent for 58 foods surveyed, $331.00 in 1935, of which the farmer received $138.00. In 1933, at the depression low, the city consumer spent $264.00, for the same foods, of which the farmer received $92.00. The difference between the amount received by the farmer and the price paid by the consumer is the margin going to processors, transportation agencies, and distributors. This margin was $193.00 in 1935, including about $11 for processing taxes.

Roughage

Shifting acreage from soil depleting crops to such soil improving crops as alfalfa serves the best interests of the dairy industry in several ways, according to O. E. Reed, Chief of the U. S. Bureau of Dairy Industry. Growing and feeding good quality roughage enables the dairyman to produce the best milk and the cheapest milk, and conserving the soil fertility with grasses and legumes pays extra dividends, Mr. Reed declares. In a study of the costs of growing various dairy feeds in 16 states, it was found that good alfalfa hay produced 100 pounds of nutrients at a cost of 83 cents; oats cost $2.02 for each 100 pounds; corn silage $1.54 and clover hay 97 cents.

Building Lines

Over 4,200 miles of rural electric lines in 12 states will be financed with more than $4,500,000 allocated from funds available to the Rural Electrification Administration, according to an announcement made by Morris L. Cooke, Administrator. More than $1,000,000 of the funds will be available to build seven new rural line projects in Georgia, Kentucky, Massachusetts, North Carolina, Ohio, Washington and Wisconsin. Money from the REA has now financed over 17,750 miles of distribution lines serving 67,000 farm customers. Activities of the RVA has intensified interest in many farming sections in the possibility of electrification.

Butter

Butter prices will be materially higher this fall. Drought injury to pastures and feed crops radically cut down milk production, and butter and cheese prices started upward during July. The United States entered the fall with storage stocks of butter and cheese 15 per cent lower than a year ago.

* * * *

Canning Crops

Canning crops were severely affected by the drought, particularly in the important canning crop producing states of Wisconsin, Michigan, Minnesota, Ohio, Illinois, Indiana and New York. The crop of green peas produced a total pack of about 17,000,000 cases as compared with 24,698,000 cases last year. Other canning crops suffered in proportion.

* * * *

Floods

Only close cooperation between farmers and engineers can solve the nation's flood problem, according to H. H. Bennett, chief of the Soil Conservation Service.

Upstream farmers must follow practices that will reduce excessive water runoff at the same time that downstream engineers are building dams and levies on the trunk rivers.

Bennett points out that until a few months ago, flood control was regarded strictly as an engineering problem, but agricultural methods for reducing high water levels at their source was being fully recognized. As an example, the severe flood in June of 1935, at Stillwater, Oklahoma is cited. At that time, two closely associated streams ran high over their banks, while a third stream did not go over its normal banks in spite of the fact that the rainfall was practically the same over the three watersheds. The watershed of the stream which did not overflow had been treated, over 90 per cent, with erosion-control practices.

"I am convinced," said Mr. Bennett, "that from now on we should, and will, tackle the problem at its source—in upland fields, pastures and on other sloping parts of watersheds, where flood waters begin to accumulate and where silt loads are picked up."

Poultry

An unusual rise in egg prices continuing through the latter half of this year is predicted by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics. Poultry prices on the other hand, will decline more than the usual seasonal amount, due to the increased number of chicks hatched and to the probability that the drought will lead farmers to sell more chickens because of shorter feed supplies and higher feed prices. The drought is viewed as the decisive factor in the egg and poultry outlook because of its effect on the feed situation. The stock of eggs in cold storage is very small.

* * * *

Wheat

Wheat prices for this crop year will average higher than last year, according to the Bureau of Agricultural Economics. World supplies are much smaller than a year ago. World production, excluding Russia and China, is estimated at 210,000,000 bushels less than last year; and the world carry-over is 210,000,000 bushels under last year. Current reports from Russia indicate that that country will not harvest as large a crop as last year.

Here's How To Treat FOOT ITCH ATHLETE'S FOOT

PAY NOTHING TILL RELIEVED

Send Coupon

According to the Government Health Bulletin, No. E-28, at least 50% of the adult population of the United States are being attacked by the disease known as Athlete's Foot.

Usually the disease starts between the toes. Little watery blisters form and the skin cracks and peels. After a while the itching becomes intense and you feel as though you would like to scratch off all the skin.

Beware of It Spreading

Often the disease travels all over the bottom of the feet. The soles of your feet become red and swollen. The skin also cracks and peels, and the itching becomes worse and worse.

Get rid of this disease as quickly as possible, because it is very contagious and it may go to your hands or even to the under arm or crotch of the legs.

Most people who have Athlete's Foot have tried all kinds of remedies to cure it without success. Ordinary germicides, antiseptics, salve or ointments seldom do any good.

Here's How to Treat It

The germ that causes the disease is known as Tinea Trichophytan. It buries itself deep in the tissues of the skin and is very hard to kill. A test made shows it takes 20 minutes of boiling to kill the germ, so you can see why the ordinary remedies are unsuccessful.

H. F. was developed solely for the purpose of treating Athlete's Foot. It is a liquid that penetrates and dries quickly. You just paint the affected parts. It peels off the tissue of the skin where the germ breeds.

Itching Stops Immediately

As soon as you apply H. F. you will find that the itching is immediately relieved. You should paint the affected parts with H. F. night and morning until your feet are well. Usually this takes from three to ten days, although in severe cases it may take longer or in mild cases less time.

H. F. will leave the skin soft and smooth. You will marvel at the quick way it brings you relief; especially if you are one of those who have tried for years to get rid of Athlete's Foot without success.

H. F. Sent On Free Trial

Sign and mail the coupon and a bottle of H. F. will be mailed you immediately. Don't send any money and don't pay the postman any money, don't pay anything any time unless H. F. is helping you. If it does help us know you will be glad to send us $1 for the treatment at the end of ten days. That's how much faith we have in H. F. Read, sign, and mail the coupon today.

GORE PRODUCTS, INC.,
803 Perdido St., New Orleans, La. 6-F

Please send me immediately a complete treatment for foot trouble as described above. I agree to use it according to directions. If at the end of 10 days my feet are getting better I will send you $1. If I am not entirely satisfied I will return the unused portion of the bottle to you within 15 days from the time I receive it.

Eliminating Off-Flavors in Milk

Under the heading, "Some Facts About Milk Flavor," the Dairy Department of the Kentucky College of Agriculture makes the following comments:

There are only two principal causes of off-flavors in milk at the time it is drawn from the udder. Perhaps the most common are flavors due to feed eaten. Chief among offenders are weeds such as wild onion, ragweed and bitterweed. Certain green forage crops such as rye and green alfalfa cause pronounced off-flavors in milk unless grazing periods are properly spaced. Other green feeds known to affect milk flavor are cowpeas, beet tops, rape, cabbage, turnips and kale.

Most feed and weed flavors pass into the milk within 30 minutes after the feed is consumed and remain for a period of three to four hours. Therefore, if the cows are removed from the pasture to the dry lot or clean pasture several hours before milking, most off-flavors will be eliminated. Usually four hours is sufficient, but with such weeds as onions and bitter weed six to seven hours should be allowed.

Full rations of alfalfa hay, green alfalfa clover hay or corn silage produce a strong feed flavor when fed one to two hours before milking, but do not flavor the milk appreciably when fed four to five hours before milking. Green barley, wild oats and foxtail produce feed flavors. Improperly cured hay transmits a musty flavor to the milk.

Another class of off-flavors frequently encountered are those depending on the physiological condition of the cow.

The statement is sometimes made that milk from cows on pasture in the Spring contains a "grass" flavor. This flavor may usually be traced to a digestive disturbance in the cow, caused by the sudden change from dry feed to new grass. After a few days, the cow becomes adjusted to her new diet, the intestinal disturbance is corrected, and the slight off-flavor largely disappears. This "grass" flavor in milk may be minimized greatly by allowing the cows to graze for only a short period each day until they have become accustomed to green feed.

Another source of undesirable flavors in milk is the cow in advanced lactation or those having a diseased or inflammatory condition of the udder.

One of the first symptoms of garget or mastitis is an increase in the sodium and chlorine or salt content of the milk giving the milk a characteristic salty flavor. Cows that have been milking for a long time will sometimes produce salty milk even though they have no symptoms of a diseased udder.

If only a few cows are producing such milk it will usually be diluted to such an extent by mixing with the milk from other cows that its effect will not be detected. However, the quality of the entire output will be lowered slightly.

The Farm Bureau In Kentucky

By L. A. VENNES
Kentucky College of Agriculture

Since the day Daniel Boone first came through the Cumberland Gap into the wilderness, which is now the State of Kentucky, and shot for himself a mess of squirrels, the settlers and residents of the state have been individualists. Each pioneer's farm and household was self-sufficient and except for a few necessities, such as salt, gun powder and coffee all else was produced on the farm. That the success of a pioneer depended upon his individual courage, ingenuity and industry, developed an independent type of citizen and this characteristic still is apparent today.

Ben Niles, President

At various times in the state's history, farmers, in large numbers, have joined general farm organizations, but these movements have, in the past, been short lived.

The Kentucky Farm Bureau Federation is the only active general farm organization in the state. Not until it was reorganized in April, 1933, have Kentucky farmers shown a definite interest in its development. At the time of the reorganization, there were only 300 paid up Farm Bureau members, but the membership has grown steadily until there are local organizations in 59 of the 120 counties of the state, with a total membership of about 6,000. Henderson County leads in membership with 650. Campaigns to increase membership are being carried on in all counties.

This interest in the Farm Bureau Movement can probably be attributed to four major causes. First, the depression with its accompanying low agricultural prices, farm foreclosures and lowered standard of living brought many of the farmers to see their problem as one common to all agriculture and one impossible to solve by individual effort.

Second: The Agricultural Adjustment Act and subsequent agricultural legislation sponsored by the general farm organizations have been pointed to as to what may be accomplished for agriculture if the farmers unite their forces. Furthermore, the method provided for administring the Agricultural Adjustment Act within the counties lent itself very well to furthering the cause of farm organizations.

Third: Taxation is always a live question when it affects agriculture. The Farm Burau grasped its opportunity of appealing to, and serving farmers by fighting for a sound tax program. Their tax program called for (1) removal of all state property taxes, (2) income tax on personal income and corporate net incomes, (3) revised inheritance tax to meet the 80 per cent federal offset, (4) selected luxury sales taxes, (5) adequate liquor, wine and beer taxes, (6) reduction of automobile licenses. During a special tax session of the State Legislature, a law was passed taxing cigarette sales within the State. This bill was unpopular among burley tobacco growers and the Farm Bureau gained popularity by its fight against the bill.

Fourth: The growth in membership of the Farm Bureau has been due in no small measure to the ability and efforts of the general secretary, Ben Kilgore, and the guidance of its board of directors. At the time that he became Secretary, finances and membership in the organization were at a low ebb. Mr. Kilgore has built an organization that is now being felt throughout the state.

Mr. Kilgore was born in North Carolina and received his early training in that state. He studied agriculture and received his degree of Bachelor of Science from Iowa State College at Ames, Iowa.

BEN W. KILGORE,
Secretary Kentucky Farm Bureau

The board of directors include: Ben E. Niles, Henderson; J. L. Thurmond, Grocery; Wm. C. Dale, Finchville; R. E. Nute, Valley Station; M. D. Royce, Winchester; and Ernest Rice, Hardinsburg. Mr. Niles is president.

Garrard 4-H'ers Garner Awards

With 11 carload grand prizes and six individual grand championships to its credit in 14 years, Kentucky's famous Garrard county 4-H Club is out to capture another purple ribbon at the annual Fat Cattle Show to be held at the Bourbon Stock Yards in Louisville.

Paul Rich

Sixty-one purebred Aberdeen-Angus calves are being fitted for the show in November. And every boy and girl in the club declares they are going to win again, take both carload and individual grand championships. And, judging from their past record, they certainly stand a good chance of doing it.

Julian Price Browne

Fourteen shows have been held, beginning in 1922. The first two years did not see Garrard county at the top, either in the groups or on individuals. Then these youngsters gained supremacy. Beginning with 1924, the Garrard county 4-H Club has made a clean sweep in grand champion carloads with the single exception of the year 1929, when they gave way to a heavy carload of black cattle fed out by Bottorff Bros., noted farmers of Goshen, Ky.

James Charlotte Sanders

Four club members boasts this progressive organization, have taken six individual calf grand championships to Garrard county. Julian Price Bourne carried off top honors in 1926 and 1927; Paul Rich took them both in 1928 and 1930; F. L. Sutton captured the laurels in 1931, and Miss James Charlotte Sanders was the winner in 1935.

Louis Sutton

Finishing from 50 to 100 calves every year, the Garrard county 4-H club has received more than $150,000 in payment for calves and in cash premiums in 14 years. It now is probably the most famous county in the United States in the 4-H club baby beef project.

Teaching Biddy To Lay and Pay

BY A. B. BRYAN

Seven Oaks poultry farm, two and one-half miles from Spartanburg, S. C., is the laboratory in which T. L. Green and his son, O. H. Green, have found diverting interest and satisfying profit in working out scientific poultry production practices that led to heavier production of large eggs. Incidentally, Seven Oaks farm has become the center of a better-poultry community through the sale of hatching eggs and baby chicks to neighboring farmers.

It is 10 years since T. L. Green, growing tired of his grocery business in town, bought 16 1-2 acres of Piedmont rolling land a few miles from town, equipped it with poultry farm needs and conveniences, and started out with a determination to produce egg layers that would be profit payers.

Skillful Breeding

For seven years, Seven Oaks farm has been the home of 2,000 or more large White Leghorns that average 175 or more eggs each per year. Aiding in the good work, O. H. Green, son of T. L., graduate of Clemson, the state agricultural college has joined his trained efforts with the father's to make the best better.

This hen laid 313 eggs in her pullet year.

The Greens are frank to ascribe their success to superior breeding stock, careful management according to advice of poultry specialists, and trap-nesting.

"Eight or ten years would be too short a time to breed up a flock to lay as our hens lay if we had started with poor run-down stock; but we didn't," said the senior Green. "We started with the best obtainable by purchasing from a breeder who was a constant importer of high-producing birds. We then ordered 12 pedigreed males. The results were so favorable we have had for several years hundreds of hens that produce 200 to 300 eggs per hen yearly, and they are some of the biggest White Leghorn hens in the South.

Trap Nests Don't Lie

"Without the aid of trap-nests we could have done little. The only way to tell how many eggs a hen lays is to trap-nest her and count the eggs. Which hens are laying of-colored, badly shaped, or pee-wee eggs can be told in no other way.

"We weed out hens that lay small eggs. We have hens that produce eggs weighing 26 ounces per dozen. Our pullets, because of their excellent body weight and development at maturity, start off by laying large eggs."

Sales have spread to a half dozen or more states, with never a dissatisfied customer. The premium on eggs and chicks sold for breeding has been a big factor in the profit made at Seven Oaks.

IT'S FIREMAN JOE, NOW; FORMER FIGHTER JOINS; GOES ON DUTY FRIDAY

Ringing of fire-alarm bells, which often summon firemen from their beds, are not hearalded by a ten-second warning whistle.

This, however is not expected to bother Joe Anderson, 29 years old, former boxer and Covington fight promoter, when he assumed the role of a Covington fireman Friday. Trained in the ring to "get going" at the sound of the gong, Anderson is expected to make some of the seasoned firemen step lively to beat him to a place on the apparatus.

Appointment of Anderson as a member of the Covington Fire Department was announced by City Manager Theodore Kluemper Friday. Anderson passed the civil service examination in June, 1935, and a medical examination Thursday before Dr. J. H. Schultze, medical examiner of the Civil Service Board. He headed the eligible list with an average of 94½.

He will fill the vacancy caused by the death Wednesday night of Albert T. Krohman.

FORGET-ME-NOT

Another year has passed, and each year the disabled American veterans try through the sale of Forget-me-nots to help their unfortunate buddies Those buddies who fought and gave their best for American and American ideals. The money so raised is used for the rehabilitation of those comrades of ours who are unable to help themselves.

The work is far from completed, but each year we advance a bit toward our goal. The D. A. V. stands for justice to the war-time disabled, and it stands because America has not forgotten The Forget-Me-Not reminds them not to forget. So this year we appeal to you again in the second Forget-Me-Not sale to be held in Florence, Saturday, Sept. 26, not to refuse the Forget-Me-Not girls, who are so willing to give their service in this great work.

Mrs. Hubert Waller, Adjutant of Disabled American Veterans Auxiliary Twin City Chapter No. 19, Covington, Ky., has been appointed chairman of Florence again, and assures you, your help will be greatly appreciated.

RECORD CROWD ATTENDS SALE

CONDUCTED BY R. G. KINMAN REALTY CO., AT FARM OF BEN PADDOCK NEAR HEBRON. $156 PER ACRE HIGH BID.

A record crowd to attend any public sale was on hand at the Paddock farm last Thursday to witness one of the best auction sales of its kind in recent years. According to Mr. R. G. Kinman, this sale was one of the largest and most successful he has ever conducted since he has been in the real estate business.

H. S. McGlasson, Hebron, was the purchaser, the purchase price being $166.00 per acre. A favorable report was given in regard to the farming implements and live stock. Cows sold from $55 to $88.

The sale was conducted by the R. G. Kinman Realty Co., of Covington., who have established themselves in good standing with the people of this county, having handled quite a number of land transactions throughout this area this summer. Chester Tanner and R. G. Kinman were the auctioneers.

OUR WEATHER PROPHET

Since the enlargement of the Recorder, we have engaged a weather prophet to predict the weather for the coming week. We have selected a man that has observed the weather conditions closer than anyone else in the county—Mr. Ezra Popham, of Limaburg, Ky.

Mr. Popham has the reputation of being able to tell exactly how much rain fell at different intervals and also has a record of weather conditions for years past. Very few people can match his ability to predict the weather unless they have access to instruments used by weather bureaus.

Last week, for instance, Mr. Popham predicted the weather almost to the day. We find it very interesting to follow the report each week and feel sure our subscribers will be interested also.

Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Walton and daughter Margaret were brief callers in Walton Tuesday night. Mrs. Walton is having dental work done by the local dentist of that place.

FLORENCE W. M. S.

The Woman's Missinary Society of the Florence Baptist Church has had a happy and most interesting summer. It has grown steadily in both membership and achievements. There are at present 62 enrolled members, an increase of more than half the original number.

The members, with delightful country homes begin to entertain as early as May. When Mrs. Chester Tanner and mother, were hostesses during that grand spring month, their lovely home and fine hospitality will long be remembered by the crowd of fifty or more which spent the day in that christian environment. Then came Mrs. Roy Lutes in June. Her picturesque home and most interesting family, and her hospitality were thoroughly enjoyed at an all-day meeting. Young and old were present on this day and they had arranged entertainment for all. Then came the faithful Mrs. Gertrude Fossett in July, who always entertains perfectly on her beautiful, spacious grounds near town.

Mrs. Pearl Conrad who lives in Latonia, was a delightful hostess in August, when she spared no pains in arranging a most entertaining day.

Then came the climax in September. Mrs. John Brown and daughter, Mrs. Cecile Frain were hostesses to a large number of members and visitors. It was indeed a perfect day. Two news members Mrs. Lillian Sayers and Mrs. Alma Johnson were welcomed. Mrs. Sarah Blackwell led the program. Mrs. Holden gave the devotional and Mrs. DeMoisey entertained the assemblage with a splendid address on Christian Education.

When the program and all business was completed, Mr. Brown came forth with his part of the entertainment. Just leave it to a man for the big act. He invited every one to the yard and served watermelons and cantelopes by the wheelbarrow loads. They were most delicious.

Mrs. Marie Tanner and Mrs. Olga Brown will be joint hostesses in October. The week of prayer service will be held Friday, Sept. 25, at the church, beginning at 1:30, with Mrs. Chester Tanner leading.

The societies wish to express thanks to members of other denominations and friends for their presence and always appreciate their help.

COUNTY SCHOOLS TO HOLD MEETING

IN REGARD TO AN ATHLETIC ORGANIZATION FOR BOONE COUNTY SCHOOLS—MEETING SCHEDULED FOR OCTOBER.

For some years athletic directors and school officials have talked of organizing some kind of an Athletic Conference made up of Boone County Schools. Heretofore, nothing has been done about it except wishing and talking. At last definite steps are being taken to perfect th organization.

The matter was discussed at the recent Boone County Teachers Meeting in a departmental group of athletic directors and principals. As the meeting plans were made to organize, Friday evening, September 18 at the Burlington school. At the Friday night session, every school was represented by the principal and athletic director. Supt. Norris met with the group, thus giving his support and encouragement. After a thorough discussion of what the Boone County Athletic Conference would have as its purpose and what athletic events it would sponsor, a committee was appointed to draft a Constitution to be presented at the next regular meeting to be held at Florence early in October. At this time the Conference organization and plans for the ensuing year should be completed. It is believed that every school in the county will become a member.

While basketball is the chief athletic game of the schools of Boone County, it is hoped that the organization of a Conference will help develop a more widespread interest in other forms of athletics. Soft, ball, volley ball, track and tennis are all games that have a popular appeal, and should have a much more prominent place in the school athletic program, according to school officials as well as the sport loving public.

All people cannot hope to be interested in the same type of game. It is the hope of those connected witth the Boone County Conference to satisfy the interests of the friends of the schools as well as the different types of students.

ADVISORY COUNCIL MEETING

Plans were completed for the annual Get-to-Gether at a recent meeting of the Advisory Council of the Boone Homemakers' Club. October 22nd has been set as the date for Boone's annual meeting. Club members and their friends are invited to attend. All members of the Advisory Council were present with Miss Logan and Miss Mary H. Gillaspie, Home Demonstration Agent.

Jennings Craig spent one day this week in the coal section purchasing coal.

Editorial of the Week

THE SWEAT OF COMMON FOLKS

Taxes, little or great, are the sweat of common folks," said the Portland Oregonian in a recent editorial.

The "common folks" are the great taxpayers of this country—sooner or later, directly or indirectly, they pay almost all of the cost of government. There aren't enough "rich folks" to tax to make a dent in the Federal, state and local tax budgets.

Authoritative surveys have shown that if government took all the net income of persons in the higher income brackets, plus all the net income of American corporations, revenue would still fall far short of meeting outgo.

The moral is plain. Tax reduction is in the interest of every citizen and every business—and the greatest beneficairy of all would be the person of small means and the small business. The new excess profits tax is a case in point. Tax experts have pointed out cases where, under its provisions, some very large corporations can actually pay less in taxes than they did formerly—while almost all small corporations will have to pay more. The principal burden of the law will fall on the little fellow.

If you earn $25 a week, taxes take six or seven of those dollars—because what you pay for the article you buy must also cover its proportionate share of the hundred and one taxes paid by the producer, the manufacturer, the transporter, the insurer, the broker, the agent, the retailer, ad infinitum.

TRAVELING BY RAILROAD

A modern steam locomotive pulling a train of 13 Pullman cars can be accelerated to 90 miles per hour in about three minutes.

With less than six per cent of the world's land area and population, the United States has 32 per cent of the entire world's railroad mileage.

The railroads buy more than 70,000 individual commodities, ranging all the way from pins and needles to bridges and locomotives.

Many freight trains are now operated on schedules almost as fast as passenger trains.

These facts, issued by the association of American Railroads, give an idea of the astonishing progress that has been made in railroad transportation. The chances are that more improvement has been achieved in operation since the war than in any like period since the industry's inception.

When you take a trip on a modern railroad train today, you use the highest developed media of transport the world has yet seen. It may be hot and humid outside, but inside your car spring weather prevails—because the rails have spent more than $50,000,0000 on air-conditioning since 1932. The train is practicalyl silent and vibrationless—and it can carry you through a dust storm without soiling your white suit. It will take you to your destination in a remarkably short time, and at a very low cost. Should you eat meals enroute, you'll find that dining cars no longer practice the "robbery" of which they used to be accused—the cost for meals is the same as in any good restaurant.

More Americans are traveling by rail now than in many years—because they have discovered that no other kind of traveling is as comfortable, as certain, and as economical in the light of service received.

USING OUR LEISURE TIME

Today the average person has more leisure than he had a generation ago, consequently he has more opportunities for cultural pursuits, if his inclinations are in that direction.

The average work-day is shorter and thus even the manual laborer is enabled to share in the leisure which an advancing civilization has made possible.

How to suitably employ leisure time is consequently becoming a rather important problem, the solution of which must naturally be found by each individual for himself. Spare time may well be devoted in part to studies which lead to advancement in one's occupation or profession, or even to preparation for a more desirable calling. Correspondence courses afford many opportunities in these directions.

For those who have found their life work and are succeeding in it, leisure offers the means of broadening the mental vision by a better acquaintance with the masterpieces of literature and art, by developing a better appreciation of usic, obtaining a better grasp of national and world affairs—in short it enables one to live a fuller life.

For attaining these ends almost unlimited facilities are within the reach of practically everyone, through books, newspapers, magazines, motion pictures, and radio. By the judicious use of these, entertainment and education may go hand in hand.

The future happiness and prosperity of most of us depend largely upon how we employ our spare time.

WHAT OF LIBERTY?

The WEEKLY CONSTITUTIONAL

by MAX BERNS

WHEN TWO LAWS CLASH

What happens when one law conflicts with another?

Under our Constitution there can be no conflict between Congress and the Courts, but only between different laws. The conflict arises because our system of government provides for laws of four different degrees of authority as follows:

I The Federal Constitution (the "supreme law");

II Federal Laws passed by Congress;

III State Constitutions;

IV State Statutes passed by state legislatures.

State laws (III or IV) are inferior to Federal laws (I or II) and a law passed by Congress (II) is inferior to the Constitution (1).

Obviously, a citizen cannot obey two laws that conflict with each other, because if he obeys one he disobeys the other. Therefore the inferior law necessarily must give way to the superior law. In such cases, "we the people" specify in our Constitution that the Supreme Court shall act for us and decide. But the Court does not decide whether a law is good or bad; it merely lays the inferior law alongside the Constitution as the supreme law and decides that the two harmonize or conflict. If they conflict the Court simply so states—that is, declares the inferior law "unconstitutional."

The rule is simple and the procedure unescapable: When one law conflicts with another, the inferior law necessarily must give way to the superior law.

Without such a procedure, inferior laws would take precedence over superior laws and ultimately nullify our Constitution, which "we the people" specify is "the supreme law."

CAMPAIGN AGAINST THE HATED FARM THIEF

The Kentucky Farmers Home Journal, 71 year old farm publication, has launched a state-wide drive against farm thievery thruout the State. This war against thieves has been waged in 13 counties, and it is the hope of Mr. Vaughan Spencer, publisher of this paper, to extend the campaign to cover every county in the State by the first of next year. Thousands of Kentucky farmers have joined in the efforts of Mr. Spencer to stamp out farm thievery, and hundreds more are joining every week.

This campaign is the first of its kind in Kentucky. Statistics reveal that farm thievery has been growing within the last few years. The annual loss through the theft of farm property runs into billions of dollars and organized farm thievery has become a serious menace to the countryside. Mr. Spencer was born and reared on a Kentucky farm, and realizes what it means to a farmer to cultivate a crop of tobacco and have it stolen; to raise chickens and have them taken from their roosts by the dozens; and to have fattened hogs and cattle driven from their pastures and butchered by the unscrupulous thief who preys upon the farmer. That is why the Kentucky Farmers Home Journal is dedicating itself to this cause—because it realizes the need of drastic and immediate measures against the farm thief, and because it wishes to see the farmers' property protected.

Because farm thievery is so widespread in Kentucky, the Kentucky Farmers Home Journal is offering a $25 reward for the arrest and conviction of thieves stealing from the premises of all farmers who join this great campaign. A metal thief warning sign to display on his front gate is furnished to each member. Money for payment of rewards is in the bank.

Mr. Spencer personally delivered three reward checks on September 3. Two rewards were paid in Breckenridge county, and the other in Butler. These rewards were paid for the apprehension of chicken thieves who stole from members of this campaign. Several more thieves are in jail awaiting trial.

The Stop The Farm Thief Campaign, sponsored by Mr. Vaughan Spencer, editor and publisher of the Kentucky Farmers Home Journal, is adding about 500 members a week. This great drive is one of the most worthwhile campaigns ever sponsored to improve farm living conditions in Kentucky and it is the duty of every Kentucky farmer to rally behind the Farmers Home Journal in this fight against the farm thief.

QUALITY LEADS TO SUCCESS

On Monday morning, workmen began to remodel the Quality Sample Shoe Shop, 627 Madison Ave., Covington. The management attributes their rapid growth to the smart shoppers of Northern Kentucky. These shoppers realize that this store is giving them shoes of fine quality at prices that are one-half or more less price than their real value, and at the same time the highest quality merchandise that can be bought. The management invites the ladies and Misses who have not taken advantage of these remarkable low prices, higher Quality Shoes, to drop in and look over without any obligation to buy.

The Quality Sample Shoe Shop says its pledge shall always be: "The Highest Quality at the lowest prices and they are all Nationally Advertise Brands which make the quality beyond question!

Fresh coffee stains and most old ones can be removed by washing, on washable materials. Traces that remain after washing may be removed by placing in the sun or by using bleaching agents. Pouring boiling water on the stain from a height of two or three feet is sometimes used on fresh stains.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

By REV. HAROLD L. LUNDQUIST, Dean of the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.

© Western Newspaper Union.

Lesson for September 27

REVIEW: THE SPREAD OF CHRISTIANITY IN WESTERN ASIA

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 13:24-33.

GOLDEN TEXT—They rehearsed all that God had done with them, and how he had opened the door of faith unto the Gentiles.—Acts 14:27.

PRIMARY TOPIC—How the Good News Spread.

JUNIOR TOPIC—How the Good News Spread.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Christianity Reaching Out.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Spread of Christianity in Western Asia.

Review Sunday provides a needed opportunity to determine not only whether the class members have learned and retained the truth taught, but, what is of equal importance, whether the teacher has accomplished the purpose in mind at the beginning of the series.

What was the aim set before us for the three months? "To lead the student to an understanding of New Testament Christianity, and to beget in him the desire and purpose to live the Christian life and to win others to faith in the Lord Jesus."

The test which we apply as the twelve lessons of the past quarter pass in review is

As a student, have I seen in the spread of Christianity the operation of a gospel of salvation which is the power of God for my salvation? Or, if I am saved, have I been stirred to a more earnest Christian life and a real passion for the salvation of others?

As a teacher, have I really used my opportunity to win the members of my class to faith in the Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ? Have I brought to bear on the lives of those in my class who are Christians the Word of God, stirring them to holiness of life and zeal for God's cause on earth?

If we cannot reply in the affirmative, should we not ask whether our efforts to teach have been largely fruitless? But let us not be discouraged, for even as we now review the lessons we have studied together the Holy Spirit is ready to do His work and apply the truth to hearts and lives.

To many teachers the preparation and presentation of the review lesson is the most difficult of any during the quarter. To the student who has given little or nothing to the preparation of weekly lessons it is often a rather disconnected and uninteresting recapitulation of twelve lessons.

A suggested method of gathering up the essential teachings of these lessons is to group them around the following seven points:

The spread of Christianity after our Lord's departure into the glory was distinguished by the fact that

1. It was by the preaching of a faith that began and continued in the power and demonstration of the Holy Spirit. God honors such preaching and teaching in our day.

2. It was a spiritual movement that demonstrated its God-given power by thriving on persecution. One wonders whether much of the activity of the church in our day has not fallen into the doldrums of pious respectability. Perhaps we need a little persecution.

3. It was not the propagation of theological theory or of a religious sect or party. It was a movement of the Spirit of God which saved men, and saved them to win and serve their fellow-men. True Christian service is nobler and more sacrificial than any non-Christian social service.

4. It was a movement in which laymen as well as religious workers had a place. Philip the layman served with Paul the apostle. Lay men and women let us be awake to our responsibilities and privileges.

5. Difference of opinion was not permitted to hinder God's work. Do we know enough to let God work among us, even if he does not work just as we think he should?

6. The missionary spirit of the preacher was carried over to the convert. This is a succession which God has continued to our day. Are we co-operating and helping it forward?

7. The gospel is for all men, Gentile as well as Jew, whether yellow, red, black, or white. The great commission is still our command and our authority to pray, give, and go, that all men may hear the gospel of the Grace of God.

THE GARDEN

NEXT YEAR

By John S. Gardner, Kentucky College of Agriculture

For the most part, gardening is over for the year for except to harvest what is now maturing, there is nothing to do beyond to speculate on the chances of this or that beating the frost, and to hope that the frost will come late.

Gardens this year were not always all one hoped. Affhand, this may be excused by the dearth of rain-fall, but the fact is that here and there were gardens that behaved nobly in spite of the drouth. This was no accident, but came about by the gardener's following his usual pratice of working into his soil a vast amount of vegetable matter for breaking-down into that magic material called "humus." Thus the soil was made spongy and enabled to absorb and hold for the vegetables' needs the few rains that fell.

Strangely, had the season been wet, this same humus would have been of help, as assuring soil drainage. Humus is a soil "conditioner" in any year.

The usual way to assure humus a-plenty is to turn under a heavy coat of manure, but not all gardeners can get manure in an adequate amount; some can scarcely get it at all. This need not trouble them, but they may condition their garden by sowing a winter-growing craop to turn under in the spring to follow. In fact, this practice is in some ways superior to that of spreading manure for cover crop conserves soil fertility that would be lost through the rigors of the winter and tends to lessen loss of topsoil through washing.

The most reliable cover crop is rye for it survives the coldest weather, particularly the Rosen and Abruzzi vareties.

Second-best, is wheat, but its lower seed price this year and its being perhaps more easy to procure locally in any year makes it first choice with many persons.

The finest humus is that from barley, but because of its winter-tenderness it is not safe to sow barley except in those portions of the state where the winters are dependably mild.

Ground preparation for these three is not critical, only shallow stirring of the topsoil is needed; the seed is covered by dragging or with a rake. Usual sowing rate is one bushel per acre, but, to make sure of dense cover this amount should be doubled, two pecks on a garden 100 feet by 100 feet. Seeding may be delayed until after first frost, but more growth will result if the seed can be sown earlier. In fact now is the time to seed nown the spent portions of the garden to follow over the rest as the vegetables are removed. Rye, wheat or barley add no new plant-food, but merly conserve the fertility already in the soil.

Other humus-making crops are the freens, particularly those of the cabbage family, and the winter hardy varieties of these. They are Siberian kale and Seven Top turnip greens; the less hardy Southern Curled mustard and Dwarf Essex rape may be used, as well, for they may make quite appreciable growth before the cold cuts them down. The greens make less matter than do the conventional cover crops but they are worthy makeshifts becauuse of the ease with which they can be sown and because of their low seed expense.

And, now, in concluding both this colum and the 1936 series, the suggestion is offered to all gardeners that they prepare to sow now a winter cover crop, so that, next year, they will have good gardens.

What Irvin S. Cobb Thinks about

An Immortal Oration

BEVERLY HILLS, CALIF.—The future has a rotten trick of mussing up the judgments of the present. What a pity it is that we can't wear our hind-sights in front.

When I read where some ponderous performing pachyderm of the literary elephant quadrille says, "This story will live forever," I get to thinking about a time-yellowed copy of a metropolitan newspaper I saw once, a paper that was printed on November 20, 1863.

Irvin S. Cobb

It devoted great gobs of praise and nine solid columns very solid—to the eloquence of the Hon. Edward Everett of Massachusetts, who, on the day before, after months of preparation had, on a battlefield down in Pennsylvania, spoken two hours and turned loose enough oratory to fill about nine gas balloons. But of the subsequent and incidental remarks of another man, an awkward, shy man from Illinois, who had spoken just two minutes, it said, "The President was also heard briefly. The applause was formal and scattering."

Prejudices of Critics.

OFTEN, 'twould seem, the professional reviewer makes up his mind beforehand that he doesn't like you and behaves accordingly.

A friend sent me a clipping from a small city—it dealt with the opening of the picture, "Everybody's Old Man." The writer was quite severe in his analysis. He didn't like the film. Passionately, he didn't care for me.

The joke was that the theater where the picture was to have been shown burned down just about the time the paper went to press, and the picture wasn't ever shown in that town.

The next best illustration of the point I'm making dates back years ago. I was discussing various novelists with that gentle wit, the late Oliver Herford.

"Ollie," I said, "what do you think of So-and-So's books?" "My dear Cobb," he softly murmured, "something I once wrote about him—in a critical way—so prejudiced me against the man I could never bear to read any of his books."

Self-Anointed Dukes.

OUT here we're waiting for that Spanish baron and that French count back in New York to form the mother branch of their Noblemen's club for the protection of holders of genuine titles in America and, presumably, as a guarantee to our own home-grown heiresses that, when they marry foreign princelings or what not, the goods will be as described. There's been a lot of title-legging, you know.

As soon as the organization gets started we're going to open the Hollywood division. Since only the authentic nobility may qualify, it's figured that the active roster will be confined to a very limited group.

The State of the Nation.

FAR be it from me to turn alarmist right on the heels of the hot wave, but I feel it my duty to warn my fellow-Americans that this fragile and crumbling republic is doomed. That is, it's doomed if you can believe what comes out of our sainted political leaders in the way of predictions.

Hark to the quavering chorus which already has started up: A crisis exists. Every professional crisis-breeder in the land openly admits it. I can't remember when a crisis wasn't existing. But they come larger in campaign years. We are facing a dread emergency which has had no parallel since the last occasion when we faced a dread emergency. This very hour the nation totters on the brink of an abyss.

Miracles and Misdemeanors.

ONCE upon an early time there was a man so holy that even the wild creatures would not harm him. He drew a thorn from the paw of a tame lion and the grateful beast followed after him. So he became a saint.

Only the other day in a court in Tanganyka, which is in Africa, a black man—a savage by our definitions—was on trial. It seemed the lions were raiding the stock, so the native authorities set traps for them. The accused found a lion in one of these traps and made a ladder and went down and helped the great brute to escape.

Being arrested, he explained simply that the lion was his friend. So they fined him $12.50. In the olden times it was a miracle. Nowadays it's a misdemeanor.

W. B. COTTON
SHERIFF, BOONE COUNTY

WITH ROD AND REEL

We have had several requests from our readers to carry a fishing column in our paper. We do not know how near we will be right on the subject, but nevertheless we will give our opinion and you can take it or leave it.

During the past few weeks we have been fishing the streams of Boone and other counties and have found that fishing is "fair" from a fisherman's standpoint. By this we mean that we have been bringing in a few bronze-backs occasionally.

The cool weather which prevailed for the past several days, and the showers, which have caused Boone County streams to run out has cooled the water considerably, thus causing Mr. Bass to come out of hiding to look for something on which to feed.

We have heard lots of fishermen say that bass do not strike at artificial bait because they are hungry but because the bait angers them. We have always noticed, however, that when bass are feeding they are more likely to strike at artificial bait. Only a few days ago we were on Gunpowder angling for the bronze backs, and upon walking up to a nice rocky hole, we noticed a bass run off the rocks. We made several casts, thinking we would draw his attention with our baits, but were unsuccessful. We believed that the fish saw us. However, we fished down stream for approximately half an hour, and upon our return we tried again at the same place and were successful in landing two nice bass.

As to bait, we are of the opinion that when bass are really hungry they will strike at almost any kind of artificial bait. At other times they are more choicy. We are rather partial to the Hawiian Wiggler, a new bait recently put on the market. It has all the action required to lure Mr. Bass from his hiding place. The Tom Thumb is another good bait, and the Weasel is hard to beat.

Gunpowder Creek, is in our opinion, the best creek in this section for bass, but the fisherman will find there are few bass in the smaller holes of water. We have only one explanation, hand-fishing and seining during the recent drouth have depleted the supply considerably.

At this season of the year we believe that bass will strike during all hour of the day. But we prefer early morning fishing, and late in the afternoon.

Anyone making large catches in this county are asked to report same at the Recorder office, and we will be glad to mention them in our column.

BANKING SYSTEM SHOWS PROGRESS

State Bank Resources Grow More Than Three Billion Dollars in a Year

NATIONAL BANKS GAIN

American Bankers Association Gives Details of Banking Institutions and Notes Stronger Condition

NEW YORK.—Continued improvement in the condition of state chartered banking institutions, with an increase of more than three billion dollars in a year in total resources, is shown in a report just issued by the State Bank Division of the American Bankers Association.

The report was prepared by the division's Committee on State Bank Research from data furnished by state banking departments and parallels data issued by the Comptroller of the Currency for national banks which show similar improvements.

"The combined resources of 10,473 state supervised banks were $35,724,723,000 as of December 31, 1935," the state bank report says. "Total deposits amounted to $30,526,920,000. Total loans and discounts stood at $12,430,404,000 and total investments were $14,170,421,000."

A year previous, tables in the report show, there were 10,644 state supervised banks, with combined resources of $32,680,203,000, total deposits $27,297,959,000, loans and discounts $13,060,033,000 and investments $12,582,325,000.

Classes of Institutions

Of the reporting state banking institutions on December 31, 1935, 82% were commercial banks, the report states, 9% trust companies, almost 9% stock and mutual savings banks and less than 1% were private banks. The report adds:

"The parallel upward movements of deposits and total invested funds of total state supervised banks during the years 1934 and 1935, after declines in these items in 1932 and 1933, are indications of definite steps toward recovery in banking.

"Based on figures assembled for total state supervised banks on resources and liabilities as of December 31, 1931 to 1935, it is noted: (1) that deposits in 1935 rose approximately 12 per cent over the previous year, as compared with an increase of about 9 per cent in 1934 over the year 1933, and declines of 7 per cent and 12 per cent in 1933 and 1932, respectively, from the preceding years of 1932 and 1931; and (2) that total invested funds increased by approximately 2 per cent in 1935 and also in 1934, while they had decreased by 9 per cent in 1933 and by 11 per cent in 1932."

Analysis Shows Stronger Positions

In a survey and analysis of earnings and expenses of state banks doing a commercial business, it is brought out that in a majority of states they have increased their earning ability during 1935. On the basis of data covering 7,928 banks in 42 states, the report says:

"The most significant fact to be pointed out is that new profits of state banks—after deducting charge-offs on loans, investments, etc., and adding recoveries—were shown in 37 of the 42 states which reported in 1935, in comparison with net profits in only 11 of the 35 states reporting in 1934. Measured in terms of dollars per each $100 of invested funds, net profits in 1935 ranged between $2.40 and $.10 per $100, with 19 states showing profits of $1.00, or over, per $100; while in 1934 net profits did not exceed $1.20 per $100 and only three states showed profits of $1.00, or over."

The report contains voluminous tables showing the resources and liabilities of all classes of state chartered institutions and detailed analyses of earnings and expenses by states and of insured commercial state banks grouped by size of banks.

Bankers Help Farmers

The conviction that 4-H Club work lays the foundation for sound citizenship and intelligent farming influenced a New York City bank executive to contribute $500 to the Agricultural Committee of the State Bankers Association, to further 4-H Club activities in the state. "I am convinced that the work is so worthy, and is being so well handled that it should interest those who believe in building sound citizenship, as well as intelligent farming for the future," he said.

Unusual prominence was given this past year to agricultural work by the Tennessee Bankers Association. The Agricultural Committee report reveals hearty cooperation between bankers and extension workers. "Key bankers and county agents have been in closer contact than ever before," it says.

Georgia bankers have given both moral and financial backing to a Marketing Project sponsored by the Extension Service of the College of Agriculture, and activities the past year showed significant results. The phases of the Marketing program emphasized in the year's work are: The retail curb market; roadside marketing; miscellaneous marketing (suited to the locality); bartering (exchange of commodities or services with neighbors); standardized canned products for sale prepared in homes or canning centers.

The indebtedness on the terracing outfit in Graves county has been reduced from $3,100 to $1,700.

YOUNG PENN. G. O. P. WARN LANDON TO DROP PINCHOT

Nothing that Democratic speakers or editors have said about Governor Landon compares with the frank estimate of him made by a prominent young Republican of Pennsylvania. On September 9, on the eve of Governor Landon's latest conference with former Governor Pinchot of Pennsylvania, Charles W. Carroll, organizer of the "Young Republicans of Pennsylvania," sent Governor Landon the following telegram as reported in the Philadelphia Record (Ind.) read:

"Newspaper reports indicate you are granting Gifford Pinchot another audience. This is an insult to all Philadelphia citizens, as he has offended us again and again by calling us thieves, crooks and bootleggers.

"Your manager has already been advised only hope of carrying Pennsylvania lies in size Republican majority Philadelphia can give you. Pinchot despised in Philadelphia.

"General impression here is that you do not look like a President, do not act like one and do not talk like one.

"Add to this liability the fact that you have taken as bedfellows, Republican enemy No. 1, Joseph R. Grundy, and his waterboy, Giff Pinchot, you can readily visualize what chance you have in Pennsylvania.

"If you continue to be tarred with the Pinchot stick, I predict many 'Republican stay-at-home clubs' and 'disgusted Republican clubs' will spring up.

"I realize you can't get rid of Grundy but Pinchot can offer only one asset this campaign. That asset is 'strict silence.'

"Am strictly against Roosevelt, therefore deeply resent fact you have taken into your confidence the parlor pink Pinchot.

"The decision is up to you—which will you give up—Pennsylvania or Pinchot."

Mr. Carroll was the keynote speaker at the Republican "grass roots" convention in Cleveland.

DISPELLING THE FOG

By Charles Michelson

The other day when Secretary of the Interior Ickes, in a speech, directed attention to the authoritative position Mr. William Randolph Hearst occupies in Landon heirarchy, that body of counselors were shocked.

From National GOP Chairman Hamilton up and down they deplored that the Democrats were conducting a dirty campaign.

Now just what is there that could be called invidious about the publicizing of a letter signed by Mr. Hearst in which the latter without equivocation or qualification undertook to tell Governor Landon when and how he should make his political speeches?

This letter was not filched from anybody's desk drawer, or abstracted from anybody's wastebasket, nor was it procured by a hired spy in the opposition camp.

On the contrary, it was merely reproduced from a sworn record where it appeared as collateral evidence in a court proceeding, dealing with an entirely different issue.

It was notable that nobody questioned the authenticity of the documen or contradicted the deduction therein. It appears that the minority party's national committeeman for Illinois—who might be supposed to be important enough in that party to communicate directly with the candidate—felt it necessary to make a pilgrimage to San Simeon in California to lay his suggestion before the lord of that demesne. Mr. Hearst graciously received the Illinois ambassador and consented to give the requested instructions or suggestions. After he had heard and dismissed National Committeeman Harding, he sent him the letter in the form of a memorandum as certifying that the envoy had faithfully discharged his mission.

What code was violated; or what ethics were abonden by bringing to light just what part Mr. Hearst was playing in the campaign?

Hard on What Price Ethics

My fellow commentars and columnists have been rather quiet, for them, during the last week, Mr. Frank Kent has been turning his daily song or sorrow upside down for lack of anything new in the iniquity of all that appertains to the Roosevelt administration.

Mr. Mark Sullivan has diversified his sermons by taking Earl Browder, the Communist candidate for President, to task, and owlishly telling us that America wants neither Communism nor Fascism. This affords an opportunity for an informing lecture on the similarities and differences of the two subversive systems—which is one way of filling a column on a dull day. Also he has discovered that the government pictures of the desolation of the drouth area are probably unreliable, because the photographer moved an oxskull ten feet before snapping his camera.

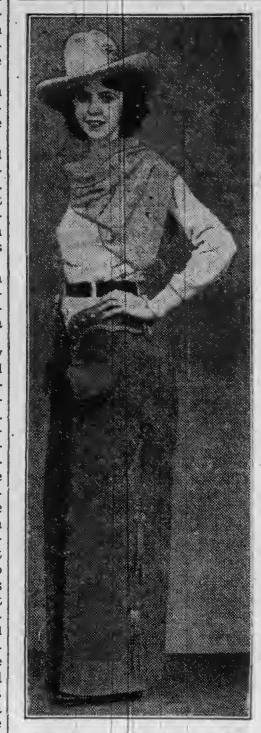
Only one of my distinguished contemporaries has scored a scoop, and felicitations are in order for Mr. Wm. Hard, journalist and GOP broadcaster.

For the convenience of the newspaper world, it has been a custom of long standing for public men to issue to the press advance copies of their speeches and statements, each issue bearing at its head the injunction that they are not to be made public until a specified release time. The custom is so general that even government papers, such as the President's messages to Congress, go out with the same injunction, as do laws in advance of their adoption by Congress.

Mr. Hard, over the radio, answered Secretary Ickes' speech about the Hearst communication three-quarters of an hour before the Secrtary of the Interior went on the air with his address. This is the first time I recall that a newspaper man "broke a release date"—to use the press phrase—hence this tribute to Mr. Hard's enterprise.

A while ago the Chicago Tribune also scored a noteworthy beat on all its newspaper rivals. It published, and editorialized, on a cable dispatch from "Donald Day," narrating that Moscow had sent instructions to the American Communist party to support Roosevelt. Now the Chicago Times is out with an offer to donate $5,000 to the "Freedom of the Press" Committee of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association if the Tribune or any other newspaper can prove that the cable message was true.

There are a number of foundations which present high prizes for outstanding achievements in the news line, and I respectfully suggest the two foregoing incidents as meriting consideration by the committees that make these awards.



I am not sure but that some of the newspaper polls should not get into the same category. For exaple, one of the most conspicuous of these last Sunday told in eight-column headlines that an intricate calculation based on something like one-third of one per cent of the total vote, indicated that 4,500,000 who voted for Mr. Roosevelt in 1932 would this year vote for Governor Landon, while only 2,000,000 who voted for Mr. Hoover in 1932 would cast their ballots for thet Democratic nominee next November.

Such a fantastic conclusion mathematically deduced from such inadequate premises may not provoke unmeasured confidence, but, just for the fun of the thing, let us accept them in a simple calculation. In 1932 oRosevelt's majority over Hoover was more than seven million. Balancing the figures would still leave oRosevelt with a poular majority of two and a half million—which was not at all what the Republican newspapers wished the poll to show—and which did not appear in the headlines.

The straw polls are of value—to the outfits that are selling them to the newspapers—and to add to the entertainment of he occasion. So do the figments of imagination that are being published as news, but that is all they amount to.

Let me turn prophet for a moment and set down here by firm conviction that every one of the straw ballotings worth noticing will, on its last issue before the election, swing clear around and forecast Roosevelt's victory—and they will not be stingy in their estimates of his majority then. Thus they will be, after the decisive November day, able to point with pride to the accuracy of their necromancy, and ask for admiration for their skill in reporting the mutation of public sentiment from day to day.

Texas Centennial Exposition officials originally intended to have 48 Rangerettes on hostess duty when the $25,000,000 World's Fair opens in Dallas June 6. When they found one of those selected came from Washington, D. C., they included Mexico to make an even 50. Now, not to overlook Canada, they have appointed Grace Louise Bailey, daughter of a Dallas publisher and born in Ojibwa, Ontario, near Windsor, making a total of 51.

Alfalfa helps to check erosion, builds soil fertility, makes good livestock feed and tends to prevent weed growth. Because its root system extends several feet into the ground, it will withstand drouth conditions better than most legumes.

Government experiments in irrigating orchards in eastern states gave varied results. Larger and more desirable late marketing apples were obtained by irirgation, where the soil was good. On thin soil, results were not so satisfactory.

Children from one to six years, while still consuming quantities of milk, need a whole egg or some meat daily. Older children should have both. Eggs and meat are good building foods, contain protein and are among the best sources of iron.

Neglect of young breeding animals, because of high feed prices, may not be profitable. This is especially true of heifers. While conservation of feed is desirable, it is possible to over-do it in the name of economy.

HOW THE BANKS AID THE GOVERNMENT

Normal and Emergency Needs Met by Advances of Commercial Banking Credit

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J. — The American commercial banking credit system is an absolute essential in the financial operations of business and government, Harold G. Moulton, President of the Brookings Institution of Washington, D. C., said here recently in an address before the Graduate School of Banking conducted under the joint auspices of Rutgers University and the American Bankers Association.

If the flexibility and expansibility provided by commercial banking credit were eliminated, Dr. Moulton declared, "it is scarcely too much to say that the economic system itself would shortly be destroyed.

"Normally the amount of credit extended by commercial banks to the government is small in amount and for the purpose mainly of financing temporary requirements in anticipation of tax collections or bond sales. But in periods of war and acute depression, when the financial requirements of government expand with great rapidity, the expansion of commercial bank credit is on a tremendous scale. Such is the case at the present time.

How Public Needs Are Financed

"The purchase of government securities by individuals and by the commercial banks provides the government with the means by which its manifold activities are financed. The Treasury obtains the funds, with which the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and other government credit agencies finance their operations, through the sale of securities, largely to commercial banks. These funds, in turn, have gone to the assistance of distressed banks and other financial institutions, to aid industrial and agricultural enterprises, to finance new public and private capital construction, and to provide relief to the unemployed."

Dr. Moulton declared that it is not true that the world depression was caused by a breakdown of the American banking system "which did not, in fact, occur until the depression had been under way for more than three years." He added:

"Nor is it true that the world maladjustments existing in 1929 can be explained simply by undue extensions of commercial banking credit in the preceding years. These maladjustments involved world agricultural, industrial, commercial and financial relations."

FARM ACCOUNTING REVEALS LESSONS

Principles of Sound Business Management That Apply to All Farms

An analysis made of detailed records kept by a group of Wisconsin farms revealed several important lessons and the principles of sound businces management derived from them apply equally well to other farms, says an article in the Bulletin of the Agricultural Commission of the American Bankers Association. The article says:

"Investment costs, including interest, depreciation, repairs, taxes and insurance, are approximately two-thirds of all farm costs. Furthermore, these costs are largely independent of the production program of the farm.

"This means that if a farmer cuts his production of crops or livestock, he increases his investment costs per unit of product produced, as a smaller number of units must then carry as large an expense load as before. This illustrates the importance, from the standpoint of costs, of operating a farm at or near capacity.

"Investment mistakes are more costly than many others because they cannot easily be corrected. If a farmer pays too much for his farm, his investment costs will be abnormally high as long as he owns it. If he constructs a $4,000 barn, when a $2,000 barn would have served his purpose, he will have excessive barn costs, year after year, during the entire service life of the structure.

"This emphasizes the importance of a knowledge of investment values and the specific investment requirements of individual farms.

Determining Real or False Economies

"In working for greater economy, it is essential that the farm manager be able to distinguish between a real and a false saving. This can be done only through a careful estimate of the contribution to income, over a period of time, of each item of expenditure. Only if more is saved in expense than will be lost in income, can a contemplated cut in expense be designated as a real saving.

"For example, dropping dairy herd improvement work may result in a yearly expense reduction. The question to decide is what effect the dropping of this work will have on the present and future income from the dairy herd. If the estimated loss in livestock receipts due to a lowered efficiency in feeding and breeding is greater than the original saving, then it would obviously be a false economy.

"Substantial savings can be effected on many farms through the use of more home grown garden produce and farm cured meats. Why pay out money for products of this kind that can be produced much cheaper at home? The money saved from the family food budget can be used for the purchase of many things that will make the farm home a more comfortable and pleasant place to live."

Fifteen purebred registered rams were placed in Henderson county last month.

For exhibits at the Laural county harvest festival farmers and homemakers received $200 in premiums.

AN ASSET TO THE COMMUNITY

Some outstanding country newspaper editors, asked for their opinion on the chain store question, state that when chain stores first started in their towns, they feared the consequences. The editors felt that the chains might be the ruination of independent stores, to the detriment of the community. But after the chain stores had operated for sometime, it was found that they were a beneficial influence.

The reason is simple. Progressive chains have aided farmers by broadening markets. They have patronized local newspapers. They have tended to improve local merchandising practices and lower prices to consumers. It has been found that the independents, when efficiently managed, have been able to compete on equal terms with their chain competitors, and have shared in increased business resulting from chain advertising and "pulling power" bringing in residents of outlying areas to shop in the local market.

As a matter of fact, it is this healthy competition between chains and independents that has been largely responsible for giving the American people the finest distribution system in the world. Chains have taught independents lessons in efficient selling—and the independents have turned around and taught the chains lessons in individualized service. Both have to keep up with the times—each is continually trying to outdo the other in standards of service, quality and price. The upshot is that both groups go ahead and prosper—while the consumer gets more for his money, the farmer gains a steadily improving market for his produce, and the community progresses.

BEARCATS NEW STADIUM TO ACCOMMODATE 25,000

The University of Cincinnati will dedicate its recently completed stadium Saturday, September 26th when the Bearcats play host to the West Virginia University Mountaineers. With the seating capacity increased from 13,000 to 25,000 the renovated Nippert Stadium now ranks as the second largest college plant in Ohio and the largest stadium equipped for night football. The increased capacity was secured by dropping the playing field about ten feet below its former surface and building concrete stands down to the new level. Wooden seats have been placed over the concrete stands.

With a fifty per cent increase in the already strong lighting system the University now boasts of one of the finest lighted football fields in the middle west. Two new light towers have been erected and the strength of the bulbs in the other six towers has been increased twenty-five per cent.

A glass enclosed steam heated press box, including three completely equipped radio broadcasting rooms, will comfortably accommodate one hundred and fifty people. Every newspaper man will have a six circuit plug-in jack with a telephone so that he can talk directly with either team's bench, with the two telegraph companies, or take connections directly with outside telephone lines. The system is the result of conference between the telephone and telegraph companies and is said to be the most complete in the country.

The entire playing field has been sodded for about two months and with daily care it is in excellent condition.

Elaborate preparations are being made for the opening game with the West Virginia Mountaineers which is considered one of the hardest initial games ever scheduled by the Bearcats.

CANNING AND USE OF TOMATO JUICE

Pearl J. Haak, Kentucky College of Agriculture

When tomatoes are plentiful enough, juice should be canned to serve at least three or four times a week. Tomato juice may be served as an appetizer or it may be used in making soups. If combined with gelatin it adds food value and color and flavor to congealed salads.

How to can tomato juice—Cook small and broken tomatoes until they are soft. Press through a sieve to remove skins, seeds and cores. Add 1 level teaspoonful of salt to each quart of pulp, then cook quickly until it begins to thicken (about 5 minutes). Pack immediately into clean, hot jars, seal and process for 30 minutes in hot water bath or 15 minutes in a steam pressure cooker at 10 lbs.

Tomato Creole Sauce—Tomato Creole is one of the favorite sauces for decorating plain boiled rice, besides adding a distinctive flavor, and for dressing ordinary steak.

Mix together 1 quart of sliced white onions and 12 finely-chopped green peppers. Simmer until soft, add about twice this bulk in tomatoes and cook together over a low fire until tender. Season to taste. Pack into clean, hot jars and seal immediately.

A flock of 100 purebred pullets have paid the grocery bill with money to spare in the past 10 months,, says Bill Fultz of Boyd county.

ELDERBERRY JUICE MAKES GOOD BEVERAGE

Elderberry juice makes a delicious beverage when combined with some other tart flavored fruit juice such as wild grape, plum or blackberry. It also makes a good sauce for puddings and a delightful simple dessert served with nut or fruit cookies. The juice can be prepared according to directions for any other fruit juice. Further information may be obtained by writing to Miss Florence Imlay, food specialist of the Kentucky College of Agriculture, Lexington.

WHERE CREDIT IS DUE

This year through the cooperative efforts of the railroads, the grain elevators and the flour and feed mills, the railroads have handled the heaviest crop of wheat from the Southwestern states for any year since 1931, without car shortage, J. J. Pelley, President of the Association of American Railroads, recently announced.

This was accomplished in the face of the fact that during the same time movement of other commodities throughuot the country was greater than at any time in five years.

The American people take first-class railroad service for granted with little thought given to the amazingly efficient and progressive organization that makes such service possible. The railroads have had a lean financial experience during most of the past fifteen years—yet they have practically eliminated car shortages, have speeded up both freight and passenger train schedules, have further improved their exceptionally fine accident record, have kept rates at ilow levels, and have bettered service to the public in almost every particular.

It may sound sentimental to say that the pioneer spirti has never left the railroads—but that is a fact. The lines are tireless in their efforts to lower the cost of operation and to better service. They carry on exhaustive research work dealing with problems ranging all the way from smoother road-beds to stronger freight cars. America enjoys the best railroad service in the world—and railroad managements are zealous in maintaining their lead over the railroads of other countries.

There isn't a person in the nation who doesn't benefit in one way or another from a progressive railroad industry. And there isn't a person who wouldnt suffer to some extent if the rails were lethargic and backward. It's right and proper to expect the railroads to give us fine service—but credit should be given where credit is due.

THE COMMON GOOD

Sage counsel for farmers recently came from Dean H. W. Mumford College of Agriculture, University of Illinois. He said:

"Whether or not farmers intend to improve their standard of living and financial security, or slide into a limbo of economic uncertainty, depends upon their ability and determination to more universally recognize the value of cooperation and become organized for it.

"On the other hand, agricultural cooperatives and other forms of farm organizations cannot serve agriculture in a large way unless they have as one of their definite objectives the promotion of the common good. Farmers are justified in cooperating for the purpose of securing economic justice. But they will destroy their organizations if they use them to promote social or economic aggression."

Wise cooperative managements will stick to the business of selling their members' produce—and not follow will o' wisps that can lead eventually to ruin.

EXPERIMENT STATION CONDUCTING TESTS IN CURING TOBACCO

In an effort to determine the best and most practical methods of curing tobacco, the Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station has established experimental curing barns for burley at Lexington and for dark tobacco at the Western Kentucky Experiment Substation at Princeton.

Crops of tobacco are undergoing the curing process at both places, with automatic instruments recording changes in temperature, humidity, air velocity, weight and other curing factors. Bottom, vertical and ridge ventilators are being tested, as well as firing for both burley and dark tobacco. At Princeton, the so-called "soft cure" and the "old method" are being compared.

While the information gathered in the barns will indicate what happens in the curing process, extensive studies have been inaugurated in the new tobaceco research laboratory, recently completed at the Experiment Station at Lexington, to determine the curing requirements for the highest quality of leaf.

With facts gathered about changes that take place in temperature, humidity, air velocity and weight of tobacco in the barn, and also with information regarding best curing requirments, the Experiment Station hopes eventually to be able to design barns and recommend curing practices that will enable farmers to put higher quality leaf on the market.

IF FIRE STRIKES!

When fire strikes, be calm, if you value your life! That sage advice is given by "safeguarding America Against Fire."

Should your clothing become ignited, drop to the floor and roll into a rug or blanket. That will cut off the supply of oxygen and smother the flames. Thousands of people, insane with panic, have run thus fanning the blaze—at the cost of their lives.

If you are in a public building member the old adage: "Walk, when the fire alarm sounds, re-don't run, to the nearest exit." A legion of lives have been unnecessarily sacrificed to panic-stricken mobs in theatres, hotels and similar buildings.

If you awaken at night and smell smoke, don't open the door. That is vital—to open the door may permit super-heated air and fumes to enter and smother you. First place your hand on the door to see if it feels hot. If it is cool, open it very slightly, with your face averted. If you feel "fire pressure" against it, close it at once and seek another means of exit.

Even as 90 per cent of fires can be prevented through the exercise of simple precautions, so can ninety per cent of the lives now lost in fires be saved—if we don't get excited. Knowledge of a few rudimentary facts, such as those given above, plus presence of mind makes the best life saver of all.

Fire may break out in your home, your place of business, in a building or theatre you are in, at any time. When it does, keep calm, think, and then act!

YOU'LL PAY

In the welter of debate over legislation concern the merchandising and distributing of necessities, the interest of the consumer must never be lost to view.

The consumer wants merchandising to be fair to all concerned. He doesn't want abuses to be permitted. And neither does he want the law to outlaw legitimate practices that cut middleman costs, and lessen the spread between the price paid the producer and the price charged the ultimate buyers.

In recent months, we have seen how questionable or debatable practices can be corrected. A short time ago a meeting was held between representatives of the nation's principal chain stores and representatives of agricultural cooperative selling groups. The chains pledged themselves to eliminate practices farmers believed inimical to their interest. Thus, in the most amicable and satisfactory manner, honest differences were settled and noteworth progress was made.

The last congress passed a law regulating large-scale merchandising, the effects of which are not yet evident. It would seem, however, that the law is stringent enough—many unprejudiced experts regard it as being too stringent, and feel that it will unnecessarily and artificially inflate the cost of living. Even so, strong pressure is being brought to bear in many states eitther to pass additional laws, or to levy punitive taxes against big merchandising systems. If that agitation is successful, it is obvious who is going to pay the bill—the consumer.

The whole problem requires a reasoned approach, without bitterness on either side, if it is to be soundly solved. Extreme measures can do no real good—and they can do infinite harm to the 125,000,000 American consumers.

Fountain Beautifies Exposition

WORLD'S FAIR OFFICE FRONT.—One of the picture spots of the $25,000,000 Texas Centennial Exposition which opened in Dallas June 6, is the changing-color fountain and pool before the Administration Building, which reflects the beautiful mural over the lobby door.

One of these days when the people of the world catch up on their work they will find time rather heavy on their hands.

You might not see it in the newspapers every day, but the automobiles are still killing people at the rate of about 100 a day.

Some of the June brides don't know how to cook and by this time the husbands are beginning to speak gently about good food, etc.

Before an election everybody is for the rule of the people; after the election only the winners retain their faith in democracy.

The vacation season is almost over but some people can save their lives, even now, if they will not take chances out swimming.

This is a good week in which to read a book, or better still, write one if you can get it published and make some money on the venture.

Nearly one-third of the counties of the United States are on the official drouth list, which shows you how dry it can be in this country.

UNIVERSALLY POPULAR

The "Sunday School Lesson" published each week in this newspaper has been adopted by thousands of church instructors throughout the United States as a regular part of their weekly work.

It is a review and exposition of the international lesson for each week, prepared by Dean Harold L. Lundquist of the Moody Bible Institute at Chicago, a recognized leader in the nation's church work. Dean Lundquist has been active in teaching youthful groups for years, thereby acquiring an insight into the needs of these people for understandable explanations of Bible passages.

In view of his accomplishments in church work, it is not surprising that Dean Lundquist's exposition of the weekly Sunday School lesson is being used in almost every community of the nation. As teacher or student you will find it extremely helpful.

FARMERS WILL RECEIVE $110,246

FROM ACP PAYMENTS FOR CO-OPERATION IN 1936 AGRICULTURAL PROGRAM — FIRST FIGURES ON 1936 BENEFITS.

Boone County farmers will be eligible for approximately $110,-246.40 for cooperation in the 1936 Agricultural Conservation Program, according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent. These are the first available figures on the 1936 program benefits and are based on the performance reports of the field supervisors who have been checking individual farms. The benefits exceed those of the AAA last year.

The benefit payments which will be made to farmers in one check when figured for the county as a whole are divided into tobacco, $38,659.50, general soil depleting payments $31,121.30 and Soil Building allowance $40,465.60 or a total of $110,246.40.

The tobacco and general soil depleting payments are definite and the amount is already earned. The Soil Building allowance payment has a maximum of $40,465.60 for sowing of grass and legume seeds, phosphate on grass or legume crops, use of limestone and etc. Farmers todate have earned only $16,041.00 leaving a totalo f $24,-424.60 to be earned before October 31. EXTENSIVE USE OF LIMESTONE

PLANNED BY BOONE COUNTY FARMERS ACCORDING TO H. R. FORKNER, COUNTY AGENT RECORD FOR COUNTY SET.

Boone County farmers will use more limestone in 1936, according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent. This will be the largest amount of agricultural limestone ever used in anyone year and larger than the last seven years combined.

The big increase in use of agricultural limestone is due to three important factors: (1) greater appreciation on the part of farmers that better grass and legume crops can be grown following liming, (2) the Boone County Soil Improvement Association has helped to get lime crushed at a low rate of 70 cents per ton with all labor furnishd and a low price of around $2.00 per ton where limestone is purchased already pulverized and delivered in the proximity of Burlington, and (3) The $1.40 per ton benefit on the Agricultural Conservation program allowance which in many cases more than pay the farmer for the cost of the agricultural limestone.

The lime pulverizer cooperating in the Boone County soil improvement program has been working steadily crushing from 45 to 50 tons per day. The pulver operator is planning to put lights on the outfit to work night and day and increase the capacity to around 100 tons per day. The pulver on last Saturday was operating at the farm of J. G. Renaker of near Verona and will proceed on a general route to Beaver, Hamilton, Rabbit Hash, Burlington and Hebron.

LARGE BLACKSNAKE WAS READY FOR WINTER NAP

J. S. Earnest of near New Hope reported an interesting occurrence which was noted by Raymond Arvin and Thomas Earnest on last Thursday at the Earnest farm.

The men noticed that a shepherd dog had treed something. Upon investigation they found it to be a large blacksnake which was too large for the dog to tackle alone. The dog and the men killed the snake, which measured 7 feet 7 inches.

Upon examining the snake they found that it had already prepared itself for winter by swallowing another blacksnake for its winter's rations. The reptile which was swallowed measured 4 feet 5 inches.

AUTO STOLEN BY TWO BOYS

FOR PURPOSE OF PROVIDING TRANSPORTATION WHILE ON JOURNEY—LODGED IN COUNTY JAIL, HERE.

Two youths, giving their names as Bill Moore, 16, and Eugene Addison, 18, were arrested last Thursday in Mt. Vernon, Rockcastle County for the theft of an automobile belonging to Goebel Stephenson, manager of the Consolidated Telephone Co., Florence, Ky.

The car was stolen while parked in front of the Telephone office in Florence Wednesday, by Eugene Addison, according to a report given by his companion, Bill Moore. Moore said that as the two neared the city limits of Florence, headed for Miami, Fla., that Addison made that the statement that he was going to swipe an automobile as he was getting tired of walking. According to Moore, Addison lingered in Florence after he told him that he did not approve of the idea and started on down the highway. Shortly afterward, however, Moore said that Addison drove up in a car and he got in with him, knowing that the car was stolen.

The boys were first noticed near Mt. Vernon, Ky., on a side road, trying to hide the car. According to the boys, they were suspicious that State Cops were following them and the best thing for them to do was to get rid of the car. They attempted to hide the car in the bushes near a farm house, and were seen and followed for quite some distance by the occupants of the house. They made their way to Mt. Vernon, still unknowingly followed by this mountain boy who was suspicious of their actions. The mountain lad reported their actions to D. G. Clark, Sheriff of Rockcastle County, their arrest following shortly.

The Boone County authorities were notified of the arrest on Thursday, the day following the theft, and went to Mt. Vernon to identify the car. Both boys and car were returned to Boone County. The boys were lodged in the Burlington jail.

Damage to the car, according to Mr. Stephenson, was estimated at approximately $25.00.

COUNTIES OF KENTUCKY OTHER THAN BOONE

How fortunate indeed are those who have chosen as their abode a place where their crops can be tilled more easily, their children educated to the higher standards of life, and life made more easier in general. How happy one should feel to know that at night while darkness is hovering over his possessions and his family, that on the morrow he will awake and find them still intact and as he left them only a few hours before. Not everywhere within the borders of our own State do such rights of security prevail.

Until people have lost some of their feelings of self-satisfaction and these have been replaced by a strong mutual feeling for the rights and happiness of others, these conditions will always prevail to the great detriment of our State as a whole, as well as to these individuals.

When great sums of money are sent out of our State each year for the help of worthy causes, in other lands this argument is advanced by those who are the leaders of such moves. They say, "These people have had their chance, and refused, how me must lend aid to those who haven't had such opportunities." If that assertion were true, they would be wholly justified in reaching the decision that they have, but on the contrary, it is wholly untrue.

When there are children in our State residing within six miles of the county seats who have never been within them, and children within that same distance who have never attended a day of school, the reason being that they have never had anyone to urge them to, or to point out a good reason why they should attend. Any one of the three reasons largely responsible for these conditions is bad enough, but with them all existing together, it makes a rather deplorable condition. The one for which most can be blamed is the pople's indifferent attitude. The second commercial, moneyed interests that have been able to procure a hold prefer that the people keep on thinking and living as they do. Third, politically, once the people are educated to be sane, sober, clear thinking individuals those who are acquiring wealth, at their expense, will not be able to longer continue doing so. We shall not always be dominated by selfish and greedy individuals. Each decade brings us nearer to the time when all such things will be voted down and such selfish ideas scoffed at. And each generation brings with it leaders whose interests are keen for the preservation of liberty and happiness among our people.

SUDDEN DEATH TO 300

According to preliminary reports, close to 300 people met "sudden death" through accidents over the Labor Day wetk-end. About 245 of them were victims of recklessly or incompetently driven automobiles.

It would be bad enough if such a shambles only followed a holiday week-end and could be put down to too much merry-making. But every week-end shows totals almost as great. Every day sees lives unnecessarily snuffed out.

Here is something worth remembering: Today, if the average holds, 100 people will be killed by motor cars. A hundred more will be killed tomorrow, and 100 more on the day after that. Friends of yours, your loved ones, yourself, may be among them. And, in addition to the deaths, thousands more will be grievously injured—some made into imbeciles, some destined to spend the rest of their lives in unrelieved pain, some confined to wheel chairs and hospital beds.

Think of that when you step into the car that the salesman proudly told you will "hit her up to 90 so easy you'll think you're only doing 40." It is true that modern cars traveling at extreme speeds ride more easily and comfortably than did the cars of years ago traveling at low speeds. But that illusion of "slow speeding" won't help you in a crash. The result will be just as horrible no matter how luxurious the car, no matter how effortlessly it clicks off its mile-a-minute and better.

A hundred persons killed yesterday—another today—another hundred tomorrow. What is the ghastly record of the dangerous automobile driver.

The WEEKLY CONSTITUTIONAL

by MAX BERNS

A NATIONAL AND FEDERAL GOVERNMENT

How do we maintain a national and federal government?

As Hamilton and Madison point out in The Federalist, our government is partly national in that all the people belong to one nation; and partly federal in that it is a union of separate states.

To the extent that it is national with "the people thoroughly incorporated into one nation, every district ought to have a proportional share in the government"—a share according to population. This our Constitution provides by proportional representation in the House of Representatives.

To the extent that our government is federal—that it consists of league of independent states—"the parties, however unequal in size, ought to have an equal share in the common councils." This our Constitution provides by equal representation (two from each state) in the Senate. This is a recognition "of the portion of sovereignty remaining in the several states, an instrument for preserving that residuary sovereignty and a guard against an improper consolidation of the states into one simple republic."

By thus dividing Congress into two distinct branches, "no law can be passed without the concurrence, first of a majority of the people, and then of a majority of the states."

As ours is "a compound republic, partaking both of the national and federal character," concludes The Federalist, our Constitution provides for a Congress "founded on a mixture of the principles of proportional and equal representation."

JEST A-WHITTLIN' AN' A-THINKIN'

By Pete Gettys

(A State Farmer Section Feature)

It jest looks like when trouble comes it's the little fellers that have to do most of the sufferin'. Take dry times like we been havin', an' the little feller's pastures an' hay crops go a-glimmerin' while the big farms seem to always get some sort of break-meadows an' river bottoms that come to the rescue-an' the farmer who can't afford a loss is generally the one who has the fire an' no insurance.

But it seems it's just got to be that way-there's bound to be big an' the little—the rich an' the poor. Divided right or divided wrong, there's not enough wealth anyway not enough to let every American family to live up to the standard they'd like to. But if some hand of destiny or fate or luck whatever you want to call it, reaches out an' gets a feller an' sets him over in the class of the great majority-the poor-he's luckier if he finds himself on a poor farm rather than on the streets of a city-for a feller can be poor a lot more gracefully in the country than in town.

Every feller that there is had some sort of pet economy. There once was a feller in our county that wouldn't fuss about anything his wife bought at the store 'cept brooms, an' every time he saw a new broom in the house he'd complain that he was goin' bankrupt payin' for brooms.

Anybody with any kind of eyes can see waste and extravagance on most any farm-but nothing is so worrisome as to see the loss from the way manure's handled. Barnyard manure spread on the fields during the winter is worth 70c a ton more'n when left in the yard an' spread later. Experiments extending over 30 years prove that winter spreadin' of manure increased average corn yield 3¼ bushels, wheat ¾ of a bushel, an' clover hay 400 lbs. per acre.

Guess if only two farm machines could be selected, a manure spreader'd come as first choice, then a rake.

Dr. L. E. Smith, Executive Secretary, Kentucky State Tuberculosis Association, will lead the discussion on Health Education for non-medical groups.

Thirteen Southern States will be represented at this meeting, which is to be devoted to an intensive study and discussion of tuberculosis problems, in all their phases, as they relate particularly to the South.

TURKEY EGGS ALL RIGHT FOR BAKING

To most persons, eggs always mean chicken eggs. There are eggs of other fowls. however, that are used for food. Probably the most common, next to hen eggs, are turkey eggs. Yet the average housewife thinks turkey eggs have only one purpose and that is for hatching.

Tests made by the home economics department of the Kentucky College of Agriculture, and reported by Miss Edith Grundmeier, indicate that turkey eggs can satisfactorily be substituted for hen eggs. A turkey egg is equal to almost exactly one and a half hen eggs.

In making angel food cake, for instance, turkey eggs were found superior to chicken eggs. The color of the cake was whiter, the volume greater and the texture more tender. Miss Grundmeier notes that when egg whites were stiffly beaten, the turkey eggs had a blue-white color while the hen egg had a creamy-white color.

That the products made with turkey eggs were more tender and of greater volume was shown especially when plain and French meringues were prepared. Those made with turkey eggs were more tender, better shaped and in all respects delightful in apparance and superior in quality.

In cooked salad dressing and custards, the tests showed that the thickening qualities of turkey eggs are about as great as those of hen eggs and the deeper color is more pleasing. The color also is deeper when turkey eggs are used in making mayonnaise.

The general conclusion of Miss Grundmeier is that turkey eggs can be substituted for hen eggs and no one know the difference except the cook.

Lesson for October 4

THE MACEDONIAN CALL

LESSON TEXT — Acts 16:6-15; Romans 15:18-21.

GOLDEN TEXT—Go ye therefore, and teach all nations.—Matthew 28:19.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Paul's Wonderful Dream.

JUNIOR TOPIC—God's Call to a New Continent.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—A Cry for Help.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The World's Need of Christ.

The roots of American life, cultural and religious, reach back into the European soil on which our forefathers dwelt. The lesson before us is therefore of peculiar interest, for it relates the first step in the carrying of the gospel into Europe, and ultimately to America.

Paul, the missionary with a pastor's heart, felt constrained to go and visit the centers where he had ministered on his first journey. As he proceeded he was providentially hindered and led by the Holy Spirit to Troas. Here his next "step" seemed for a time to be a "stop," but soon God in a vision called him into Macedonia—and the gospel had come to Europe.

It is of interest to note that Paul, as he thus began his second missionary journey, was

I. Obedient to the Spirit (Acts 16:6-12).

He had certain plans in mind. He set out with a purpose, but he was willing to have his own itinerary changed as the Holy Spirit led. It is significant that the guidance was negative as well as positive. The stops as well as "the steps of a good man are ordered by the Lord" (Ps. 37:23). Christians will do well to remember that providential hindering circumstances may be as much the leading of God as the heavenly vision. We are to be obedient to any guidance He gives but we are not to be merely passive, but actively submissive to His will. Paul was about the Father's business, not idly waiting for the speaking of a voice from heaven. It is to such a man or woman that the Macedonian call comes even in our day, only now it comes from China, India, South America, or Africa.

II. Faithful in Testimony (vv. 13, 14).

Paul, with his companion Silas, Timothy who had joined them at Lystra, and Luke (note that the "they" of v. 8 becomes "we" in v. 10) came to Philippi in Macedonia, but they found no Macedonian man waiting for them. Had they been mistaken in their vision and call?

True missionaries are not thus easily discouraged. They had come to be fishers of men. The fisherman does not expect the fish to come to him. He goes after them. Paul soon discovered that there was a place of prayer at the river, evidently a gathering place of devout Jews for worship. There he met the man of Macedonia who turned out to be a woman. For some reason the men were absent from the place of prayer on that all-important Sabbath morning.

Lydia was a woman of distinction, business ability, and of high moral character. But Paul knew that even good people need to be saved. He spoke the truth of God. She accepted the message as God opened her heart, and at once she entered into

III. Fellowship in Service (v.15).

Lydia proved herself to be one of that noble succession of women who have served Christ and the church. She and her household shared in the ministry of Paul by their Christian hospitality, thus helping forward the missionaries. Observe carefully that she was not saved by her works, but that her works followed naturally after her salvation.

Turning now to one of the epistles of Paul we look at his exposition of certain

IV. Fundamental Missionary Principles (Rom. 15:18-21).

Those things which Christ had wrought (Paul took no glory to himself) through him Paul had consistently directed into fields where no one else had preached the gospel.

The spirit of the missionary of the cross is that of the pioneer, pressing ever onward, taking new land, not duplicating the work of others, not jealous of their success, not seeking comfort or glory. Men need the gospel; they are lost without it. Let us press on into the yet unoccupied territory.

Sorrow and Enjoyment

We are sent here, in one sense, to bear and to suffer; but, in another, to do and to enjoy. The active day has its evening of repose; even patient sufferance has its alleviations, when there is a consolatory sense of duty discharged.—Scott.

Undermine the Character

Fear and gain are great perverters of mankind, and where either prevail the judgment is violated.—William Penn, in "Some Fruits of Solitude."

The average pedestrian has what you might call a "fleeing" chance.

FORTY YEARS AGO

From the Files of The Boone County Recorder

ISSUE OF OCT. 14, 1896

WALTON—Mr. Ebright made a Republican speech last Saturday night at the Opera House. Mr. H. D. Rucker The Free Silver Republican, who made such an impression last Wednesday night, asked the privilege of answering him. He was denied the privilege, but took notes on the speech and at the request of the Recorder he wrote quite a lengthy article for publication. In closing he said, "Mr. Ebright is a smart man, and a good, fluent speaker, and he did the best he could under the circumstances. His eulogy on Mr. Cleveland and Mr. Carlisle the National Banker, was masterful in point of effort and language, and it fully demonstrated that the Republican party intends to the Cleveland policy if given power. May the Lord of Hosts deliver us from such."

TAYLORSPORT—The Coney Island Company is building a new house in the grove.

The Republicans are flooding this precinct with gold literature and are endeavoring to carry this precinct.

Mrs. Scothorn is very sick at her daughters, Mrs. Hood, at Home City, O.

Andy Ernst and family were visiting Lee Manin and wife, of Elizabethtown, Ind., last week.

This is the banner Republican precinct in the County and there has not been one Democratic speech made here yet. Come, you who toot your horn—16 to 1.

LIMABURG — The Limaburg Reading Club closed with a social at W. F. Cloud's last Thursday evening. The entertainment consisted of select readings, recitations etc. A lunch of cake and pickles, furnished by the Young ladies of the society, was served. Of the prizes awarded Miss Lulie Tanner received the first and Miss Eva Garnett, the second.

Miss Hallie Loring has 28 scholars.

Limaburg has three political tickets, two of gold and one of silver. Farmers are busy husking corn and digging Irish potatoes. Both crops yield well.

PETERSBURG — Prof. Goetz's popular military band will give the "pops" this winter in the new Liedertafel hall at Lawrenceburg. Our Young Friends Helms and Whiting, will take part in the concerts.

Mr. Lafe Helms now advocates "free Silver." That's the way of the wise.

Dr. Chas. Grant arrived here from Red Sulphur Spring, W. Va., Thursday night. He is looking well and hearty.

Ben Passion, of Illinois, is visiting his father here, but thinks he will return in time to vote for McKinley. We think he had better stay here a while.

VERONA—New Bethel protracted meeting closed last Sunday nite. The ordinance of Baptism took place at Marshall Whitson's pond, Sunday morning.

An estimate of the vote of the precinct has been carefully taken and it is correct that there are just 16 silver men to every gold bug.

Thos. A. Johnson is again very poorly.

ERLANGER—Miss Maggie Riggs, of Wyoming, O., is the guest of Miss Mattie Hoover.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER'S

TESTED RECIPES

By Frances Lee Barton

Sausage and oNodles in Casserole

2 pounds bulk sausage
1 package medium egg noodles or 2 cups homemade noodles
1 small onion, finely died
1 cup tomatoes.
Salt.

Cook noodles in boiling salted water until tender. Pile into a greased casserole and mix with finely diced onion. Make sausage into patties and brown. Place on top of noodles. Pour tomatoes over all, cover and cook in a moderate oven (350 degree F.) for twenty minutes.

Italian Meat Balls

2 pounds ground beef
2 eggs, beaten
1 grated onion
½ cup grated cheese
½ cup fine dry bread crumbs
Milk
Salt and pepper
2 tablespoons flour
2 tablespoons lard
2 cups tomato puree

Have beef from neck or shank ground quite fine. Combine with bread crumbs. Season with grated onion, grated cheese, and salt and pepper. Moisten with beaten egg and milk. Shape into balls. Roll in flour and brown in hot lard, then drop into tomato puree and let cook slowly for twenty minutes.

COOKING HINTS

Inez S. Wilson, home economist, gives these hints for adding variety in meat cooking:

1. In cooking pork chops, rub skillet first with a cut clove of garlic. This does not give a garlic flavor, but, instead, it gives a faint suspicion of something different which cannot be defined.

2. In preparing a meat loaf, have a slice or two of liver ground with the meat. This adds a delicious flavor.

3. In preparing a bread dressing, dice and brown bacon together with the onion before adding to bread crumbs. Moisten and season the dressing as usual. The bacon and onion browned together add a splendid flavor.

4. In broiling ham, dot with small amount of peanut butter and allow to melt into the ham before serving.

Planked Corned Beef Hash

2 cups corned beef
2 cups cooked potatoes
1 small onion, finely diced
1 small green pepper, diced
½ cup gravy or cream
Cauliflower flowerets
Tomato halves.

Dice corned beef and cooked potatoes, and combined. Season with onion juice and diced green pepper. Moisten with gravy or cream. Pack into an oval shape and place on a fireproof platter or wooden plank. Arrange around it halves of tomatoes and, in a border around the edge, cauliflower flowerets which have been cooked and dipped in melted butter. Place in the broiler oven for long enough to thoroughly heat and brown the hash and vegetables.

"Cherry ripe! Cherry Ripe!" That was one of the oldest street cries. With other picturesque customs it has long since departed because we buy our cherries at the store. The cherry season is all too short, so it is well to serve this luscious fruit as often and in as many forms as possible.

Here is a recipe to make you wish that the fresh fruit season last all year 'round.

Cherry Fruit Pudding

1 package cherry-flavored gelatin; 1½ cups warm water; ½ cup grapefruit juice ½ cup diced grapefruit sections. free from membrane; ½ cup seeded fresh cherries halved.

Dissolve gelatin in warm water. Add grapefruit juice. Chill. When slightly thickened, fold in grapefruit and cherries. Turn into mold. Chill until firm. Unmold. Serve with sauce made from sweetened fresh cherries. Serves 6.

The next time your neighbors are planning a community picnic, take as your share of the good cheer a big batch of Cashew Drop Cookies. Pack them in a cracker tin—or in two cracker tins, if the party is a large one. For these cookies will melt away, like snow in sunshine, soon after the tin is opened. You never tasted crisper, crunchier cookies than these, full of the inimitable flavor of the popular Cashew Nut.

Cashew Drop Cookies

1 cup sifted flour; 1 teaspoon double-acting making powder; ¼ teaspoon salt; 6 tablespoons butter or other shortening; ½ cup sugar; 1 egg, well beaten; 1 cup chopped cashews; 1 teaspoon vanilla; ¼ cup milk.

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder and salt, and sift again. Cream butter thoroughly and add sugar gradually, creaming well; then add egg, ½ cup nuts, and vanilla, and beat thoroughly. Add flour, alternately with milk, mixing well after each addition. Drop from teaspoon on greased baking sheet. Sprinkle with remaining ½ cup nuts. Bake in hot oven (425 degree F.) 8 to 10 minutes. or until done. Makes 2 dozen cookies.

ARTIFICIAL CURING OF TOBACCO BRINGS HIGH RETURNS

The use of coke in curing his 1935 crop of tobacco paid dividends of $10.00 per hundred more than the county average, according to Emmett Elliott, prominent Boone County farmer.

Almost any kind of improvised stove can be used successfully. Mr. Elliott uses one half of a 100 pound carbide can with slits cut in the bottom. The splits permit a draft and afford an opening for ashes. He recommends a small fire under each bent rather than two or three large fires in the barn.

If the tobacco can be all housed within a week it is best to delay firing until all the crop is housed so there will be no waste in heating. Fires should be started early in the morning and unless it is a damp foggy day it is alright to let the fires go out in the afternoon. However, the hygrometer is always the safest indicator as to what to do. "Unless a hygrometer is used you are wasting time and fire because you don't know just what conditions you have in your barn," states Mr. Elliott. "If nature doesn't furnish optinum curing conditions you can dvelop those conditions by the use of heat."

To obtain best results the bottom rail should be at least eight feet from the ground. This will permit an evep circulation of air in all parts of the barn. For a barn 90 by 42 feet the cost of firing will be considerably less than $1 per day. For every two tons of coke used Mr. Elliott says the added receipts for better quality tobacco will be anywhere from $100 to $200.00.

Unless the weather conditions are very bad about seven to nine days will be sufficient in curing.

TIME TO DESTROY APPLE TREE PEST

This is a good time to destroy round-headed apple tree borers, a pest which has done much damage in recent years, particularly to the young apple trees. Prof. W. A. Price of the College of Agriculture of the University of Kentucky suggests that the soil to a depth of about 2 inches be removed from about trees and the bark examined for burrows. When worms are found they can be cut out with a sharp pointed knife or probed with a piece of flexible copper wire. The burrows which the worm make in the bark and wood often result in a complete loss of the tree.

Don't disenfranchise yourself. Register for once and for all at the county clerk. Oct. 10 is your last chance.

WITH ROD AND REEL

According to reports received at this office, fish are biting at lock 38 on the Ohio River. "Bab" Louden stated last week that he had been catching several nice white bass, jack salmon and also reported that he caught a black bass weighing 2¼ pounds on a minnow. At this time of the year, when the Ohio is clear, fish of all species are taking different kinds of bait. Some nice catches are usually reported each week.

Streams in Boone County this week were not in very good shape for the fisherman who uses artificial bait. Practically all week the creeks were muddy, and even Sunday were a little dingy. However, barring heavy rains, Gunpowder should be at the right stage by the latter part of this week, and with the cool days which have been prevailing, bass should be on the lookout for the angler's bait.

We have heard much discussion pertaining to bass, in regard as to whether a bass will strike at artificial bait, immediately after he has been hooked. In most discussions fishermen claim that they will not strike, but in one instance we know of Mr. Bass did strike within a few minutes after being hung. Paul Wilson, of Carrollton and the writer were fishing in Gunpowder recently, and upon making a cast the writer felt a bass strike, set his hook and started to reel him in, the bass gave a hard jerk and was off. Paul Wilson fishing with a Tom Thumb made several casts in the same locality where I lost the fish—Mr. Bass followed his plug to the bank, striking right at his feet, the next cast the bass seemed to boil up from a large rock striking his bait and was hung—the battle was on. For a small bass, I hardly think I have ever witnessed such a fight, he rolled, jerked, leaped and fought as the fisherman desires. After a struggle Mr. Wilson landed him, and upon investigation we found that it was the same fish the writer had hooked only a few minutes previously. Mr. Wilson's bait was stuck in the lower, and the upper lipped contained a tear of approximately one inch.

Mr. Wilson thought it very funny that he had caught the fish I had hooked, saying—"that's the way a fisherman handles them."

While on Gunpowder Creek Sunday, we encountered a gentleman still fishing in Lonesome hole. We stopped to chat, asking if he was having any luck. He said he had caught a few little fellows. He told us that this particular hole of water was full of newlights. To fishermen who like still fishing, newlight fishing is great sport—and real "eating" when properly prepared.

1. Is it true that "money is the acid test" of our Christian Stewardship?
2. In the last analysis, whose is the responsibility if half the members in a congregation contribute nothing from one end of the year to another for Current Expenses, and two-thirds contribute nothing to the program of the Church beyond the local parish?
3. What are some effective means of conducting an Every Member Visitation?
4. What are some of the things every laymen can do to deepen his own spirituality and the spirituality of his congregation?
5. What changes, if any, would you suggest to make the Church Service more inviting and real?
6. Would the "Free-Will Plan" or "Grace System" for meeting our benevolence obligations be preferable to our present Apportionment System?

QUESTIONS ANSWERED ABOUT RESETTLEMENT

Beginning with this issue the Recorder will ask and answer one or more pertinent questions concerning the program of the Resettlement Administration. The answers to those questions have been secured by this newspaper from reliable sources.

What is the aim of the Resettlement Administration program?

The primary purpose for which the Resettlement Administration was set up was to rehabilitate and resettle destitute and low-income farm families. In order to decide the most effective manner in which to do this it was necessary to go back to the causes of the rural distress. We find that the fundamental cause is that millions of acres of land are not being used to the best advantage. It is on this fundamental principle that the whole resettlement program is based. All the activities are directed toward that single vital end: to help the American people in the proper use of their land. The land purchase program removes unprofitable land from cultivation and devotes it to its most valuable economic use. Resettlement aids families stranded on unprofitable land to move elsewhere where they may obtain a more satisfactory standard of living, and rehabilitation seeks to help those who are living on satisfactory land to use this land most profitably. For any valuable and permanent program for the assistance of farm families it is first necessary that land be used to the best advantage; or land is the source of livelihood for farm families.

TASTY SANDWICHES HELP SCHOOL LUNCH

Attractive, tasty sandwiches help to make the school lunch interesting and appetizing. The sandwiches are frequently the substantial part of the school lunch and therefore should be nutritious and easily digested. Miss Florence Imlay of the Kentucky College of Agriculture suggests that a variety of breads, such as raisin, rye, whole wheat, fruit and nut quick breads, and various types of fillings help to keep sandwiches from becoming monotonous.

Sandwich fillings should be moist but not soft enough to soak the buttered bread and tasty but not highly seasoned. About one-fourth cup of filling will make a sandwich moist and palatable.

Left-overs or small amounts of meat, cheese, nuts, dried fruits and raw vegetables can be utilized to excellent advantage in making sandwich fillings. The ingredients of most combinations should be chopped or minced finely and mixed with enough cream or salad dressing to make a moist mixture which will spread easily.

Bread for sandwiches should be at least 24 hours old so that it can be cut thin and spread with butter without crumbling. The butter should be creamed and a thin coating spread over the entire slice to make the sandwich palatable and prevent the filling from soaking the bread. All sandwiches should be wrapped carefully in waxed paper to keep them moist.

The following combination make good sandwich fillings:

Chopped meat, grated carrot, shredded cabbage, chopped onion, mayonnaise.

Diced chicken, chopped celery, chopped parsley, mayonnaise.

Chopped liver, crisp bacon, grated onion, moistened with cream, catsup or salad dressing.

Five chopped hard cooked eggs, crisp bacon or ham, grated carrots, chopped parsley, cream or mayonnaise.

What Irvin S. Cobb Thinks about

Haile's Private Treasury

SANTA MONICA, CALIF.—Had it not been a foreign dispatch, a fellow might have thought it referred to one of our own investment councillors, specializing in looking after widows' and orphans' funds, and having a neat line of European securities to dispose of, and prominent in welfare work and uplift movements in his home community—in short, a typical specimen of a subvariety that seemed to sort of peter out in the years immediately following 1929, some quitting by request, some by indictment and some just vanishing into space, taking with them the clients' remaining cash assets, if any.

Irvin S. Cobb

But this happened to be a cablegram from Geneva stating that, when Emperor Haile and Farewell Selassie hurriedly departed from his capital, he so thoroughly cleaned out the bank of Ethiopia that all the invading Italians found in the vaults was a large throbbing vacuum.

How Mencken Can Write

THIS campaign will liven right up if Henry Mencken, the official human gumboil of the writing craft, takes pen in hand to discuss the men and the issues. You don't have to agree with Hen. You may quarrel with his premises and dispute his conclusions.

But can he make the language pop like a bull-whip! When he gets excited he throbs like a mashed thumb, and cuts loose like an avenging angel. Expressing himself, he always picks words of the right shape and the right color.

Literary Garbage

LET'S admit that southerners of the Col. Carter of Cartersville type were mainly the far-fetched creations of overly-sentimental fictionists. Let's admit the business of painting a largely imaginary aftah-de-wah south was for many years crowded.

But why, in the revolt to debunk this sugary romance, should the land so generously spawn a crop of alleged realists who'd have the rest of the world believe the only part of the south worthy of being written about is almost exclusively peopled by loathsome degenerates of the "Tobacco Road" variety?

If one of these literary garbage collectors will but look about him, he'll find southerners who might make interesting copy and yet, excusing that they leave the sugar out of the corn bread and the lower case "r" out of the language, are pretty much like the run of their fellow Americans elsewhere.

Gas Station Service

AN OPEN letter to the gasoline companies;

Dear gasses—Why must the customer have the windshield wiped—if he doesn't want the windshield wiped?

Maybe he's in a hurry. Maybe he fears the youth with the squirt gun will only mess up the windshield worse than ever. Maybe he's nervous and prefers a blurry outlook so he can't see how many close calls he's going to have from being knocked cold by lady motorists.

Even so, unless he fights like a tiger, he must endure the windshield wiping. I commend the politeness of your attendants, though deploring their frequent habit of apparently going somewhere about a quarter of a mile back of the station to make change. I admire your enterprise and your pumps are indeed works of art. Your highway signs so fill the grateful eye that we don't have to look at comparatively dull things, such as scenery. But my dear gasses, there comes a time when too much service becomes a nuisance.

Heroic First Aid Measures

WHEN those three gallant men were imprisoned in that Moose river mine cave-in up in Canada, facing death in the darkness—one of them you'll remember, did die—and the rescuers finally bored a slender shaft through to their living tomb, almost the first thing sent down from above was some hot coffee with a slug of brandy in it.

Now the Rev. A. A. McLeod has formally protested to the government of Nova Scotia about putting in the brandy.

So I've been sitting here all day trying to make up my mind, if I'd been buried in that freezing, slimy pit, which I'd prefer—to have 'em send along some spiked coffee right away or keep the mixture up on the surface and lower the Rev. A. A. McLeod with a pitcher of ice water.

It's one of those things a fellow really can't decide offhand.

WORKING PLANS OF KENTUCKY'S OLD-AGE ASSISTANCE LAW

(This is the third of the series of questions and answers about the actual working plans of Kentucky's Old-Age Assistance Law, prepared for interested Kentuckians by Dr. A. Y. Lloyd, Director of Old-Age Assistance, Department of Public Welfare. The following seven questions were asked of Dr. Lloyd by the eidtor of one of Kentucky's prominent newspapers.)

1. May an inmate of any Kentucky poor-house terminate his or her stay and then receive payments under the Old-Age Assistance Law?

A. Yes, if he is able to live outside of such an institution. The State law (Section 1) provides that he is not eligible for old-age assistance if his physical or mental condition makes him "in need of continued institutional care." Temporary medical or surgical care in a hospital it not considered "institutional care" in this regard.

2. If an aged person owns a home can he or she receive this assistance?

A. Yes. Many legislative bodies have expressed themselves as feeling that it is not the function of the State to accumulate estates at he expense of the axpayers for he benefit of relatives who will not or cannot support their needy aged. Section II of Kentucky's Old-Age Assistance Law, provides that the total payment paid to any recipient of old age assistance under the Act, shall constitute a lien upon the estate of such recipient.

3. Does having relatives who can aid, bar one from this assistance?

A. The law does not specifically state that having relatives who are able to assist bars an applicant from receiving old-age assistance. It does state a person is eligible whose income, which with contributions, money, subsistence, or service from relatives or others, is inadequate to provide a reasonable subsistance. Section 3314 of Carroll's Kentucky Statutes provides that all adult residents of the State must furnish their parents with shelter, food, care clothing. The problem of when a child is "able" to furnish maintenance for his parents is one of the most difficult problems facing any welfare agency. There may be, and often is a difference of opinion on the part of the agency, the child and the parent. It is one of the most tragic sights in the world when a child callously leaves an aged parent to suffer. No less so is the case of the parent who, after a long life of usefullness and independence, finds that old age, illness, and economic forces beyond his control, or a combination of these factors have robbed him of that independence. All too often the aged parent will make every effort to keep the true facts from his children—dreading to have them learn that their father, whom they have always considered a superior being, has proved inadequate.

Here is where the trained, experienced, tactful and kind worker is most vitally neded. When it is pointed out to the aged parent that he is asking the children of strangers (the tax-paying public) to accept a burden he will not ask of his own children—whose responsibility in return for the years of care and sacrifice he has received—he sees the matter in a different light. When the children realize that such shirking of responsibility on the part of every citizen would increase the tax burden to an impossible level, they often reverse their attitudes and are willing to assume their responsibilities. Families can be made to realize that when each child cooperates to the extent of a few cents a day, a parent can be maintained in comfort at no great sacrifice to any one child.

Many counties have proved that a well-trained, efficient worker can, in one year, save the county many times his salary in this field alone.

4. At death, what becomes of the recipient's property?

A. The Kentucky Law provides (Section II) that "on the death of a recipient, or in the case of a couple, both of whom were assisted, on the death of the surviving member, the total amount paid as assistance, with interest, shall be allowed and deducted from the estate by the court having jurisdiction to settle the estate, and paid to the State. The department of Public Welfare shall require, as a condition to granting assistance in any case, that the applicant submit a properly acknowledged agreement to reimburse the State for all assistance granted." Since the Federal Government provides half of the old-age assistance (plus an additional 5 per cent of the grant for administration) half of any recovery under this section is to be paid to the United States.

5. Will receiving this assistance bar one from other relief?

A. Section 7 of the McCarthy-Ramey Old-Age Assistance Act, states the following: "Recipient not to receive other public assistance. No person receiving other old-age assistance under this Act shall, at the same time, receive any other relief from the state or from any political subdivision thereof, except for medical and surgical purposes.'

Here, again, is where the trained worker is valuable. Eligible aged people must have lived in Kentucky five of the nine years preceding their application. Few needy aged people have lived in a community for years without having aroused the interest of friends who may wish to be of service but who cannot assume entire financial responsibility. The alert, trained worker will coordinate this interest for the benefit of his client. For instance, he can make sure that when someone can dispose of an out-moded coat, a certain client who would use such a garment receives it. He can let the woman's church group which has been piecing quilts know that one of his clients could well use such a quilt.

The trained worker knows that public assistance has not taken and never will take the place of the good neighbor, but on the contrary he is to direct the friendliness which has always existed in American communities, into channels where it can be most effective.

It must also be remembered that the largest expense, other than maintenance, in aged families, is the expense of maintaining health. The Law specifically states that medical and surgical aid can be granted by the public agency.

6. How will the needy be judged?

A. Liabilities minus resources equals need. Each application will receive a systematic, business-like review of all three factors. Resources include much more than cash. Ability to do a little light work is a resource. Relatives are resources; homes are resources, children who cannot at once be located are resources; old insurance policies are resources (many a hopeless aged applicant has been transformed into a happy, independent citizen when a trained worker discovered an old-age insurance policy could be salvaged). Resources change from month to month (gardens in the summer cut down food expense) thus "need" varies constantly in each case. Consistent consideration of this equation, "liabilities minus resources equals need," insures the available money being spent on those who need it most; insures the most efficient and most economical use of tax money; and insures the highest possible level of comfort and security for the needy aged.

7. Who is to be the judge of their "need"?

A. The county worker makes the actual contact with each applicant and with those people who by kinship or friendship or other responsibility are brought into the case. Section 6 of the Kentucky Law states "Upon the completion of such investigation ,the Department of Public Welfare shall decide whether the applicant is eligible for old-age assistance under this Act, the amount of such assistance, and the date on which payment shall begin." Thus every aged applicant gets similar consideration regardless of which county is his residence. The Department of Public Welfare certifies to the Auditor of Public Accounts the amount due and payable to each person who has been granted old-age assistance, and the Auditor issues a warrant on the State Treasurer for the amount so certified. (Section 12).

The Social Security Board cannot cooperate financially in any State's program which does not include the following: "If any applicant is denied assistance or is awarded an amount deemed by him inadequate, or if his assistance be revoked or modified, he may appeal to and have a fair hearing before the Division of Public Assistance."

SOIL CONSERVATION AND ITS ADVANTAGES

Mr. Lawrence Rodamer of Constance. who has been attending Eastern State Teachers College during the summer months, has written a very timely article on the much discussed subject of Soil Conservation. This is material gathered from the most capably edited periodicals and after reading the material and find that it will be of the utmost value to those progressive farmers who are interested in building up their soil. and find it so intelligently constructed, we are going to give it to our readers as it came to us.

Contrary to our beliefs, rivers, hills, and rocks do not last forever. Our standstone and limestone are petrified silt deposits of bygone ages. Thousands of years ago New England looked like the state of Oregon now does with its canyons. Our Cumberland Falls was created by soil erosion. The Shenandoah Valley of Pennsylvania, Virginia, and West Virginia was once a high plateau like Norway. When the softened rocks yielded first, gaps were cut; hence we have Rockfish Gap and Harpers Ferry. Geologists conclude, after careful study, that the Missouri River once flowed into Hudson Bay through the Red River of the North. From these startling facts one can see the vastness of soil erosion.

Today we keep building up our levees on the Mississippi River because erosion in the North sends tons of silt to raise its bed. Someday the Mississippi will overflow its levees andstart a new course. It is also believed that Niagara Falls will go dry and Lake Michigan will drain into the Mississippi. The Hudson and Delaware Rivers once had much farther to get to sea as did also the St. Lawrence. The Gulf of California once was merely a lower course of the Colorado River.

When the pioneer blazed a path across the Appalachians, no one imagined that our forests and soil could ever be depleted. A thousand bonfires started the catastrophe. George Washington advocated soil conservation in his state, and because he practiced scientific farming, he was called an unsuccessful farmer, no one understanding why land should not be cropped year after year without a rest. James Russell Smith says, "No people . . . now or in the past has destroyed its soil so rapidly as we of the United States." In places of North Carolina valuable timber was cleared where only ten crops were grown before the field washed away. Even before the Civil War, farms in the cotton belt had been destroyed. County seats have even been moved because soil erosion caused the surrounding country to be abandoned. "After man, the desert."

In the Nature Magazine of June, 1927, this statement was made: "There are 13,000,000 acres for farming purposes." Contrast that with the present 50,000,000 acres of ruined land and see how fast we have recently depleted our soil. One county of the Piedmont region lost 90,000 acres through erosion; in 40 years 1000 acres of ruined land lay where once was a school surrounded by fertile fields! The Savannah River, Georgia, carries 135 carloads of soil each day. Even on the Costal plain gullies are found sixty feet deep. Cavendish, Vermont, on the slopes of the Green Mountains, witnessed an indictment by nature for denuding her forested hills. In a heavy rain of 1927 a landslide carried away seven houses, some barns and other buildings. The "A-horizon" soil of the East, a sponge-like soil which holds a great amount of water, is being washed away thru over-cropping.

That the problem of our soil has become an acute one was emphasized by the dust storms in the West. In a few months soil which had been unwisely tilled and overgrazed was blown away. 35,000,000 acres were destroyed and 125,000,000 were impaired. Sears, in his "Deserts on the March," asserted that the Mayas of Yucatan lost their civilization through soil erosion. On the Gila River, Arizona, the first grazing was done in 1894; yet, by 1896 overgrazing had already resulted in ruin of the grass carpet and the decrease of the water supply. The U. S. Forest Service estimates that Kansas will lose its soil in fifty-eight years at the present rate of depletion.

One of the results of our overcropping is the lowering of the water table. Common observation shows that wells no longer hold water at the depth they did years ago. The Gila River now almost goes dry in summer. In the West we have the artesian level of water, but even it is threatening to become exhausted if care is not used. A hotel which once stood on the shore of Devil's Lake in North Dakota is now four miles away from the edge of the receding lake. To retain our springs and abundance of water in wells, we must return one-fifth of our forests according to H. L. Ickes, Secretary of the Interior.

How might we check our impending doom? In our independent country where "rugged indivi-idualism" has been so consistently followed we resent government interference wherever we can solve our problems as individuals. If people could work out this situation without huge governmental expenditures and interference, it would be ideal, but our experts on the problem feel that a great deal needs to be done by the government, since it is a social problem of national scope. To affect a worthwhile soil conservation program people must first be convinced of the necessity of governmental direction, Professor Bowman of John Hopkins University believes. As H. L. Ickes, says, "The engineering of human consent is essential here."

The first very wide measures takes by the government were a result of the A. A. A. which was designed primary for the farmer's economic salvation rather than for the conservation of the soil, but it did indirectly result in a checking of erosion through the retirement of millions of hillside and wind-swept acres. On much of this land root crops were planted. The 1935 alfalfa acreage was 14 per cent above that of preceding years; soy beans were planted on 30 per cent more acres.

After the AAA was declared unconstitutional, Congress passed another act known as S. C. A. D. A. It was known as a conservation measure although that is its secondary purpose. Its two aims are (1) to raise the farmers' income and (2) to increase soil fertility $470,000,000 will have been paid this year for taking soil out of cultivation which should never be plowed up. County committees will supervise the work. 1,282,522 acres in and around Texas alone will be affected. Trees are being planted, the farmers being paid five dollars per acre to sow the seedlings. The Agriculture Department discovered 798 different grasses in Asia, which they will try on our wind-swept plains, for in scientific tests grasses have been proven to hold soil much better than any other plants. On the Navajo territory, a system of dams is being built, grasses are planted, and the soil is being enriched by legumes. This project will affect the lives of 45,000 Indians.

Isn't it wonderful, that we, as a democratic society can collectively solve our problems? Of course, we are in the experimental stage of this new development and whether the New Deal is acclaimed or repudiated by America, all of our farm people realize that we must keep working together thru some means. The main fact is: Our soil must be saved, and, while we are going to make a lot of mistakes, we're going to have to keep trying until we hit the best method of soil conservation.

NOTES OF A

CURIOSITY HUNTER

by: Rack Keck

REVAL, ESTHONIA . . . Along the tourist lanes of the world American travelers are looked upon as pocket-bulging suckers. And are they took for a ride! Millions of dollars worth of "very genuine elephant's ivory—my father shot the elephant" is sold to first-time tourists who for no reason whatever consider themselves ivory experts! When the customs officers in New York disdainfully push suck junk aside as unworthy of notice, the travelers begin to suspect that the "ivory"is from the deceased "fathers" shin bone!

Ceylon, the "Jewel Box of Asia" is crammed with tons of costly beautiful and genuine jewels, but seldom do the "expert" American tourists buy any that are genuine. The very polite hindu merchant sobs: "It breaks my heart to sell this jewel It has been in my family for 20 generations!" And, whispering mysteriously, "It was stolen from the temple of Vishnu in the north! It is the Eye of Vishnu!" It isn't suspected until later . . . much later, that the "Eye of Vishnu" was made in the furnaces of a Swiss synthetic jewel factor which operates day and night to supply the demand of American tourists in India for "Eyes of Vishnu!

Seldom does an American get the best of the bargain in traveling the tourist lanes. But off the beaten track it is a different story.

This morning to my hotel here in Reval. came a young Russion whose chief and immediate interest in life is American cigarettes. He would give me money—much money for a carton. Here I felt certain was an opportunity for me to take revenge for at least a little of the money lost by my United Suckers countrymen!

"How much would you give, say, for one carton?" I extracted the carton from the suit case and let him inhale the aroma of American tobacco. His eyes popped with Ecstasy and he clutched for the carton like a desert-lost man reaching for water. I put it behind me. The money first, then the cigarettes!

"Money? Is that all you want for those cigarettes? I have money—plenty of money. How much you want? Fifty dollar? One hundred dollar? I give it!"

This was too good to be true. I was going to get a hundred dollars for a carton of cigarettes that had cost me three dollars in England just the other day!

"Have you got a hundred dollars—American money?"

"Ha! Have I got hundred dollar I got many hundred dollar! I sold trunkfull of amber to American. He pay me American cash!"

He was out of my room like a shot, off to heaven knows where, to get a hundred dollars to buy a carton of American cigarettes!

This should be a paying game: snoop the by-lanes of the world and take revenge for the gypped American tourists by selling American cigarettes for hundred dollar bills to the Jesse Jameses of the world's market places!

I can see the newspaper headlines now: "AMERICAN TOURIST GYPPED BY PERSIAN RUG SELLER!" And a little later: "PERSIAN RUG SELLER GYPPED BY AMERICAN CURIOSITY HUNTER!" Good Idea! Aleardy I was planning warehouses in Paris, London, Vienna, Vladivostok, for my cigarettes. I could go to a warehouse, grab a trunkfull of cigarettes and camel-trek to the nearest corn belt to pick up hundred dollar bills just like that!

I guess this will be the last "Notes of a Curiosity Hunter." I am going into the cigarette business. Nice to have met you. Thanks for reading my column!

But wait, let me show you how easy it is to gyp the world if you know your stuff. Here comes my first customer. I can hear him running like mad down the hall! Running? I'll have them fighting for my cigarettes!

The door burst open. "Have you got cigarettes still?" he asks me, afraid I might have sold them to someone else.

"Sure, here they are. Have you got your hundred dollars?"

"Ha! Have I got my hundred dollars! Sure. Here!"

"O. K. Cashotski, and here are your cig . . . hey! Wait a minute. Where did you get this bill?"

"From American. I sold him trunkfull of amber. Ha!"

"Was it good amber?"

"Good amber?" He thought I was crazy for asking such a question. "Of course not. I sold to American!"

" . . . and so is this hundred dollar bill."

I guess, after all, I'll continue to snoop around the world hunting for curiosities and writing this column. Cashotski's hundred dollar bill—all the hundred dollar bills he had—were printed on the top with the word, "Confederate Currency!"

Work won't hurt anybody but some folks here seem afraid to try it.

Don't try to keep up with your neighbors; let them keep up with you.

MAGILL GIVES PLAN FOR HOME ORCHARD

In a leaflet of suggestions for planting a home orchard, W. W. Magill of the Kentucky College of Agriculture points out that 18 to 20 apple trees, carefully selected as to variety, and given reasonable care, should, after they reach bearing age, produce sufficient fruit from late June through March for family use and a surplus of 25 to 100 bushels for local sales. Returns, he says, should more than pay the annual cash expense of spraying and fertilizing.

Mr. Magill recommends varieties that ripen in succession from early in the season, but says that two-thirds of the planting should be of late kinds. He also recommends practices as to peaches, plums, cherries and grapes that should be grown in the home orchard, together with suggestions regarding planting, and concludes:

"You can afford to plant the home orchard on the best land you have, and, in addition, use plenty of farm manure. By all means, intercrop the land the first five years with such crops as tobacco, potatoes, beans, tomatoes, or any garden crop."

The average politician thinks there is a great deal of "pap" in newspapers.

WILL REMODEL SEARS STORE

COVINGTON PLANT TO BE ENLARGED, MANAGER OF CINCINNATI GROUP ANNOUNCED FRIDAY.

Announcement of a project to enlarge and remodel the entire Sears, Roebuck & Co. store at 13 W. Seventh street, Covington, was made Friday by J. R. Allais, manager of Sear's Cincinnati group.. The enlargement project is designed to meet the demands for increased space for sales, Mr. Allais said.

A new second floor which will be devoted entirely to the sale and display of furniture, rugs and stoves is being added. This additional area will enlarge the present store by one-third. The basement, where furniture, rugs and stoves previously were displayed, will have a greatly enlarged line of farm implements, toys, plumbing and heating, etc.

New electric freight elevators will be installed and the entire heating and ventilating system will be remodeled and modernized.

"The Sears, Roebuck & Co. store has been part of the Covington business district for only a little over a year and a half," said J. R. Bonnett, manager of the Covington store. "In that short time the customer demands for improved shopping facilities have grown so rapidly that the management decided to take this step to make an enlarged and improved store available.

"Our newly remodeled store will enable us to broaden the scope of our service, and it bespeaks our regard for the future of this city. We shall continue our efforts to do everything we can to assist those groups having for their purpose the welfare and advancement of Covington."

Work will start within a few days and the job is scheduled for completion about Nov. 15. Business will be conducted as usual while the work is in progress.

Barkley said it was not clear to him "why the Presidents of some large corporations are contributing to the Republican campaign fund in spite of the fact their corporation are receiving greater net profits and greater business now than at any time in the last six years."

Part of the opposition to the President, he said, was "the penalty for progressive thinking."

The Kentucky Senator said that "while the Roosevelt administration has ben compelled to see unbalanced budgets because of the depression, and has been compelled to increase the public debt by $10,000,000,000 it is a notable fact that during the Roosevelt administration the wealth of the nation has increased by $100,000,000,000, the income of the American people by $20,000,000,000, the income of the American farmer more than $3,000,000,000, and the value of securities on the New York Stock Exchange by $35,000,000,000."

DEMOCRATS HOLD MEETING OCT. 3

AT LATONIA RACE TRACK—LOGAN PREDICTS BALANCED BUDGET WITHIN TWO YEARS—RIFT IS MENTIONED.

Recalling the work of President Roosevelt in saving the banks, many homes and farms, insuring bank deposits and demanding that the truth be told by security salesmen, U. S. Senators M. M. Logan, of Kentucky and Tom Connally of Texas opened the Democratic state campaign at the Latonia Race Track Saturday in a manner still being discussed by northern Kentucky Democrats.

Governor A. B. "Happy" Chandler presided over the meeting and introduced various celebrities, including Senator Alben W. Barkley, who announced that he had been told to "talk until radio time without saying anything about anything that Senators Logan and Connally were to touch upon."

The recent rift in Democratic primary ranks was alluded to in humorous fashion both by Governor Chandler and Senator Logan, the two who were considered principals in the difficulties over choice of a state campaign chairman.

Said Governor Chandler: "I've always said that anyone who couldn't stand the gaff should get out of politics. I'm just as strong for Mills Logan today as I was for another in the primary."

Said the senator: "I agree with the governor that if one can't stand the gaff he should get out. I have no ill feeling toward anyone. I love everybody. I even love Dan Talbott over there. Dan made a couple of slaps at me during the campaign and I had to give him a love tap back, but I love Dan because he fought fair just as Governor Chandler did."

Dan Talbott, state commissioner of finance who was seated near the speaker, joined with Governor Chandler in a hearty laugh at the remarks.

T. Monroe Swindler, Kenton County chairman, opened the meeting and introduced Judge Johnst Northcutt, Fifth District chairman. Judge Northcutt introduced Governor Chandler.

CONSTANCE WINS LEAGUE PENNANT

BY WINNING FINAL GAME OVER THEIR RIVALS AT THE HOME FIELD SUNDAY—SCORE 6 TO 4.

The Constance boys brought home another victory, this time to win the league pennant, Sunday, by defeating Mariemont by a final score of 6 to 4. The Constance team has demonstrated their talent all during the season and has played good baseball all year. Sunday, however, they were rewarded for their efforts by winning the pennant for this season in the Lowe-Campbll League.

This is the second time that manager Red Lane has led his club to the championship. Players composing the team are Vahlsing boys, Joe Aylor, Fox, Red Chamberlain, Frank Purcell, Fritz Klasserner, Adam Link, Shorty Clayton, Jack Garnett, Carl Hale, Dick Schultze, Bob Vahlsing.

Fox and Schultize went all the way for Constance, allowing their opponents only ten hits in the game. Behmyer and Philhower were the battery for Mariemont, allowing the Constance boys 15 hits, scoring six runs.

Two-base hits: Vuotto, Hoberg, Hammond, Fox, Klasserner, Schultize; three-base hits: Philhower, Purcell; home run: Hammond. Strike-outs by Philhower 4, by Fox 5. Umpires, Erpenbeck, Rauh and scorer, Boem.

Manager Red Lane wishes to express his thanks to everyone who were present at the Sunday game. He says that the large crowd helped the boys on to victory. He hopes to have another baseball club next year, just as good as this one.

PAYMENTS FOR CO. FARMERS

EXPECTED TO REACH $38,659.50 IN CLASS 1 TOBACCO PAYMENTS, ACCORDING TO H. R. FORKNER.

Boone County farmers are being notified by letter on the probable amounts of their ACP performance benefits for 1936, according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent. The payments for tobacco in Class I is definite and amounts to approximately $38,659.50.

The Class I payment for general soil depleting crops is not definite because of a 11 per cent downward reduction base adjustment for the county as a whole required by the State office. The approximate payment for the County on this class of crops will be $31,121.30.

The Class II or Soil Building Allowance payment has been most difficult for farmers to understand. These payments are made for carrying out soil building practices as seeding grasses, legumes, liming, phosphate on grass or legume crops and certain other approved practices. Each farm has a definite amount per acre that will be paid if that particular practice is carried out. All approved practices will be paid on up to Maximum allowance for that farm. If the maximum is not used that part which is used will be paid. The maximum soil building allowance for the County is $40,465.60.

The County Agent's office is using every effort to be of service to farmers, realizing it is difficult to understand all points of a new program, and urge farmers to call at the office when they have any questions. The point difficult for most farmers is to understand that payments are made for tobacco, general soil depleting crops and soil building practices. Most letters to date have been only on the soil building practices.

Miss Alberta Deck, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Deck, of Burlington Route 2 and Homer Jones of the same address were quietly married Monday morning at the Burlington Baptist church with Rev. James, officiating.

CABLE SYSTEM BEING ERECTED

THROUGHOUT BOONE COUNTY TOWNS BY CONSOLIDATED TELEPHONE CO. — ENTIRE SYSTEM TO BE REBUILT.

The Consolidated Telephone Company, under the management of E. G. Stephenson, is getting well underway with their new project to rebuild the entire telephone system in Boone County. There will be a cable system in every town in the county instead of the mass of wires in use at present.

Tuesday morning the working crew started in Burlington to erect new poles and make necessary arrangements for the new lines to be erected in the near future. New lines have already been completed to the following places: Beaver to Walton, Hebron to Bullittsville, Hebron to North Bend, Hebron to Taylorsport, and several new lines in the town of Constance. The town of Walton will have extra lines erected to reduce the over-load which exists at the present time. There will be extra carriers erected to perform this work.

The past service rendered by the Telephone Company has not been entirely satisfactory to either the customers or the company itself. With the new changes, however, we should get ideal telephone service over the entire county.

A great part of the credit for the present improvement should go to the manager, E. G. Stephenson, as he has worked to this end ever since he has been in charge. Since he was chosen manager, the lines have been in better conditions than has ever been known, however, they were in such bad condition that they were almost beyond repair.

During the installation of the new cables through the various towns, there will be at no time any disconnection so that anyone will be without telephone service.

COVINGTON MAN NAMED

AS PRESIDENT OF KENTUCKY MEDICAL ASSOCIATION—NATIONAL LEADER IS SPEAKER AT PADUCAH MEETING.

Paducah, Ky., October 6—Dr. John H. J. Upham, Columbus, Ohio President-elect of the American Medical Association, tonite pleaded for greater cooperation between the medical profression, social services, and the nation's economists at a public meeting held in connection with the eighty-first annual convention of the Kentucky Medical Association in meeting here.

"We physicians should put down the natural resentment we have felt toward some sociologists," Dr. Upham declared, "who have suggested that what is needed is more medical service.

"We feel that is not the real answer; socialized medicine will not solve our great problems.

"We must attempt to work with sociologists and economists to remove the causes of such problems. Besides curative medicine we must have preventive medicine; public health work, raising of the level of economic security and broadening it to assure all persons proper living conditions.

"Most of all, we must educate the public to see the value of preventive measures.

"We must show them how it is to their advantage, much more than to ours, to have early diagnosis and treatment of illness and disease, and to make use of all the immunizing measures we know."

Dr. J. D. Northcutt, Covington, new President of the state association, asserted recognition of the value and inevitability of socialization in medicine was unavoidable and necessary. He called upon the progression to take deeper interest in medical legislation.

Earlier in the day Dr. Northcutt was installed as the new head of the state association.

RURAL SCHOOL TOURNAMENT

TO BE HELD AT HEBRON SATURDAY, OCTOBER 10—TESTS IN MORNING, ATHLETICS IN AFTERNOON.

Each year in October, under the direction of the University of Kentucky, there is held a Rural School Tournament in Kentucky. In this tournament, by a process of elimination, the best pupils in the rural elementary schools of the State have an opportunity to compete in scholarship, music dramatic speaking and athletics.

Representatives from most of the County schools of the State meet in Lexington for the final contests. Increased interest thru keen competition is secured by this method of selecting winners.

The Boone County Scholarship and Athletic events will be held at Hebron Saturday, October 10, beginning at nine oclock slow time. The tests will be given in the morning and the athletic events in the afternoon. Reports show a widespread interest in both groups. Each school will send eager boys and girls to compete with with neighboring schools.

It is hoped that parents and friends will give their best support to the boys and girls as well as the teachers in the various schools at the local elimination tournament. Pupils from the fifth thru the eighth grade will be eligible, provided they have not reached the age of sixteen.

Examinations in the various subjects will be administered and running, jumping, baseball throwing, etc., will feature the afternoon events. Much enthusiasm can be created, if a large group of followers attend these contests.

On Friday evening, October 16, the Declamation and Chorus contest will be held at the Florence school. This program has a small admission charge, but the character of the progrm is such as to attract a large audience. The money received from this program will be used to help defray expenses to Lexington the week following.

Winners of all Boone County events will be announced in these columns after the contests are held. Of course all Boone County is behind these children and hope they can bring back the trophies from Lexington, as they have been able to do in other years.

Editorial of the Week

TAKE THE HOME PAPER

We once knew a man who was too stingy to take the newspaper in his home town and always sent over to borrow his neighbor's paper.

One evening he sent his son over to borrow the paper, and while his son was on his way he ran into a large swarm of bees and in a few minutes his face looked like a summer squash.

Hearing the agonized cries of his son, the father ran to his assistance, and in doing so ran into a barbed wire fence, cutting a handful of flesh from his anatomy and ruining a $4 pair of pants.

The old cow took advantage of the hole in the fence, got into the corn field and killed herself eating green corn. Hearing the racket, the farmer's wife ran out of the house, upsetting a four-gallon churn full of cream into a basket of kittens killing the whole flock. She slipped on the cream and fell downstairs, breaking her leg and a $19 set of false teeth. The baby, left alone, crawled thru the cream into the parlor and ruined a $40 carpet. During the excitement, the daughter eloped with the hired man and took all the family's savings with her.

The moral is that every man should be a subscriber to his home paper.—The Tunkhannock (Pennsylvania) Republican and New Age of August 17, 1916.

USE TATTOOING TO PROTECT POULTRY

Approximately 800 farmers have joined the Kentucky Poultry Improvement Association, through its protective department, to portect their flocks against thievry. Each farmer is given a brand which is tatooed on the webs of the birds' wings. This brand, which is registered with law enforcement officers and poultry buyers, makes the tracing of stolen birds relatively easy. The brand also may be used on other stock, and even on farm equipment.

SEN. NORRIS SCORES LAND FOR OPPOSING CORPORATION TAX AND DEPOSIT INSURANCE

"It is because I feel very deeply that the defeat of President Roosevelt would bring disastrous consequences that I am moved as never before to plead with my fellow citizens to give honest, careful consideration of the questions involved in this contest," said Senator George W. Norris of Nebraska in a radio address Friday night, "and to earnestly urge that they take no step that might plunge us into anarchy and despair.

"In the course of the campaign I shall discuss in detail the causes that led to the crisis in the life of the country when President Roosevelt took the helm of the Ship of State.

"Laws passed in opposition to monopolies and vast combinations of wealth have brought down on his head the condemnation of the most powerful financial group that ever existed in the history of the world. By false inuendo, by misleading propaganda they have been trying to prove that the New Deal is an evil thing.

"The convention which nominated Gov. Landon did not have the courage to denounce any specific measure, and with two exceptions, to which I shall refer, Mr. Landon thus far has confined his criticism to meaningless generalities. He has lacked either the candor or the courage to take up these measures which constitute the New Deal and tell the people wherein they are wrong and what he would put in place of them.

"One of the inequalities of our Government under laws existing prior to the Roosevelt Administration was that men of great wealth were escaping payment of their just share of income taxes. They had found a loophole and fairly tumbled over one another to take advantage of it. If rich men, with incomes so large they were paying income taxes under the higher brackets of say 60 per cent, could place a large portion of their property in corporations, thus having to pay income of only 15 per cent, they could by this simple operation say many millions in taxes, provided of course the dividends of the corporations were not distributed to stockholders. Thus, by refusing to distribute the income of corporations, the Treasury of the United States was being robbed of vast amounts. More over, this method was unfair to small stockholders, many of whom depended for their living upon corporation earnings that should be distriubted. The income of thousands of these was so small they were paying income taxes in the lower brackets and indeed many of them, not having incomes large enough to pay any income tax, when their dividends were retained in the corporation were taxed at the corporation tax rate in many cases at a higher rate. This unjust legal loop-hole had the effect of increasing the taxes of the poor men and women who paid taxes in the lower brackets and at the same time decreasing the taxes of the rich.

"President Roosevelt proposed that we amend this law and provide that undistributed dividends of corporations be taxed at a higher rate, so that men of great wealth would not be able to escape payment of their just share of taxes through this technicality. And this law simply carries out the principle of the income tax law, which is that income tax should be graduated according to the size of the income. It is one of the fairest laws ever enacted.

"This is one law Mr. Landon has assailed as 'the most COCKEYED piece of tax legislation ever imposed in a modern country,' and declared he would 'recommend the repeal of this vicious method of taxation.'

"So Mr. Landon wants this loophole kept open in order that greedy millionaires may avoid payment of their share of taxes. This puts the issue squarely before the American people. I am not complaining because Mr. Landon takes this stand, but I want the people to know whose servant he is.

"In a fairly recent letter to the Illinois Bankers' Association, Mr. Landon denounced any and every form of security of bank deposits. He was outspoken in his denunciation of such law and I take it the Federal Deposit Insurance Act is in his opinion, another 'COCKEYED' piece of legislation. There is no doubt that this important measure is accountable for much of the money now on deposit in our banks, the largest in the history of the national banking system.

"I hope Mr. Landon will be as explicit as to other features of the New Deal. He owes it to the country. He should not forget that his fellow citizens did not have the honor of an acquaintance with him until he was abruptly selected by Mr. Hearst to be the nominee of a great political party. I would like to have him tell the country whether the Holding Company Act is 'COCKEYED.' Wil lhe tell the farmers that the Farm Credit Administration is 'COCKEYED?' If he would continue relief to agriculture, will he tell the American people where he would get the money?

"In the only two cases cited by Mr. Landon, it is plain that the judgment of every honest, patriotic citizen must be opposed to his position. The bogus cries of 'bolshevism' and 'dictatorship' are not merely unfounded—they are foolish. A dictatorship cannot be set up unless the ground for it has been made fertile by despotic schemes of organized and concentrated financial selfishness."

"CARAMEL APPLES ON A STICK"

Children are often hungry and tired when they come home from school. Milk or fruit juice is good for them, or a "caramel apple on a stick." The following receipe is approved by Miss Marie Barkley of the University of Kentucky home economics department. Cook one cup of white sugar, one cup of brown sugar, one-half cup of water and one-half cup of vinegar together until a small amount dropped in cold water will give a crackling sound when pressed together. Stick a wooden skewer in each apple and dip it in the hot syrup. Drain on heavy waxed paper.

The WEEKLY CONSTITUTIONAL

By MAX BERNS

A TIME-TESTED POWER

When did our Courts first declare acts unconstitutional?

Before the American Revolution, the colonies were governed under English grants and charters or constitutions, and nearly 400 acts of colonial legislatures in conflict with these constitutions were declared void.

Similarly, courts declared void the acts of colonial legislatures in conflict with colonial fundamental laws or constitutions.

There was over a century of experience under this procedure when the Constitutional Convention met. Its minutes show why the delegates favored this method against other alternatives and why, in our Constitution (Article III), they vested this power in our courts.

The first Congress (in which sat many delegates to the Constitutional Convention and the state conventions that ratified our Constitution) passed and President Washington signed the Federal Judiciary Act which specifically recognizes the power of the Supreme Court to review acts of Congress.

In President Washington's first term Congress passed a pension law which several federal circuit courts stated was in conflict with our Constitution. Congress thereupon changed the law.

In Jefferson's administration, Chief Justice Marshall, speaking for a unanimous Supreme Court, declared another act of Congress unconstitutional because in conflict with our Constitution.

This time-tested power of the courts in our protection against unwarranted acts by the government. It originated more than a century before our Constitution, was exercized in colonial times, is specifically granted in our Constitution, was approved by the states in ratifying the Constitution and was specifically recognized by the first Congress.

EXPERIMENT STATION CONDUCTING TESTS IN CURING TOBACCO

In an effort to determine the best and most practical methods of curing tobacco, the Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station has established experimental curing barns for burley at Lexington and for dark tobacco at the Western Kentucky Experiment Substation at Princeton.

Crops of tobacco are undergoing the curing process at both places, with automatic instruments recording changes in temperature, humidity, air velocity, weight and other curing factors. Bottom, vertical and ridge ventilators are being tested, as well as firing for both burley and dark tobacco. At Princeton, the so-called "soft cure" and the "old method" are being compared.

While the information gathered in the barns will indicate what happens in the curing process, extensive studies have been inaugurated in the new tobacco research laboratory, recently completed at the Experiment Station at Lexington, to determine the curing requirements for the highest quality of leaf.

With facts gathered about changes that take place in temperature, humidity, air velocity and weight of tobacco in the barn, and also with information regarding best curing requirements, the Experiment Station hopes eventually to be able to design barns and recommend curing practices that will enable farmers to put higher quality leaf on the market.

FAVORS 40-50 MESH SCREEN LIMESTONE

Tests made at the Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station indicate that limestone that passes through a 40-50 mesh screen is most effective on land, and that limestone which passes a 10-mesh screen is satisfactory for small applications.

An advantage of the small application is that limestone may be mixed with the fertilizer and drilled in when seeding grain. The small application is also advantageous where tobacco is grown, because there is no danger of injury to tobacco from the lime, if is applied when the grain is sown in the rotation.

A third of a ton of 40-50 mesh limestone per acre, applied when grain was sown in a rotation of corn, wheat and mixed legumes, was practically as effective, over a nine-year period, as a two-ton application of 10-mesh and finer limestone applied at the beginning of the period.

IMPROVED FARMING HELPS NEGROES TO STAY OFF RELIEF

Sixty-five percent of the 800 Negro land owners in Christian county planted late garden and forage crops, and most of them have found it possible to keep off relief, according to R. M. Story, Negro county agent. He cites Jim Overton as an example of a Negro farmer who cooperates with the county agent learns all he can, and then applies his knowledge, "in order to live on the farm and stay clear of relief loans."

" On this farm," he continues, "the second planting of corn, potatoes, beans, cabbage and turnips are growing well. The first crop of tomatoes, squash, cabbage, sweet potatoes and the like made 70 percent of a crop because of intensive soil preparation.

"Mr. Overton's acre of garden crops, nine shoats, three brood sows, 13 pigs, two milk cows and a small flock of poultry take care of the food needs and furnish surplus cash for the family. His corn crop suffered little damage from drought, as the 12-acre field has been limed and a second-year crop of clover turned under. It is estimatd the field will yield 500 bushels. Cooperating in the agricultural conservation program, Mr. Overton is increasing his alfalfa acreage.,,

Lesson for October 11

BECOMING A CHRISTIAN

LESSON TEXT—Acts 16:22-34, Philippians 3:7-16.

GOLDEN TEXT—Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved.—Acts 16:31.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Two Happy Prisoners.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Heroes in Prison.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How May I Become a Christian.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—How to Become a Christian.

The conversion of Lydia and her gracious growth into usefulness as a Christian is in striking contrast with the experience that Paul had with the demon-possessed damsel (Acts 16:16-18). A satanic power of divination had made her profitable to unscrupulous men. Such men have not perished from the earth, and there are still those who make merchandise of silly and sinful women.

Paul commands the demon to come out of her and at once the issue is drawn.

I. Christianity versus Crooked Business (Acts 16:22-24).

As long as the missionaries were at the place of prayer and in the home of Lydia they were not disturbed. But as soon as they touched the illegitimate gain of these "business" men who were making money from the misfortune of the poor damsel, bitter opposition arose.

Cunningly combining the plea of false patriotism and anti-Semitism with the ever-potent argument that business was being hindered, they raised a hue and cry which resulted in the beating and imprisonment of Paul and Silas (Acts 16:14-21).

We live in another century, but men are the same. Let the church and its members only go through the motions of formal service and present a powerless religious philosophy, and the world will applaud and possibly support its activities. But let the pungent power of the gospel go out through its life and ministry, and deliver devil-possessed men and women, let its God-given grace expose the hypocrisy and wickedness of men and there will soon be opposition.

II. Down, but not defeated (vv. 25, 26).

The preachers landed in jail, beaten, bloody, and chained to the stocks. What a disgrace it would have been if they had come there because of their misdeeds. How ashamed we are when professed Christian leaders sin and fall into the hands of the law.

But "Blessed are they which are persecuted for righteousness sake" (Matt. 5:10). Little wonder that they forgot their bruises and their chains and began to sing and pray, even at midnight.

Note that "the prisoners were listening to them." The words we speak, the songs we sing, our every action, speak either for God or against Him. "Whether therefore ye eat, or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God."

As they pray God speaks, chains fall away, prison doors open. Men can lock doors; God shakes them open.

The jailer, cruel and bold when he put them into prison, but now in fear, is about to kill himself. But God has better thoughts concerning him. Paul cries out, "Do thyself no harm" and he experiences

III. Salvation Instead of Suicide (vv. 27-34).

Thank God for the earthquakes in our lives which bring us to him.

The jailer, being rightly exercised by God's dealings with him, asks the greatest and most important question that can ever come out of the heart of unregenerate man—"What must I do to be saved?" Reader, have you asked this question? Then you, too, are ready for the answer, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved."

The closing verses of our lesson present the personal testimony of Paul that he had surrendered

IV. All for Christ (Phil. 3:7-14).

All was but loss to him compared with what he gained in Christ. We speak of surrendering all for Christ, but as a matter of fact we lose only what is of no real value and make infinite gain.

Paul, as are all great followers of Jesus Christ, was a "one thing" man. All that he had or was or hoped to be, every ounce of energy and love, went into his pressing "toward the goal unto the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus."

Independence of Opinions

It is easy in the world to live after the world's opinion; it is easy in solitude to live after out own; but the great man is he who in the midst of the crowd keeps with perfect sweetness the independence of solitude.—Ralph Waldo Emerson.

Overcoming Desires

I count him braver who overcomes his desires than him who conquers his enemies; for the hardest victory is the victory over self. —Aristotle.

Terrill-Dickerson

A lovelier day than Thursday, October 15th, 1886, would be difficult to imagine. The trees in their gorgeous livery of red and gold, the air spicy and balmy, and the glorious sunshine made it a fitting day for a wedding, and the consecration of two lives to a unity of purpose and effort for all future time. Sweetly solemn was the ceremony that made Miss Hattie Dickerson and Mr. Benjamin Terrill one. The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lucien Dickerson, of near Union, and a most loveable and charming girl; the groom, one of our sterling and energetic young men and a son of Dr. J. C. Terrill, of Covington, Ky.

They were married at the residence of the bride's parents by Rev. Sam Adams, of the Union Baptist Church. Preceded by Miss Lulu Williams and Mr. Lucien Dickerson, Jr., and Miss Nannie Bristow and Mr. Marshall Hedges, the happy couple came into the parlor at 1:30 p. m. to the strains of Mendelssohn's Wedding March played by Mrs. Susie Garrison. The ceremony was brief, but impressive and both the contracting parties seemed fully aware of the full import of the step they were taking. The bride looked lovely in a gray cloth traveling suit and carried a huge bunch of roses. The groom was attired in the conventional black.

After the ceremony the guests retired to the dining room where a delightful luncheon was spread, after which the happy couple amid a shower of rice and old shoes left, about 4:00 p. m. for Cincinnati, thence to go on a pleasant tour before returning to take up their home on Mr. Terrill's farm near Union.

Among those present were Mrs. J. C. Terrill, Miss Mary Terrill, Dr. Smith Terrill, James Terrill, D. Ranshaw, E. T. Rice and Prof. F. and Mrs. B. L. Rice, Miss Annie Rice, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Conner, Mr. and Mrs. C. T. Rice, Mrs. Susie Garrison, Mr .and Mrs. H. A. Hicks, Mrs. W. L. Gaines, Miss Lulu Williams, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Cleek and daughters, Misses Effie and Fannie Mr. and Mrs. Napoleon Bristow, Marshal Hedges, Robt. Chambers, Dr. and Mrs. Adams, Elzie Garrison, Tommy Huey, Mr. and Mrs. Finnell and daughters, Misses Emma and Mary, Mr. and Mrs. Hogan and daughter, Miss Lou.

TOBACCO MOSAIC TOLL REDUCED

The toll taken by tobaccc mosaic was reduced in Logan county by farmers who followed the advice of County Agent C. L. Hill in not using home-cured tobacco while working. Patches had less than ½ of 1 percent in many cases Workers were careful to wash their hands with strong soap before entering the field and to smoke or chew only manufactured tobacco, as mosaic is spread by contact with infected tobacco.

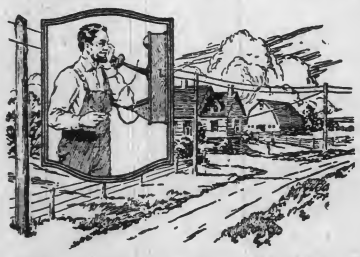
FASTEST GROWING CO-OPS



National financial magazines have recently devoted much space to the astonishingly rapid development of all sorts of cooperatives both in this country and abroad. In this connection the following figures from The Progressive Farmer are of special interest:—

"Farmers' cooperatives for purchasing oil, gasoline, insurance, irrigation, electricity, and other farm supplies are today the fastest growing among the 20,000 or more farmers' business cooperatives in the United States. The total number of farmers' organizations set up for the specific purpose of cooperative purchasing is nearly 2,000. There are 8,800 farmers' marketing organizations, having a membership of approximately 2,500,000. The estimated sales value of farm products cooperatively marketing durning the 1934-35 season was $1,343,000,000."

what Irvin S. Cobb thinks about:

Hot Political Campaigns.

HOLLYWOOD, CALIF.—They say this will be the liveliest fight for years and years, with glee clubs gargling and the boys out with brass bands—and brass-knucks; and batteries of college professors firing on opposition professors.

But they'll never reclaim the glorious ancient spirit. We're too tame. Take '96. Now, there was a campaign for you. When Bryan was a discovery instead of a chronic recurrence.

Irvin S. Cobb

Two life-long friends would meet. "What d'ye think of this here free silver thing?" one would ask. "I think it's the greatest notion in history," the second fellow would say. "What do you think?" "I think you're a dirty such-and such!" The first man would yell, and then everybody would start bouncing those old-fashioned brass cuspidores off of everybody else's dome.

J. Edgar Boulder.

OWING to recent developments over which it had no control, I believe the Interior department temporarily has shelved the idea of changing J. Edgar Hoover's name to J. Edgar Boulder, as was previously predicted in these dispatches. But now certain critics at Washington insist on accusing that gentleman of over-advertising in connection with his latest activities. Well, he has the advantage over some press agents. When he promises a show he certainly puts it on upon the day and date announced, with the band playing "The Alcatraz Drag"—and every cage full.

Funny Foreign Names.

WORD from Warsaw is that the incumbent, the Hon. Marjan Zyndram Koscialcowski, having resigned, the president of Poland has picked as the new premier none other than Gen. Felicyan Slawogskladkowski. The latter gentleman has already been installed up to and including his first five or six syllables, the rest of the name running as a second section.

So what you mistook for static on the radio night before last was just the news broadcaster trying to pronounce him as a whole.

Ever Rising Taxes.

ANYBODY who fondly believes that, regardless of which outfit wins in November, taxes won't keep right on going up and up has a thinking apparatus that dates back quite a spell.

I'd say it dates back to the climax of the big rise, as set forth in the Bible, and is a direct inheritance from the skeptical folks who wouldn't harken to the prophetic warning.

Remember the scene, don't you? The forty days' rain still beating relentlessly down, the freshet climbing higher and higher, the animals marching in two by two.

And with the old ark starting to move and Father Noah yelling, "All aboard," and with the waters closing over their heads, those know-it-alls still gurgling through their valedictory bubbles, "Shuckin's, there ain't goin' to be no flood."

Honoring Lee and Jackson.

WHEN the Post Office department includes among the gallery of the greatest Americans, to be pictured in the new issue of memorial stamps, the faces of the Confederate chieftains, Lee and Jackson, what happens?

Why, nobody waves the bloody shirt. Nobody ennobles the sorry word "traitor" by applying it to the memories of those two gallant soldiers and simple Christian gentlemen. Nobody in the name of patriotism drags the mouldering bones of sectional rancor out of the ground. Nobody beats the "Rogue's March for Rebels" on hate's snare drum.

Instead, all over the Union, men and women applaud this generous but merited gesture. A leading paper of Boston—Boston, no less, once the mulching bed of abolition and the breeding ground for anti-southern sentiment—editorially commends the idea.

Railcar Popular in France

The railcar, or "automotrice," as it is known there, is becoming one of the most popular means of rapid passenger transport in France. At the same time great efforts are being made to increase the speed of these railcars. Every few weeks a new record is established by one of the rival constructing companies. Record was attained by M. Jean Bugatti, who drove a Bugatti railcar from Strasbourg to Paris in 3 hours 31 minutes, averaging 89.4 miles an hour. Seventy-five Bugatti railcars are now running on the French railway system. M. Jean Bugatti considers that railcars run on petrol are particularly useful for ultra-rapid transit transport over distances of three or four hundred miles.—London Sunday Observer.

THE FARM AND HOME

(Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station)

Green tomatoes have practically the same food value as ripe red tomatoes, and can be fried, stuffed, preserved, pickled or used for pies. Tomatoes well matured at frost time may be ripened by pulling up the vines, hanging them in the basement, attic or garage.

If blankets have become too short by shrinkage or mending, they can be lengthened by sewing at one end a strip of muslin 12 to 18 inches wide. This extra length can be tucked under the mattress at the foot, leaving the woolen part on the bed.

House plant need a cool soap-and-water bath occasionally to take the dust off the leaves. This can be done by laying the plant on its side and sponging each leaf off with absorbent cotton dipped in cool suds of mild soap. Be sure to rinse off the soapy water. Do not let the soapy water drain into the soil.

Grazing grass close in the late fall or early winter probably means that it will not carry as much livestock the following season. Many farmers try to have their pasture go into the winter with enough growth to have the ground well covered.

Grain Straws, corn stover and coarse hays, and even some weeds may be made into fairly good stock roughages by the use of black strap molasses. Some farmers dilute the molasses with water and then sprinkle the mixture on the roughage.

WITH ROD AND REEL

Last week the editor and one of his helpers spent a few days on Cumberland River. We were accompanied by Paul Wilson, of Carrollton and Adam Juett, of Williamstown, both veteran fisherman.

Our expectations were high as to the number of bass we would catch—but the first morning out our hopes were shattered by the condition of the river. The water was at a very low stage, very clear and in places miles between places that could be fished with any results. However, we returned to our cabin that night with seven bass, which seemed small enough to us.

Residents of that section told us they had no rainfall during the entire summer, thus leaving the river at its lowest stage in years.

The third day out proved to be very successful for Mr. Wilson who brought in the largest bass of the week which measured 19½ inches and was one of the gamest I have ever seen caught. We were fishing a very deep pool which had yielded several bass during other trips in the past few years. A stiff wind was blowing a ripple on the water when the fish struck, and I thought that his bait had struck a rock. Mr. Wilson set his hook and the battle was on. It was a battle that was a treat to any fisherman, both fish and fisherman fighting to see who would be the victor. After a very hard struggle Mr. Wilson managed to reel the fish within ten feet of him. From then on he brought him in about two inches at a time until the fish was completely exhausted.

I was never sure that he would land him until he was safely in the fishing bag. He was fishing with a single hook spinner, thus giving him a very slim chance with this size fish.

The editor had unusually good luck as to the number caught, bringing in a larger number than anyone in our crew. This was his first trip to this section of Kentucky.

Reports coming to this office were to the effect that fish were striking in Kentucky River. A Mr. Hall, of Gratz, Ky., reported that he had brought in six nice bass one day last week. He reported they were caught while trolling.

Streams in Boone County have been damaged considerably this year on account of the drouth, the hand fisherman and the seine. We have one of the best streams in Kentucky for bass, which is Gunpowder, if this type of fishing could be eliminated. We know of very few streams that can compare with this creek. Let's all be sports, and refrain from seining and hand fishing. We will all be agreeably surprised in the number of fish we can catch if this practice is eliminated.

DISPELLING THE FOG

By Charles Michelson

The Republican campaign continues to run true to form.

It began with a platform that arraigned everything the Roosevelt Administration has done, and followed with a promise to do nearly everything the present administration has undertaken. The only departure from this principle was in relation to the reciprocity treaties. There Governor Landon appeared to swing back to the Smoot-Hawley Bill, which was one of the principal counts in the indictment of Herbert Hoover that led to about the most overwhelming repudiation by the people an American President ever experienced.

Even the reciprocal treaty principle was not wholly condemned. Governor Landon thought, in the interest of international comity, such treaties might be arraged, provided they dealt entirely with commodities that were not produced in this country.

As such commodities are naturally on the free list anyhow, coffee for example; as they do not compete with any American industry, it might seem difficult for anybody but a Republican candidate to conceive how these things could be used in trading tariff advantages with ofreign countries. It might be that Governor Landon has in mind to threaten to put a duty on such non-competing articles, but that would hardly do. The only effect possible if such a threat were carried out would be to raise the price of them to American consumers. Even the du Pont Liberty Leaguers would hardly advocate that.

If the tariff beneficiaries who fared so well under Mr. Hoover and his Republican predecessors could find some way by which the higher prices to Americans might be shifted to their own profit, it would be another story.

Will Supply Everything—And at No Cost

Now it is old age and unemployment insurance. Governor Landon is in favor of both but he wants the first to provide larger pensions for the aged and the second to be handled by the States and not by the Federal Government. And he thinks that th insurance against the loss of jobs should be taken care of by a general tax rather than by creating a fund from the small percentages of payrolls and wages. But he also wants taxes reduced, for a large part of the Republican campaign consists in invoking the spectre of unbearable tax burdens, not only for this generation but for our children and our children's children.

There might seem to be a contradiction here, but the Governor does not talk taxes at the same time that he talks more benefits for farmers, including a higher price guarantee with no limitation of acreage, bigger allotments for the old people, and the rest of it.

"Frankly," says the Governor of Kansas, referring to the old-age pensions, "I am not in position to state with finality the total cost of this plan." That's all right, too.

What is the use of being bothered with how much anything is going to cost when you are just making campaign promises?

The sum total of his addresses appears to be that the Government should spend more and tax less and doubtless he includes municipal, county and State taxes because a great element in the G. O. P. campaign points out how large a percentage of the cost of everything figures in the price, although the Federal Governmnt, to which all these ills are ascribed, has nothing to do with local taxes which are just about the same as they were in the Hoover-Coolidge-Harding periods.

Some Very Exceptional Arguments

Naturally, the question arises how the minority party figures on winning the election on such a program. Perhaps the answer is to be found in some of the other manifestations of equally disingenous propaganda. For example, the anti-Roosevelt press and orators are hailing as a great evidence of Governor Landon's strength that the Baltimore Sun has announced that it is against Roosevelt and that the St. Louis Post-Dispatch has made a similar declaration. The Baltimore Sun has been girding at President Roosevelt ever since the du Pont Liberty League became active. The St. Louis newspaper has fought the Roosevelt policies for an equal space of time. These "conversions" are about as surprising as the constant parading of the half dozen conspicuous ex-Democrats who signed up with the Liberty League early in the game. Perhaps there is a similar explanation of both these phenomena.

Along the same line is the comfort the Liberty League, and the rest of the minority party, are getting out of certain alleged straw ballots, including the latest cited by the New York Herald-Tribune. It has unearthed a statistician, who, discovering that the normal vote is about equal to the number of newspaper readers, makes the deduction that the political complexion of the newspapers is the sure index as to how the country intends to vote, and so figures out a Landon victory.

As, except for the South, probably seventy-five per cent of the American press has been Republican for generations, the result to be obtained by this process can hardly be called startling. The statistician pays no attention to such matters as registration or previous voting but, when the purpose is to convey a particular impression, you have got to leave out a lot of things.

As another example, the showing up to date of the Literary Digest poll bears out the theory. Its bulletins so far disclosed are based very largely on returns from Republican centers. The poll itself, in its figures on how the voters cast their ballots in 1932, shows the disproportionate percentage of Hoover men represented in the poll. It is notable, incidentally, that up to the date this letter is written the Digest tabulations entirely omit Maryland. In that State, the anti-Roosevelt Baltimore Sun is polling all the registered voters in Maryland and the result shows two to one for Roosevelt.

PULVERIZERS 120 TONS LIMESTONE PER DAY

The limestone pulverizer operating in Boone County has installed electric lights, employing two shifts of workmen and are crushing at the rate of 120 tons of limestone per day, according to David Colville, Assistant County Agent.

The pulverizer at the present time is operating at the farm of Joel Gray near Burlington. The route from there will be Henry Siekman's farm, Chester Aylor's farm and then on toward Hebron.

The pulverizer is making better progress recently than anticipated. Those who wish rock crushed and are not already on the list are urged to notify the County Agent's office immediately.

Charles E. Ferris, 69, of Battle Creek, Mich., retired one day from a railroad after 29 years of service and went to Flint the next day to look for a job, saying he was too young to stop working.

what Irvin S. Cobb thinks about:

BEVERLY HILLS, CALIF.—The more I ponder on Italy's sacrifices in Ethiopia, as balanced against what she gains, the more I'm reminded of the old story of the Confederate who was released from a northern prison camp after the surrender. Skeleton-thin from jail fever and debility, he started on tottery legs for the Ohio river, determined to die on southern soil. One night this poor rack-o'-bones crept into a haymow. Next morning, early, the hired man heard suspicious sounds in the loft and ran for reinforcements. Presently, the ex-captive's refuge was surrounded by stalwart, armed men. The farmer's six-foot son leveled a cocked musket.

"Come out of thar, whoever you be," he bellowed. "Consarn your hide, we got you."

The southerner raised a white face. "Yas," he said, wanly, "and one h—l of a git you got."

His Next Movie.

WE'RE starting a new picture, and I am teamed up with Slim Summerville, 6 feet 6 of pure comedy, and little Jane Withers—for her age, the greatest scene-stealer in the business. It's as though Little Boy Blue were sandwiched in between Jesse James and Calamity Jane. Well, as I go down for the third time I'll still be gurgling feebly, so give me credit, please, as an earnest gurgler.

They call our picture "Public Nuisance Number 1," but a movie is like an Indian—starts out with a name and winds up with anyone of a half-dozen. I once knew a Blackfoot who was first one thing, then another, and the best he could do for himself in his old age was to be known as Chief Many Tail Feathers Going Over the Hill.

Pranks of Zioncheck.

THE papers seemed so barren—not a single front page story about Representative Zioncheck, Washington's No. 1 Boy Scout. Life, indeed, is empty on a day whose low descending sun sees no gay deed done, no headline won by the nation's official problem child.

He may have started off at the foot of the ladder, alphabetically speaking, but his startled constituents can't complain that the gallant lad stayed there. Either he's getting pinched or getting jailed or getting married or getting his pen in hand to tell the President how to run the country, or getting ready to polish off some fellow-statesman of the house, or just getting about.

And hasn't he put the throbbing pulse in the Congressional Record? It reads now sometimes as the old Police Gazette used to.

Rules for Olympics.

AS I understand it—and somebody correct me, please, if I'm wrong—the rules for the forthcoming Olympic Games in Berlin have been so revised that it will be quite all right for any of our Jewish athletes to take part—just so they don't win.

I'm wondering, though, about what may happen when the American team turns up over there with a whole batch of negro foot-racers in the outfit. It's going to be awfully hard to convince a Prussian crowd that they're merely medium-to-well-done Nordic-Caucasian stock browned in the pan, so to speak.

It so happens that our fastest runners are all colored boys. Perhaps 'tis just as well. They may have to keep right on running.

Improvement in Influenza.

IN RESPONSE to large numbers who wrote or wired, I would state that either I'm getting over my influenza, or maybe I'm just getting used to it. Its latest whimsical notion was to settle in both ears, and now should it thunder, a rare occurrence out here, in order for me to get the benefit of the phenomenon, it'll have to thunder again—and louder. However, being temporarily deaf has its advantages: I don't hear the dull things other people say, but can still enjoy the bright things I say myself.

As will be noted, I'm back from Palm Springs, where I cooked in the desert sunshine until all I needed to do before being served was to drape a sprig of watercress across my brow and thicken the gravy with a little brown flour. Driving in, I kept tying up the traffic; so many motorists mistook my face for a stop signal.

Should I relapse I'm going to try to throw myself into the epizootic. That's a horse disease, but I've been as sick as a horse and had to be as strong as a horse to live through it—and, anyhow, I know a good horse doctor.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed Newman deeply appreciate the many kindnesses and sympathy shown them by their friends when they lost their nephew, John Newman recently. He had lived with them since he was ten years old and was as dear to them as if he were their own son. His wonderful disposition and good character was outstanding, and his going is a loss to the community. 1t-ch.

FAITH

By W. M. Czamanske

Faith has two seeing eyes
Beholding from afar
The mansions in the Father's House,
And Christ, the Morning Star.

Faith has two hearing ears
Whose very depths are stirred
When he who is both Grace and Truth
Proclaims His saving word.

Faith has two fervent lips
Whose joy it is to bless
The precious name of Jesus Christ,
The Lord our righteousness.

Faith has two open hands
Which freely come to take
The bounties of a Father's love
For the Reedeemer's sake.

Faith has two willing feet
Which walk the narrow way
And run to do the Lord's commands,
While it is still today.

NINE HUNDRED MARK IS PASSED

RICHMOND, KY., Sept. 29—Registration of students at Eastern Ky. State Teachers College passed the nine hundred mark yesterday when the nine hundred and second student was enrolled yesterday afternoon, setting an all time record for fall semester attendance and exceeding last fall's enrollment by eighty-two. Three hundred and seventy-four students are enrolled in the training school, including the elementary and Model high schools, making a total enrollment for the fall semester of 1276.

Registration will continue on a reduced class schedule basic until October 13. Major C. W. Gallaher, in charge of the senior R. O. T. C. unit, field artillery division, at Eastern, reported an enrollment of 118 men for regular military training, with approximately 28 others enrolled in the R. O. T. C. band. Students enrolled for R. O. T. C. band membership receive the same credit as regular R. O. T. C. membership of one and one-half credit hours each semester.

Instruments for a 28 piece R. O. T. C. band have been issued by the military division to Henri Schnabl director of the band, and are being distributed among the members of the band for the military unit.

Personnel of the military staff in charge of the R. O. T. C. announced by the college includes Major C. W. Gallaher, commanding; Captains W. W. Ford and E. M. Link, Technical Sergeant Ezra Bently, Staff Sergeant William P. Winslate, and first class privates Eugene Cook, Charles Davis Daniel C. Thomas, Roy C. Vernon, and Cecil L. Williams. Prive Cook has been sent to Fort Sill, Oklahoma, for trainini in motor mechanics and will return to the Eastern unit in December to have charge of repairs on the 16 motor trucks belonging to the Eastern unit.

Four 75 millimeter French type guns on high speed carriages were added to the equipment of the R. O. T. C. by the War Department last week.

CHRISTMAS CAKE NEEDS TO "RIPEN"

Christmas fruit cake should be baked several weeks in advance and put away to ripen. The following recipe is approved by Miss Marie Barkly of the University of Kentucky home economics department:

3 pounds raisins
3 pounds currants
½pound citron
1 pound dates, seeded
¾ pound figs
1 pound buter
1½ pounds brown sugar
1½ pounds flour; brown 1 pound and used the half pound plain.
1 dozen eggs
¾ cup molasses with ½ teaspoon of soda dissolved in it 1 teaspoon cinnamon
2 nutmegs, grated
2 ½ cups grape juice

Soak the fruit over night in one cup of the liquid. Line the cake mold, both sides and bottom with one layer of well greased paper. Cream the butter and sugar and add the eggs, four at a time, beating after each addition. Then add the browned flour, the grape juice, molasses and the white flour with the spices. The fruit is added last and thoroughly mxied. Place in a 12-pound mold and bake for six hours at 300 degrees.

For decoration, sprays mays be used with candied fruit for the petals, citron for the leaves and angelica for the stems. They may also be baked in two, three or four pound molds and when wrapped in cellophane paper with sprays of Christmas greens, they make attractive gifts.

AUTOMATIC DIE-SINKER USED BY CHEVROLET

Greater speed, combined with marked sensitivity, is claimed for the new automatic die-sinker which Chevrolet is now using in its gear and axle plant in Detroit. The machine is said to be the first automatic die-sinker with integray hydraulic control.

The equipment is used to make dropforging dies. The master die, and the material which is to duplicate, are fastened on a steel bed side by side. Over each is a vertical spindle, coming down from the same super-structure, which is movable horizontally in all directions.

At the end of one spindle a cutting tool is chucked; at the end of the other, above the master die, is what might be termed a "tracing finger" also of steel. The operator guides the movement of the tracer finger around the master die, and as he does so, a corresponding bite is taken out of the material on the adjacent bed. Due to hydraulic control, the resulting work is not only accurate, but 30 per cent faster than with equipment previously used.

QUALITY EXHIBITS AT QUICKSAND FAIR

The high quality of the exhibits was a feature of the recent 11th annual harvest festival at the Robinson Agricultural Experiment Outstation at Quicksand, Breathitt county. Twenty of Eastern Kentucky counties contributed to the success of the event.

Exhibits were made of crops, including corn, small grains, hays and grasses, tobacco, garden products, apples, canned and baked foods and flowers. Poultry and hogs comprised the live stock show There also were extensive displays of home-made articles, and by settlement centers and schools.

Four-H clubs had a prominent part in the fair making exhibits of the farm and home products, and holding a big rally and speaking program the second day. Merit badges were bestowed on outstanding club boys and girls and on club leaders. Led by the University of Kentucky band, several hundred 4-H club members staged a parade which was witnessed by hundreds of people.

President Frank L. McVey of the University of Kentucky, Dean Thomas P. Cooper of the College of Agriculture and J. W. Whitehouse, state 4-H club leader, were speakers at the festival.

OPERATE CRUSHER DAY AND NIGHT TO MEET LIME DEMAND

In an effort to meet the needs of lime before the deadline of October 31, in the Agricultural Conservation Program in Washington county Kentucky, a large portable crusher is being operated day and night, according to County Agent Troll Young.

Two shifts of five men each keep the machine going, crushing approximately 100 tons of limestone each 24 hours. The stone is being crushed for 85 cents a ton, with a 50-ton minimum.

Lime crushing in Washington county was begun early in August, and the night crew was added when the demand for limestone increased. Approximately 2,000 tons had been crushed by the middle of September, and it was estimated that 4,000 tons will be crushed by October 31. Farmers of the county have purchased about 3,000 tons from commercial quarries, and also have used marl. Present indications are that 10,000 tons of liming materials will be used in the county this year, Mr. Young reports.

Large individual users of limestone include S. C. Milburn, 167 tons; and Mrs. T. F. Montgomery, John Hall and Charles Hatchett, 100 tons each.

The saddest words of tongue or pen, other statements to the contrary notwithstanding are these: "Your account appears to be overdrawn."

QUESTIONS ANSWERED ABOUT RESETTLEMENT

This is question two of a series of questions and answers about the Resettlement Administration which are being published each week in the Recorder.

Is the program of the Resettlement Administration Communistic or Utopian?

Answer:

The program of the Resettlement Administration is in no sense of the word communistic. It is an attempt on the part of an agency of the government to offer new opportunities in rural areas. In order to do this Resettlement is advocating a live-at-home program of diversified farming, which encourages the ownership of small family sized farms. If we can make home owners out of rural population we have preserved one of the strongest bulwarks of a democracy. The Resettlement Administration is encouraging the development of co-operatives among the farming population, but far from being communistic and radcial, the co-operative movement is as old as America; in fact older. Co-operation was established when the first family worked together to get the household tasks done.

A cooperative is just a private business owned by all those who use it. Co-operatives are not experimental; they have done a constantly increasing business in America and in nearly every country in the world for many generations.

The program of the Resettlement Administration is a practical, business-like way of helping destitute and low income farm families.

The rehabilitation program is primarily concerned with making loans to needy farm families. But Resettlement is practical about these loans. We know that many farm families have failed because they did not have the proper training. After providing loans by which they can obtain proper land and proper equipment, Resettlement undertakes also to see that they have the advantage of expert assistance. A farm and home plan is worked out for each family who receives a loan. If the plan is satisfactory, the family can be put back on its own feet, will no longer be on relief, and will be able to repay its debts to the Resettlement Administration and to other creditors.

The Resettlement program first of all sees that the families who move from poor land to good land are capable of producing a fair return per acre. The farms are large enough to furnish enough acreage for a profitable full time farm of their own. The families are given forty years in which to pay for their farms and the interest is three percent. They are provided with well-built homes in order that the maintenance costs will not be great.

Next week's question: "Is the size of the Administrative staff of Resettlement Administration justified in the light of the number of people helped?"

HOW TO FATTEN HOGS MORE CHEAPLY

With hog fattening time just ahead and all feed prices soaring, there will be unusual interest in Dr. Tait Butler's article in the latest Progressive Farmer telling how to fatten hogs most cheaply in 1936:—

"In fattening hogs this fall and winter much high priced corn can be saved by supplementing the usual corn allowance with a mixture of equal parts of cottonseed meal and tankage or fish meal—about one part by weight to 5 parts of corn.

"But, says someone, the tankage or fish meal must be bought and we have the corn on hand—if we have. Even so, it will pay to sell one-eighth the corn to be fed to hogs and buy as much tankage as the money received for this corn will buy. More and better pork will be produced thereby.

"Also corn and peanuts, soybeans, cowpeas, or other legume, when fed together in proper proportions produce more and better pork than when the same feeds in the same quantities are fed separately, or one at a time. Green feed will also save corn in fattening the hogs this fall. There is a great waste of corn in fattening hogs in a dry lot on corn alone.

"Corn is also deficient in certain minerals needed by livestock for growth. Common salt is also required by hogs, as by other livestock, although in smaller quantity. It is therefore good practice to keep before hogs a mixture such as the following:

10 parts by weight of wood ashes or finely ground limestone, or thoroughly airslaked lime.

5 parts common salt.

10 parts cottonseed or linseed meal.

1 part pulverized copperas.

All thoroughly mixed and kept under shelter where the hogs can eat at will.

"If the hogs are not getting tankage or fish meal, 20 parts of steamed bone meal should be substituted for the 10 parts of the first or lime ingredient in the above mixture."

BURLINGTON SCHOOL NOTES

The boys and girls of this school are happily progressing in their routine of school life.

As is customary at the beginning of each year the elections of the various class and club officers for this year has been held. Those who were chosen for the separate classes are:

Junior Class—President, Margie Berkshire; Vice President, Mary Jane Brady; Secretary and Treasurer, Rebecca Stephenson.

Senior Class—President, Harry Cook; Vice President, Alvin Clore; Secretary and Treasurer, Margaret Walton.

The Girl Reserves have elected their new officers. They are: President, Betsy Eddins; Vice President, Margaret Walton; Secretary and Treasurer, Rebecca Stephenson.

The new officers for the Hi-Y Club are: President, Harry Cook; Vice President, Alvin Clore; Secretary, Allen Burcham; Treasurer, Keith Vice.

The boys and girls have been busy organizing their soft ball teams. The boys have played two games with Hamilton and will journey to Florence this week on Friday.

The Sophomores and Freshmen were engaged in initiation for the Freshmen last Tuesday. The Freshmen thought they got off lucky. On the following day after the initiation they were given a reception by the Sophomore Class which was enjoyed very much. Throughout the week there was gunny sacks used for book sacks and odd clothes worn by the Freshmen, but they hold no hard feelings toward the Sophomores. They are only looking forward to next year.

Last week the Seniors ordered their class rings which arrive in about three weeks.

Last Thursday Mrs. Faber conducted a musical recital which was sponsored by her pupils of this school. It was conducted in a splendid manner and was enjoyed by all. Music of this type should have a prominent place in our school throughout the year.

On Saturday of this week the Grade and Rural School Tournament will be held at Hebron, and everyone is cordially invited to attend, especially the athletic contests, which will be held Saturday afternoon. Our boys and girls are studying and training to make the best possible showing, not only for Burlington School but for Boone County. We want to win if we can, but if others can defeat us they deserve to go to Lexington.

There has been quite an epidemic of good old Kentucky bad colds in our school during the past several days. The condition is improving somewhat by this time. We wish everyone would help us to keep in the best of health, for we cannot do our work well when we are sick.

Rebecca Stephenson, School Rptr.

HOW TO PLANT BULBS

With bulb planting time just ahead, flower lovers will be interested in the following suggestions by L. A. Niven in The Progressive Farmer:—

" Bulbs may be planted without much preparation of the soil but best results are secured by thorough preparation. A good method is to dig or spade up ground where they are to be planted to a depth of seven to ten inches. If available, cover with an inch or 2 of woodsmold, mixing it thoroughly with soil. Do not use stable manure, unless thoroughly rotted. Also scatter on top of the prepared bed or row two or three pounds of high grade commercial fertilizer for each 100 square feet of space and dig in. Rake off all trash of any size and leave the ground in fine seedbed condition.

"In setting, dig a hole for each individual bulb and do not push it into the ground. Such planting would result in packed soil directly under the bulb and hinder growth somewhat. Set the bulbs to a depth equal to about three times their diameter. Place them six or eight inches apart, depending on size. If planted in the borders, irregular placing of the bulbs gives a better appearance than when placed in straight rows. Where round beds are used, I prefer planting in perfect circles, and in straight rows if square or oblong beds are prepared."

Mike, a three-pound rainbow trout kept in a pool at Chipeta Park, Colorado Springs, Colo., amazes visitors by paddling close to the brink of the pool to be petted.

BANKERS TO MEET

The Kentucky Bankers Association will holds its 44th annual session at the Brown Hotel, Louisville, Ky., Wednesday and Thursday, October 21 and 22, with a "night-before-party" on the evening of October 20. John M. Yost, Vice-President & Cashier First National Bank, Pikeville, Ky., and President of the Association, will preside during the two-day session.

A most interesting program has been arranged, including such speakers as Mr. R. M. Plaister, Manager, Bank Supervisory Dept., Moody's Investors Service; Mr. Richard R. Hunter, President, Association of Seserve City Bankers; and other outstanding bankers and business men, including U. V. Wilcox of the "American Banker" staff.

A new and most attractive feature which will be a high spot in the convention this year is the Open Forum to be conducted Wednesday afternoon, October 21, at 2 o'clock, at which time several short papers will be read. The papers will deal with such subjects as "Rewards for Responsibility;" "The Bank and Its Attorney" "Cooperation with Public Authorities on Tax Matters;" "Responsibility of Bank Directors;" "F. D. I. C. and other Examinations;" "Sentimentalism in Banking;" "The Possibilities of Research in Banking;" "A. I. B. Courses for Every Bank Clerk;" "State-wide Police Protection and its Experience in Indiana"; "Service Charges"; "The Customer's Side"; "Women and Their Future in Banking."

Following the reading of each paper there will be a complete discussion of the subject presented, led by some of the following persons: Logan Maffett, Assistant Cashier, Farmers National Bank, Cynthiana, Ky.; Fred M. Howes, Attorney-Chairman of the Board, Second National Bank, Paintsville, Ky.; C. H. Bradfield, Manager, Realty, Taxes and Insurance, Consolidation Coal Co., New York; Richard A. McKinley Director, Department of Financial Institutions of Indiana; Deroy Scott, Cashier, Lincoln Bank & Trust Co. Louisville, Ky.; W. T. Tandy, President, First City Bank and Trust Co., Hopkinsville, Ky.; M. Carlisle Minor, Vice President Farmers National Bank, Danville, Ky.; Wm. Dorr, Fourth Street Office, Citizens Union National Bank, Louisville, Ky.; Don E. Warrick, Secretary, Indiana Bankers Association.

Also there will be other folks joining in the discussion, as well as a statement from Honorable Leonard C. Smith, Deputy Director, Division of Banking and Securities, State of Kentucky.

Everyone attending will be urged to take part in discussion at the Open Forum and it is believed the Forum, although an innovation, will prove to be so popular that it will establish itself as a regular feature of the convention.

During the convention reports will be heard from various committees of 1935-36. On the morning of the first day of the convention a report of the nominating committee and election of officers will be had. All the committee have done outstanding work this year and the reports should prove interesting to every banker in Kentucky. There wil lalso be a report from Mr. Harry G. Smith, Secretary of the Kentucky Bankers Association, and from Mrs. C. E. Hearin, Vice President, Farmers National Bank, Clay, Ky., Treasurer.

Registration headquarters will be established in the lobby of the Brown Hotel and will open Tuesday afternoon, October 20. Delegates and guests will register as soon as they arrive.

On Tuesday evening, October 20, the annual dinner of past presidents will be held. Only those bankers who have served as president of the Association will be eligible to attend that dinner.

Each morning's program will be opened with an organ concert, and general singing by the delegates will be heard from 9:40 until 10. The singing will be led by Mr. Frank Gregg, Religious Works Secretary, Y. M. C. A., Louisville, Ky.

Invocation on Wednesday morning will offer by Frank D. McClelland, President, Pikeville College, Pikeville, Ky. Following this the address of welcome will be given by Major eville Miller of Louisville, and the response will be made by Hollis C. Franklin, Cashier, Farmers Bank & Trust Co., Marion, Ky. This will be followed by the President's annual address, by John M. Yost. On Thursday morning invocation will be offerd by Dr. Henry Noble Sherwood, President, Georgetown College, Georgetown, Ky.

The Louisville bankers will be hosts to the convention and will be in charge of the entertainment. "The "night-before-party" will be given in cooperation with ladies of the A. I. B. Chapter in Louisville; and there will be other features of entertainment, including a golf tournament Wednesday evening.

Mr. David W. Fairleigh, Secretary, Lincoln Bank and Trust Co., Louisville, Ky., will act as toastmaster at the banquet, and Mr. Frank M. Totten, Vice President, Chase National Bank, New York, will be the principal speaker.

It is hoped that Governor Chandler and other outstanding men of the state will be present at the speakers' table. Following the banquet there will be a dance.

Present indications are that every bank in Kentucky will be represented as well as many out of state banks, bond houses, and other businesses; and it is believed the convention wil lbe a fitting climax to a most successful year of Association activity just past.

COUNTRY PEOPLE BEST INFORMED

A statement which will be surprising and thought-provoking to many readers is contained in the current Progressive Farm[illegible]

"Drew Pearson and Ro[illegible] Allen are two of America's best-informed columnist. Their syndicated "Washington Merry - Go-Round' feature appears in leading dailies all over the country. Quite recently they conducted a poll or symposium participated in by 44,000 readers, part rural and part urban, and country people everywhere ought to be interested in the following conclusions as reached by these thoughtful investigators:—

" 'Men and women of all walks of life are thinking deeply about economic problems. Judging from our letters, people in rural sections are better informed than city dwellers.' "

Mrs. Myra Chadwick, of Chicago, testified in her divorce suit that she knew all the whims and fancies of men because she had been married three times.

LAWN DEMONSTRATIONS HELD IN FIVE COMMUNITIES

Boone County is very fortunate to have shrubs and trees that are appropriate for lawns, according to Mr. N. R. Elliott, landscape architect, University of Kentucky. Five communities were visited on the two-day tour of lawns by Mr. Elliott. The front door should be the center of interest to any home according to Mr. Elliott. All shrubs and trees should lead the eye to the front door. He stated that yellow poplar, dogwood, redbud, wild crab apple were very good native trees to use as a background for the home.

Lawns visited by Mr. Elliott and Miss Mary Hood Gillaspie, Home Demonstration Agent, were those of Mrs. B. F. Hossman, Hebron, Mrs. Lon Pope, Burlington, Miss Mary Rector, Petersburg, Mrs. Jno. L. Vest, Walton and Mrs. Jake Cleek, New Haven.

The attendance at the demonstrations were good even though it rained at every home visited on the tour, according to Miss Gillaspie.

ELECTRIC LINE BEING BUILT

THROUGH BOONE COUNTY—WORK STARTED THIS WEEK—WILL ADD MANY DOLLARS IN TAXES TO TREASURY.

Construction work started this week on a high tension electric line, while will be built through Boone County for a distance of approximately seventeen miles.

According to reports this line is being constructed by the Columbia Gas and Electric Co., of Ohio.

Many local men have been employed on this project and will give employment for several months to these men.

The line was started about four miles north of Petersburg and will be continued through Boone County. Many towers will be constructed which are said to cost approximately $5,000 each and towers will be placed every one thousand feet, according to the report. This will add materially to the taxes of Boone County and will boost the treasury considerably.

WEED GROWERS TO HOLD MEET

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 21 TO STUDY WAYS AND MEANS OF IMPROVING THE CURING OF TOBACCO AFTER HOUSED.

Boone County tobacco growers will meet next Wednesday, October 21st to study ways and means of improving the curing of tobacco after it is housed. The meeting will be of interest to growers in all sections of the County, according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent.

The meeting will be in the form of a tour. Mr. Russell Hunt, Tobacco Specialist from the College, will be present to discuss results of practices at each place. The first stop on the tour will be at the tobacco barn of S. B. Scott & Sons of near Grant at 10:00 a. m. The next stops will be as follows: Emmett Elliott's farm ¾ mile from Idlewild, at 1:00 p. m.; William Hill's farm, top of hill from Idlewild 2:00 p. m.

Demonstrations in he use of artificial heat to improve the curing processes in the barn will be seen at all three farms. The most interesting stop will be at the farm of Emmett Elliott's who has used fire in curing for the past six years and each year has averaged from 20 per cent to 100 per cent more for the tobacco under which artificial curing practices have been followed.

These meetings represent a highly important step in the improving of Boone County's tobacco crop. The meetings are held under the supervision of the Extension Service, are open to the public and all who possibly can are urged to attend. Artificial curing may be a dangerous practice if proper method is not fololwed. One of the chief purposes of the meeting is to instruct farmers in these methods.

HEBRON 4-H CLUB LEAD IN COUNTY SCORING

The Norbeh Champion 4-H Club at Hebron is leading in first County-wide scoring of 4-H clubs, according to David Colville, Assistant County Agent.

Each year the highest scoring club is presented a beautiful framed picture donated by the banks of Boone County. If this picture is won for two consecutive years by any club it remains in their permanent possession.

The most important factors in scoring are project completion, exhibits at shows and fairs, participation in judging and demonstration teams and news articles. All indications point to 100 per cent completion in several of our 4-H Clubs. Competition is keen and the Club that wins this year may well be proud of their award.

TWO ARRESTED AFTER CRASH

ON U. S. HIGHWAY 25. BROUGHT TO BURLINGTON FOR HEARING AND RELEASED ON $200 BOND.

Two men, giving their names as Ralph Coffman and Frank Wolff, both of Newport, were arrested and brought to Burlington Friday morning by Boone County officials following an accident on U. S. 25 between Cabindale and the John Wood Carpenter farm. Both men were charged with intoxication.

The accident occurred at approximately 8:00 a. m., and according to the two men, they were trying to miss a transfer truck and in so doing were crowded from the highway. Both men admitted their condition at the time they were arrested, but said that had taken a drink since the accident happened. They insisted that they were not intoxicated at the time of the accident. Further questioning revealed that the two men had been out all night, leaving Newport at 10:00 p. m. Thursday night.

The Lincoln car in which they were riding was damaged considerably, but apparently both men escaped without injury. They were brought to Burlington by Sheriff W. B. Cotton and Deputy, Frank Walton.

Both were released on $200 bond, and a date was set by county Judge N. E. Riddell for a hearing of the case.

ANNOUNCE INAUGURAL OF INNOVATION

The enterprising Pike Street Linoleum and Carpet Store, 253-255 Pike St., Covington announces the inaugural of an innovation that should prove very interesting to Recorder readers. Each week the store will display in its window what is properly called a "Weekly Window Special." The items exhibited will be offered for sale at surprisingly low price—or at below cost.

The merchandise displayed in the widow this week is 27x54-inch Chenille rugs, which are of good quality, being heavy, reversible and washable, at only $1.19 each.

Watch the Recorder every week for announcement of these "Weekly Window Special"—they will save you considerable money. The purpose of this policy is to make many new friends and customers for the store.

FARMERS NOTIFIED

AS TO AMOUNT TO BE RECEIVED FOR DIVERSION OF LAND FROM TOBACCO AND OTHER SOIL DEPLETING CROPS.

Letters are rapidly being sent out to all ACP cooperators listing for them the information which has been obtained by the field supervisors, according to John E. Crigler, Secretary of the Association.

The letters show approximately the amount of payment that can be expected for the diversion of land from tobacco and other soil depleting crops to soil conserving crops. The total soil building allowance is shown and the amount earned to date. The approximate total payments on the whole program that can be expected if all of the soil building allowance is earned are also shown in this letter. Administrative expenses for operating the Association, however will be deducted from the total payments.

Farmers are urged to carry out more soil building practices before October 31st so that none of their soil building allowance will go unearned. The date for seeding idle land to soil conserving crops so that it may be clasified as soil conserving for the year has now been extended to October 31st. Also by seeding this idle ground to a soil conserving crop the soil building allowance will be increased to that extent.

Mrs. Ora Ross, Mrs. Will Kirkpatrick and Mrs. William Walton were Sunday guests of Mrs. Maggie Easton, of near Idlewild.

The Hon. Robert H. Lucas, nominee for U. S. Senate will address the voters of Kenton and adjoining counties, at Covington, Thursday, October 15th at 7:30 p. m. All citizens are invited to attend.

According to an official report given out sometime last week, the Dixie Coach Lines, operating between Cincinnati and Florence, have filed a certificate in the office of the Secretary of State, Frankfort, Ky., to the effect that on the 16th day of September, 1936, by virtue of consent of all the stockholders, the company known as the Dixie Coach Lines, elected to dissolve and completely wind up its affairs.

This notice was signed by A. B. Rouse, Roy Tomlin and F. W. Dempsey, directors of the Dixie Coach Lines.

ZIMMER GARDENS TO OPEN SOON

According to Ben Zimmer, manager of the new Zimmer Gardens, located at the old Florence Fair Grounds, Florence, the new night club will be open to the public for its formal opening, Saturday night October 19th.

Under the new management the premises have been newly decorated and everything all set for a big time for everyone. Prices will be moderate just the same as they were at the Harvest Home grounds and a good, clean and respectful night club will be at the disposal of those who attend.

COUNTY ATHLETIC CLUB IS FORMED

FOR PROMOTION OF BOONE COUNTY ATHLETIC EVENTS DURING COMING SEASON—R. W. BEVERLY, PRESIDENT.

Boys who have a love for athletics will have an added bit of interest this year and in the future in Boone County. The Boone County Athletic Conference is now a reality, and will do much to place fair play and skill on the plane that it deserves for the boys.

Competition will now be encouraged because percentage ratings will be kept throughout the playing season with proper trophies to be awarded to those who come through at the top.

Perfection of the Conference was brought about at the meeting at Florence Friday, October 9. A constitution in keeping with modern athletic program was adopted unanimously. R. W. Beverly, Principal, of Walton school was elected to serve as the first president of the Conference. Edwin Walton, of Hebron and James R. Huey, of Hamilton were elected vice-president and secretary-treasurer, respectively. With these officers there will be no occasion for the Boone County Athletic program to become uninteresting.

The Conference officials, school officials and interested school patrons are grateful for the combined efforts being put forth in Boone County to give only the proper attention to the sports so well loved by most people. Credit is due the Boone County newspapers for their offers to give space and support to the new program.

Through the Conference athletic reporter, E. E. Kirkwood of Burlington, all interesting material of importance may reach the sports-loving public through the Boone County Recorder and the Walton Advertiser. Those connected with athletic work of the various schools are urged to send such items as they wish to appear in print to him.

Soon the schedules for the coming basketball season will be seen in these columns. It is believed that interest will be widespread this winter when we are forced to have our games on the hardwood, rather than in the great outdoor, if we are to judge by reports from the boys and coaches of the various schools. This intense interest, properly directed, will result in a better type of athlete which is the real function of the Boone County Athletic Conference.

ALL SCHOOLS REPRESENTED

IN COUNTY TOURNEY—WANDA FISHER OF CONSTANCE TO REPRESENT BOONE COUNTY IN GENERAL SCHOLARSHIP.

The "big event" in October of each year to those pupils of the lower grades was a huge success this year, in spite of the fact that cold weather caused much shivering and chattering of teeth. The Graded Tournament, under the direction of the County Board of Education, is doing a great work in preparing our young boys and girls for bigger and better things as they approach the upper grades.

In years past, the younger student was never given the opportunity to demonstrate his or her ability until he or she reached the upper grades, thus causing many students to enter high school with little or no experience in coaching, training and encouragement, which is essential for the student or athlete to become acquainted with before they justly demonstrate their ability.

One of the highest honors of the tournament this year was awarded to a Constance girl, Miss Wanda Fisher, who will represent the county at the State Tournament in November in general scholarship. Edith Harris, who places second in Civics will represent the county in Civics. This is due to the rule that a pupil may take but one subject in the State Tournament.

All schools throughout the county made a good showing, and every school will have a representative in the State Tournament.

A complete listing of the winners in both scholarships and athletics will be found on the last page, and only the students winning first and second will represent the county in athletics.

The remaining contests for declamation and music will be held at the Florence High School auditorium on Friday night, Oct. 16th, at 8:00 p. m. (fast time).

The next stops will be as follows: Emmett Elliott's farm ¾ mile from Idlewild, at 1:00 p. m.; William Hill's farm, top of hill from Idlewild 2:00 p. m.

Demonstrations in he use of artificial heat to improve the curing processes in the barn will be seen at all three farms. The most interesting stop will be at the farm of Emmett Elliott's who has used fire in curing for the past six years and each year has averaged from 20 per cent to 100 per cent more for the tobacco under which artificial curing practices have been followed.

These meetings represent a highly important step in the improving of Boone County's tobacco crop. The meetings are held under the supervision of the Extension Service, are open to the public and all who possibly can are urged to attend. Artificial curing may be a dangerous practice if proper method is not fololwed. One of the chief purposes of the meeting is to instruct farmers in these methods.

HEBRON 4-H CLUB LEAD IN COUNTY SCORING

The Norbeh Champion 4-H Club at Hebron is leading in first County-wide scoring of 4-H clubs, according to David Colville, Assistant County Agent.

Each year the highest scoring club is presented a beautiful framed picture donated by the banks of Boone County. If this picture is won for two consecutive years by any club it remains in their permanent possession.

The most important factors in scoring are project completion, exhibits at shows and fairs, participation in judging and demonstration teams and news articles. All indications point to 100 per cent completion in several of our 4-H Clubs. Competition is keen and the Club that wins this year may well be proud of their award.

TWO ARRESTED AFTER CRASH

ON U. S. HIGHWAY 25. BROUGHT TO BURLINGTON FOR HEARING AND RELEASED ON $200 BOND.

Two men, giving their names as Ralph Coffman and Frank Wolff, both of Newport, were arrested and brought to Burlington Friday morning by Boone County officials following an accident on U. S. 25 between Cabindale and the John Wood Carpenter farm. Both men were charged with intoxication.

The accident occurred at approximately 8:00 a. m., and according to the two men, they were trying to miss a transfer truck and in so doing were crowded from the highway. Both men admitted their condition at the time they were arrested, but said that had taken a drink since the accident happened. They insisted that they were not intoxicated at the time of the accident. Further questioning revealed that the two men had been out all night, leaving Newport at 10:00 p. m. Thursday night.

The Lincoln car in which they were riding was damaged considerably, but apparently both men escaped without injury. They were brought to Burlington by Sheriff W. B. Cotton and Deputy, Frank Walton.

Both were released on $200 bond, and a date was set by county Judge N. E. Riddell for a hearing of the case.

ANNOUNCE INAUGURAL OF INNOVATION

The enterprising Pike Street Linoleum and Carpet Store, 253-255 Pike St., Covington announces the inaugural of an innovation that should prove very interesting to Recorder readers. Each week the store will display in its window what is properly called a "Weekly Window Special." The items exhibited will be offered for sale at surprisingly low prices—or at below cost.

The merchandise displayed in the widow this week is 27x54-inch Chenille rugs, which are of good quality, being heavy, reversible and washable, at only $1.19 each.

Watch the Recorder every week for announcement of these "Weekly Window Special"—they will save you considerable money. The purpose of this policy is to make many new friends and customers for the store.

FARMERS NOTIFIED

AS TO AMOUNT TO BE RECEIVED FOR DIVERSION OF LAND FROM TOBACCO AND OTHER SOIL DEPLETING CROPS.

Letters are rapidly being sent out to all ACP cooperators listing for them the information which has been obtained by the field supervisors, according to John E. Crigler, Secretary of the Association.

The letters show approximately the amount of payment that can be expected for the diversion of land from tobacco and other soil depleting crops to soil conserving crops. The total soil building allowance is shown and the amount earned to date. The approximate total payments on the whole program that can be expected if all of the soil building allowance is earned are also shown in this letter. Administrative expenses for operating the Association, however will be deducted from the total payments.

Farmers are urged to carry out more soil building practices before October 31st so that none of their soil building allowance will go unearned. The date for seeding idle land to soil conserving crops so that it may be classified as soil conserving for the year has now been extended to October 31st. Also by seeding this idle ground to a soil conserving crop the soil building allowance will be increased to that extent.

Mrs. Ora Ross, Mrs. Will Kirkpatrick and Mrs. William Walton were Sunday guests of Mrs. Maggie Easton, of near Idlewild.

The Hon. Robert H. Lucas, nominee for U. S. Senate will address the voters of Kenton and adjoining counties, at Covington, Thursday, October 15th at 7:30 p. m. All citizens are invited to attend.

DIXIE COACH LINES GIVE NOTICE OF DISSOLUTION

According to an official report given out sometime last week, the Dixie Coach Lines, operating between Cincinnati and Florence, have filed a certificate in the office of the Secretary of State, Frankfort, Ky., to the effect that on the 16th day of September, 1936, by virtue of consent of all the stockholders, the company known as the Dixie Coach Lines, elected to dissolve and completely wind up its affairs.

This notice was signed by A. B. Rouse, Roy Tomlin and F. W. Dempsey, directors of the Dixie Coach Lines.

ZIMMER GARDENS TO OPEN SOON

According to Ben Zimmer, manager of the new Zimmer Gardens, located at the old Florence Fair Grounds, Florence, the new night club will be open to the public for its formal opening, Saturday night October 19th.

Under the new management the premises have been newly decorated and everything all set for a big time for everyone. Prices will be moderate just the same as they were at the Harvest Home grounds and a good, clean and respectful night club will be at the disposal of those who attend.

COUNTY ATHLETIC CLUB IS FORMED

FOR PROMOTION OF BOONE COUNTY ATHLETIC EVENTS DURING COMING SEASON—R. W. BEVERLY, PRESIDENT.

Boys who have a love for athletics will have an added bit of interest this year and in the future in Boone County. The Boone County Athletic Conference is now a reality, and will do much to place fair play and skill on the plane that it deserves for the boys.

Competition will now be encouraged because percentage ratings will be kept throughout the playing season with proper trophies to be awarded to those who come through at the top.

Perfection of the Conference was brought about at the meeting at Florence Friday, October 9. A constitution in keeping with modern athletic program was adopted unanimously. R. W. Beverly, Principal, of Walton school was elected to serve as the first president of the Conference. Edwin Walton, of Hebron and James R. Huey, of Hamilton were elected vice-president and secretary-treasurer, respectively. With these officers there will be no occasion for the Boone County Athletic program to become uninteresting.

The Conference officials, school officials and interested school patrons are grateful for the combined efforts being put forth in Boone County to give only the proper attention to the sports so well loved by most people. Credit is due the Boone County newspapers for their offers to give space and support to the new program.

Through the Conference athletic reporter, E. E. Kirkwood of Burlington, all interesting material of importance may reach the sports-loving public through the Boone County Recorder and the Walton Advertiser. Those connected with athletic work of the various schools are urged to send such items as they wish to appear in print to him.

Soon the schedules for the coming basketball season will be seen in these columns. It is believed that interest will be widespread this winter when we are forced to have our games on the hardwood, rather than in the great outdoor, if we are to judge by reports from the boys and coaches of the various schools. This intense interest, properly directed, will result in a better type of athlete which is the real function of the Boone County Athletic Conference.

ALL SCHOOLS REPRESENTED

IN COUNTY TOURNEY—WANDA FISHER OF CONSTANCE TO REPRESENT BOONE COUNTY IN GENERAL SCHOLARSHIP.

The "big event" in October of each year to those pupils of the lower grades was a huge success this year, in spite of the fact that cold weather caused much shivering and chattering of teeth. The Graded Tournament, under the direction of the County Board of Education, is doing a great work in preparing our young boys and girls for bigger and better things as they approach the upper grades.

In years past, the younger student was never given the opportunity to demonstrate his or her ability until he or she reached the upper grades, thus causing many students to enter high school with little or no experience in coaching, training and encouragement, which is essential for the student or athlete to become acquainted with before they justly demonstrate their ability.

One of the highest honors of the tournament this year was awarded to a Constance girl, Miss Wanda Fisher, who will represent the county at the State Tournament in November in general scholarship. Edith Harris, who places second in Civics will represent the county in Civics. This is due to the rule that a pupil may take but one subject in the State Tournament.

All schools throughout the county made a good showing, and every school will have a representative in the State Tournament.

A complete listing of the winners in both scholarships and athletics will be found on the last page, and only the students winning first and second will represent the county in athletics.

The remaining contests for declamation and music will be held at the Florence High School auditorium on Friday night, Oct. 16th, at 8:00 p. m. (fast time).

Editorial of the Week

IF WAR SHOULD COME

Which would you rather trust, were this country facing the eventuality of war—Roosevelt or Landon?

Would you choose Landon—a man with absolutely no diplomatic experience, who has disclosed in his speeches his ineptness and lack of knowledge in discussing our foreign policy? Do you think the Kansas Governor, who has shown that his knowledge of the world situation and our relation to it is vague, would be able to hold his own against the shrewd diplomacy of Europe?

Hadn't you rather trust a man who has demonstrated that he can hold his own with the canniest of Europe's diplomats? President Roosevelt has shown what he can do. In International finance he has swung the balance of power from England and France to the United States. In his trade pacts with foreign countries he has gotten the best of the bargain. Trained since his youth in statecraft, a student of history, able to converse fluently in French, the universal language of diplomacy, but possessing the shrewd common [illegible] America has in Franklin D. Roosevelt a representative abundantly able to hold his own in international politics.

Think it over soberly, conscientiously. Should the possibility of this cuontry becoming involved in war be imminent, to whom would you prefer to turn—to a man wholly inexperienced in international politics, who has displayed in his speeches a naively vague conception of this country's foreign policy; or to a man who has demonstrate during his term as President that no foreign statesman can out-think him; a man to whom statecraft has been a career?

A little thought will disclose how tragic might be the wrong choice, should war come.

MILLS LOGAN—RESPECTED KENTUCKIAN

Mills Logan is a typical Kentuckian of the old school. He makes friends wherever he goes. There is no pretense, no sham about this man, who has been honored repeatedly by the State of Kentucky and has never failed to make a record of which his State may be proud.

He has not been a publicity-seeker and consequently much of his excellent record has never appeared in print, or received the warm praise that it has merited. "I have never been one to rush down to the footlights and fire off my horse pistols," said Senator Logan during one of his campaigns; "I can't seem to learn to call in the reporters and tell about it every time I cast a vote. I'm a poor hand at getting my name on the front pages."

That may be, but Kentuckians have come to know the mettle of the man from his service to State and Nation. They respect him for his keen mind that penetrates sham and pretense, for his calm, judicial judgment of all measures that come before the United States Senate. They admire him for the possession of a courage that poverty could not daunt; they like and trust the sort of man who has worked in the fields as a boy, saving his meager wages to school himself; later teaching school, reading law in his home town, being elected to county office at the age of twenty-six; declining the nomination for circuit judge at thirty-one; at forty, attorney general; at forty-two, chairman of the first State tax commission; at fifty-one judge of the court of appeals and now standing for re-election to the Senate of the United States.

"He has achieved greatness in every position he has held," wrote a citizen of his county six years ago, when Mills Logan made his first race for the Senate; "never a breath of suspicion, never a hint of wrong doing. Those who know him know that he would scorn to do anything little or mean. Under all circumstances he is gentle and kind. He will suffer injustice rather than bring sorrow to another. He has given more to help orphan children than most men ever made. He has great business capacity . . . and has made much money for himself and others, but his philosophy of life will not allow him to keep money when there are those about him who need it more than he does . . . A catalogue of the things he has done for his friends would fill a book . . . We are generally Republican in these Green River hills, but not when Mills Logan is a candidate."

Such is the man who is asking Kentuckians to re-elect him to the Senate. Of his record in that body, his colleague, Senator Tom Connally of Texas, says: "In his first term he has displayed outstanding ability and splendid courage as Senator and unflagging zeal for the public interest. He has loyally supported the Roosevelt administration program and has had a prominent part in the legislative accomplishments in behalf of agriculture, business, banking and the general recovery program. Senator Logan deserves a return to the Senate and I hope he goes back with an overwhelming majority."

He will. Kentucklans, irrespective of party, will see to that.

WHY TURN BACK?

We Believe In Democracy

An Editorial by Franklin D. Roosevelt

OF ALL the nations of the world today, we are in many ways most singularly blessed. Our closest neighbors are good neighbors. If there are remoter nations that wish us not good but ill, they know that we are strong; they know that we can and will defend ourselves and defend our neighborhood.

We seek to dominate no other nation. We ask no territorial expansion. We oppose imperialism. We desire reduction in world armments.

We believe in democracy; we believe in freedom; we believe in peace. We offer to every nation of the world the handclasp of the good neighbor. Let those who wish our friendship look us in the eye and take our hand.

We shun political commitments which might entangle us in foreign wars; we avoid connection with the political activities of the League of Nations; but I am glad to say that we have cooperated wholeheartedly in the social and humanitarian work at Geneva.

We are not isolationists except in so far as we seek to isolate ourselves completely from war. Yet we must remember that so long as war exists on earth there will be some danger that even the nation which most ardently desires peace may be drawn into war.

I have seen war. I have seen war on land and sea. I have seen blood running from the wounded. I have seen the dead. I have seen cities destroyed. I have seen children starving. I have seen the agony of mothers and wives. I have seen war.

I have passed unnumbered hours, I shall pass unnumbered hours, thinking and planning how war may be kept from this nation.

In one field, that of economic barriers, the American policy may be, I hope, of some assistance in discouraging the economic source of war. The trade agreements which we are making are not only finding outlets for the products of American fields and factories, but are also pointing the way to the elimination of embargoes, quotas and other devices which place such pressure on nations that to them the price of peace seems less terrible than the price of war.

HIS MISTAKE: HE MOVED TO TOWN

It would be hard to find a subject with more human interest than one for which The Progressive Farmer recently offered prizes "My Biggest Mistake in 1935." We reproduce the letter which was awarded the second prize:

"Three years ago I bought a small farm, intending some day to move to it. Two years ago I was laid off my job and my first thought was to move to our farm and cut out some of our expenses. I will admit it was tough going for awhile, getting adjusted to living away from town, but the school bus came right by the house, there was a church close to us, and we bought a second-hand car. I got a job nearby and by son did the farming, and did pretty well.

"But in the fall of 1935 I began to think I could do a little better in town, so I rented out the place and moved back to town. After two years of living in the country where in the late afternoons I could hear the cowbells ringing as cows were coming up for the night the whippoorwills beginning to sing, and the end of the day was quiet and peaceful, I found myself with all the noise of the city about me at night—paying rent, buying wood and coal, buying milk and butter and eggs. Our living expenses have just about doubled, and I believe I can truthfully say our biggest mistake in 1935 was moving from our farm back to town. Providence permitting, it is a mistake I am going to rectify in another twelve months."

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

By REV. HAROLD L. LUNDQUIST, Dean of the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago. © Western Newspaper Union.

Lesson for October 18

THE SPOKEN AND THE WRITTEN WORD

LESSON TEXT—Acts 17:1, 5-11; I Thessalonians 2:7-12.

GOLDEN TEXT—The Word of God is quick, and powerful, and sharper than any two-edged sword. Heb. 4:12.

PRIMARY TOPIC—When People Read the Bible.

JUNIOR TOPIC—The Power of Jesus' Name.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How May I Win Others to Christ?

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Evangelism and the Bible.

The persecution at Philippi served not to discourage Paul and Silas, but rather to send them forward into new territory with the gospel message. Passing through two cities they came to Thessalonica, then as now a city of considerable importance. After a successful though stormy ministry there they journeyed forty miles to Berea, where the Word was gladly received.

The portion of our lesson from the Book of Acts relates how the Word was preached and received in these two cities, and the excerpt from the letter which Paul later wrote to the Thessalonian church shows what manner of life the preacher sought to live among them.

I. Preaching the Word (Acts 17; 1, 5-8).

Paul's experience at Thessalonica presents an excellent illustration of

1. How the Word should be preached (vv. 1, 5-8).

This section is incomplete without verses 2-4, which are omitted from the printed portion but should be included in the study of the lesson. Notice four things concerning his preaching.

a. The place (v. 1). Paul went to the synagogue, not by chance or because it was a great religious holiday, but because it was his "custom." The synagogue was the center of Jewish worship, and there Paul met those who were ready to receive the Word of God.

Some Christians are content to remain comfortably in church and forget to go out into the highways and hedges, but there are others who have become so accustomed to going elsewhere that they neglect the opportunity for spiritual ministry in the church.

b. The method (vv. 2-3). "Reasoning from the Scriptures." No better method has ever been devised. It is God's method. Let us get back to exposition of the Scriptures—"opening" them to men and women, "alleging," or setting out in order the truth.

c. The subject (v. 3). He preached three fundamental doctrines—the atonement, the resurrection, and the deity of Christ. Scripture preaching will be doctrinal.

d. The result (vv. 4-8). Faithful preaching of God's Word brings one of two results in the hearts of men—they are either "persuaded" and converted, or they become angry and persecute. Those who rightly received the truth were glad to join with Paul; the others raised a hue and cry because Paul and Silas were turning "the world upside down." As a matter of fact the world was already wrongside up, and Paul sought to set it right.

It is still upside down in our day.

Coming to Berea, we find Paul's experience there an illustration of

2. How the Word should be received (vv. 9-11).

Good hearers are as important as good preachers. How should the Word be received?

a. With readiness of mind (v. 11). This is a mark of nobility. The world regards the sophisticated doubter as the learned man, but he is not. Noble is the mind and heart that receives God's truth.

b. Carefully and thoughtfully (v. 11). There would be less error and folly in the pulpit if there were more intelligent Bible study in the pew. Do not assume that what some learned professor, or distinguished radio preacher says is true. Check his message by the Word.

In the final portion of our lesson Paul tells the Thessalonians that when he was with them he was concerned not only about preaching the Word, but also about

II. Living the Life (I Thess. 2:7-12).

Paul did not contradict his preaching by his living. His was a

1. Sacrificial service (vv. 7-9).

The man who preaches for his own glory—or gain—is not a true preacher of the gospel.

2. Consistent example (vv. 10-12).

The minister of Christ must behave "holily, righteously, and unblamably" if his people are to "walk worthy of God."

Our Place in the World

DON'T LET YOUR INSURANCE RUN OUT

One thing the average person never considers seriously enough until it is too late is insurance.

While not an insurance salesman, I am a strong believer in the protection offered by insurance, especially life insurance. Every family should have this protec- You should at least carry a burial policy. Most folks on the farm can spare enough eggs, butter or something of the kind each month to pay the necessary premium and the resulting feeling of security is worth much more than it costs. I know folks who could carry insurance on money spent foolishly. Unless you have seen someone "put away in a common pine box" you may not give this very serious thought.

Once you decide to buy insurance, seek competent advice on the matter. Not everything that is called insurance is safe. "Investigate before you invest" is a slogn that should be heeded by all who are considering insurance. Inquire about every detail until you know just what you are getting. Be doubly sure the company is reliable in every way, and after all this is done then be sure to carry out your part of the contract. I recall a man who took out a $250 policy on each of his children. Some time later one of them died. Mr. Policy Holder made arrangements for the burial, signed the papers necessary to get his claim, and mailed them to the company. In a few days back came a check for only $75 as full settlement of the claim. Stunned? I'll say he was. Investigation proved that this was the amount due him. His policy had lapsed; failure to pay a premium of a few cents had cost him $175.

Do you know your policy? Better look it over well and if there is any part of it you do not understand, now is the time to learn the facts. Talk to your banker or your lawyer before you accept just any kind of policy.

Be sure your policy is what you want, keep your premiums paid on time, keep your receipts, and again I say, keep that feeling of security. —The Progressive Farmer.

What Irvin S. Cobb Thinks about

Heroes of the Southwest.

GALLUP, N. M. — Through the dust of vanished yesterdays we've just traveled the high ranges of the earlier pistoleers—Pat Garrett of the itchy trigger finger; and John Wesley Hardin, the Texas preacher' boy turned scorpion; and Doc Holliday, the coughing dentist with his nervous mannerism of shooting people; and that babyish king of all the killers, little sawed-off Billy the Kid, who smiled his diffident buck-toothed smile even as he blasted out a life for every one of the twenty-one years of his life, "not counting," as he himself would say, "Mexicans and Injuns."

Irvin S. Cobb

We viewed the historic bullet pocks and their personal burying grounds, and we discovered just one survivor of those ancient two-gun clans—a rancid octogenarian, wearing the look about him of a venerable, shamefaced sheep where he sat with a gingham apron draping the withered flanks which once had supported his artillery, and he shelling peas by the kitchen door of his present wife's boarding house.

As somebody prematurely remarked, before I thought it up myself, the old Southwest is gone. But you never saw nobbier service stations than we passed, nor shinier beauty parlors, and the curb service was excellent.

Destructive Pests.

AS THOUGH it weren't bad enough already with a Presidential campaign on this year, grasshoppers have threatened growing things in the Midwest.

True to their advance notices, the 17-year locusts are popping out along the eastern seaboard. In Ontario a plague of caterpillars covered the railroad tracks so thickly trains could not run on schedule.

There's no word yet from our little southern friend, the boll weevil, but news is expected. Maybe he's waiting for the return of the cotton crops that we used to plant for the export trade—when we had an export cotton trade.

The pine borer is reported on the job in the north woods. To date, out here, we have only the regular resident pests, including the white termite, the red ant and the mother who can prove her child is another Shirley Temple, if somebody would only listen. Of the last-named, we already have upwards of 30,000 and more arriving every day.

Still, we cannot hope to escape. Presently the party who goes around taking straw votes on the election will start multiplying rapidly. And then professional California spellbinders will be binding; and at any moment Upton Sinclair is liable to start running for something.

What Makes News.

SOME gentleman who must work at the postoffice because, seemingly, stamps don't mean a thing in the world to him, keeps taking issue with me for saying the reason why successful newspapers feature so-called sensations above news of art and science and literature is not through any desire to pander to morbid or vulgar tastes, but because the average publisher, being a smart merchandiser, puts such wares in his shop window, which is his front page, as are calculated to catch the eye and win the trade of the general public.

My correspondent demands an answer. All right, let's make it a parable:

Suppose, mister, that tomorrow, through the town where you live, passes a train bearing a distinguished savant who has made some great discovery—say, the cause and cure of botts—and on another train there is a taffy-haired lady who, after a spectacular murder trial, has just been triumphantly acquitted on the ground of self-defense for shooting a gentleman friend eight or nine times in the back. Which one of these two travelers will draw the biggest crowd down to the station? And, brother, which train will you meet?

Favorite Son Keynoter.

BACK home the folks are all puffed up with pride. Our own Albin W. Barkley keynoted for the Democratic convention until the rafters warped.

Besides being a grand person and a hard-working senator, he's one of the last of the real southern silver-tongued—the kind that can make a song of a syllable and turn any reasonably long word into an anthem.

And does he come from the place where the true faith prevails? The majority stabilized just as soon as we got a lot of old-timers to quit voting for Jeff Davis. We weaned them on W. J. Bryan. Ours is probably the only congressional district in the Union that never has gone Republican, although, when Al Smith ran, it had a comparatively close call from going Baptist.

Let the creatures of entrenched greed beware. As goes Paducah, so goer Paducah.

EXCESSIVE PENALTIES UNDER THE KENTUCKY LOCAL OPTION LAW

The Local Option Law enacted by the Kentucky General Assembly of 1936 is the first law ever enactfed in Kentucky under which a violator forfeits all of his property to the State and under which an informer gets 10 per cent of the proceeds of sale of the confiscated property.

Here is what the Louisville Times had to say of the Local Option Law in a news story of September 15, 1936:

"The State local option law is more stringent than the once-famed Volstead Act. Possession of liquor in dry territory is regarded as prima facie evidence of guilt.

"All of the lands, stock and holdings of a person found guilty of violating the local option law may be confiscated by the State and the proceeds of its sale turned over to the jury fund. If the conviction is the result of information furnished to the authorities by a neighbor or other citizen, the informer gets 10 per cent of the proceeds as reward. If a public official fails to act on information from an informer he is subject to indictment for malfeasance."

The law is calculated to encourage "rackets" of a most vicious character. It would be quite possible for unscrupulous persons or "racketeers" to "plant" a small quantity of liquor in the business house, store ,automobile or home of an innocent person in a local option county, and then furnish information in the authorities which would result in arrest and conviction, subjecting the victim's property to forfeiture and sale.

Many people in "dry" communities are being induced to vote for local option in the belief that the law is the same one which was in effect prior to State Prohibition. Such is not the case. The present law defines intoxicating liquor as any beverage containing more than 1 per cent of alcohol by volume, and under its provisions the sale of whiskey even for medicinal purposes is prohibited.

WITH ROD AND REEL

This week we have very little to report due to the high water caused by recent rains. However, up until the Ohio River came down muddy, several nice catches were reported at Locks 38 and 39.

The recent rains, we believe will greatly help the fishing in both streams and the river. Gunpowder Creek is expected to be clear enough for casting within the next ten days, and with the fresh water and late season many bass should be taken from this stream before the weather becomes too cold for angling.

Many pople are under the impression that there are no fish in this stream, but we are thoroughly convinced that some of the "old residenters" still rule in these waters, and if fished faithfully someone is going to bring in some of these wise old boys.

We do not claim to be authority on lures used in casting, but in some of our experiences at this time of the year we have found that red and white lures have proven very attractive to Mr. Bass.

Last year, while fishing Licking River near Morgan, Ky., in the latter part of October several fishermen reported that the Weasel lure seemed to attract more attention from the finny tribe than any other bait used.

With light frosts along the creek and recent rains cooling the water, fish should be in the notion to strike as soon as the creeks become clear. Many of our old fishermen state that October is the best fishing month of the year, and we are of the same opinion.

While talking to Mr. "Pap" Brady one of Burlington's sportsmen, he stated: "I still think there are plenty of fish in Gunpowder." Mr. Brady should know, as he is among the best when it comes to fishing. He reported catching nine bass in one pool this season, from the above mentioned stream. That's not so bad!

MEETING HELD BY DEMOCRATS

AT RUSSELLVILLE — LAFFOON, BROWN AND RHEA SPEAK FROM SAME PLATFORM AS PARTY RALLIES.

Russellville, Ky., October 10—Former Governor Laffoon, former Congressman John Young Brown and Tom Rhea, Chairman of the State Highway Commission during the Laffoon Administration, spoke from the same platform at a Democratic rally here today, urging reelection of President Roosevelt. The Logan County courtroom was filled. Rhea, who was defeated for the Democratic nomination for Governor last year by A. B. Chandler, spoke first and introduced the other speakers. He said he was among the "first to raise my voice for the President, and I am now raising my voice for him."

Rhea warned "you are now facing world strife. You are facing another World War. Be careful in your selection for President. Who are the munition manufacturers in the race? The Republican candidate."

Introducing Brown, who was a foe of the Laffoon administration and who this year fought J. C. W. Beckham, whom Governor Chandler unsuccessfully supported in the primary campaign for United States Senator, Rhea described him as a "man who does what he says he'll do."

"I am not here to go into the past, present or future difficulties of the Democratic party in Kentucky," Brown said. "Every faction should expend its efforts to put Roosevelt back in the White House and elect Democratic Senators and Congressmen in Kentucky."

Laffoon said "the people complain the President is spending too much money." He said they did not "complain about Hoover spending too much."

"Hoover prosperity," he added, "didn't come until Roosevelt took office."

QUESTIONS ANSWERED ABOUT RESETTLEMENT

This is question three of a series of question and answers about the Resettlement Administration which are being published each week in the Recorder.

Is the size of the Administrative staff of Resettlement Administration justified in the light of the number of people helped?

Answer:

The administrative staff of the Resettlement Administration is more than justified in the light of the help being given to the needy. The Resettlement Administration has helped over 700,000 families throug loans and grants under its rehabilitation program. Nearly 3,000 families have been relocated from bad land to good land, and projects are now under development that will provide homes and farms for an additional 10,000. More than 16,000 families are living on the land being purchased by the Resettlement Administration for retirement from agriculture. Some will be able to move with the money they obtain from the sale of their land. Other will find work on the development projects that will be carried on to improve the land. Some 6,000 of them will receive further assistance from the Resettlement Administration in order to move to more profitable acres. In addition a daily average of 55,000 men is employed on the land development projects, about 15,000 on the construction of resettlement projects. Altogether, well over 3,000,000 people are being helped by an administrative personnel of only 15,804 persons in Washington and thruout the country.

Next week's question: "Is the rehabilitation program which is carried on by the Resettlement Administration an expensive form of relief?"

PLANS COMPLETE FOR FARMERS TO SIGN SOIL PAYMENT PAPLICATIONS

Lexington, Ky., Oct. 12—The signing of application by farmers for payments under the 1936 agricultural conservation program will begin in Kentucky within a few days, according to O. M. Farrington, in charge of the state office. The procedure for preparing applications has been approved in Washington, he said, and the forms will be distributed among the county offices at once.

Farmers who have carried out their soil building practices should notify their county offices at once, Mr. Farrington said, so they can sign applications for payments. Applications cannot be filled out before soil building practices have been completed. According to regulations, farmers have until October 31 to complete their practices

Following the filling out of applications in county offices, they will be sent to the state office at the College of Agriculture for checking. From the state office the applications will be forwarded to Washington for computation and payment.

The field work for determining performance on each farm is about complete. Reports made by local supervisors of this work will furnish the basis for determining the amount of payments. Procedure for auditing the applications and making paymnts is being completed, and will be ready for operation as soon as the applications are recived from the field.

Mr. Farrington said that approximately 120,000 Kentucky farmers have filleo out work sheets under the soil conservation program, or about 15,00 more than participated in the AAA commodity programs.

THE FARM AND HOME (Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station)

Foods to increase weight: pork, butter, cheese, cream, dates, fried eggs, nuts, sugar and whole milk. Foods to decrease weight: soup made without fat, greens, fresh fruits, except bananas, and skimmed milk or buttermilk.

The percentage of fat in a cow's milk is controlled by inheritance and not by feed. She may be so fed as to give more milk and therefore a large amount of fat, but the ratio of fat to milk cannot be raised by rich feeds.

Damp and poorly ventilated houses, drafts and overcrowding cause colds among poultry in the fall. Clean, warm and sunny quarters are necessary for health and egg production. Watch the birds carefully for appearance of disease in cold, damp weather.

Children enjoy eggs scrambled, hard cooked and served with white sauce, or made into omelets. These are welcome variations from the common methods of poaching, soft-cooking and coddling. Long use of one method may cause the child to rebel.

In some instances two-thirds of the original weight of tobacco is lost by the evaporation of water during the first 10 days of curing. This is said to mean the loss of as much as 800 gallons of water per acre when the curing process is completed.

As commonly applied to land, limestone is considered the proper fineness if practically all of it will go through a 10-mesh sieve. About 50 percent should go through a 40-mesh sieve and 25 per cent thru a 100-mesh screen.

In Kansas the "little man," concerning whose welfare Mr. Landon has been publicly solicitous of late, pays state income taxes, if single and without dependents, on $5 a week. Under the Federal incom tax law—which the Liberty League-G. O. P.-Hearst candidate criticizes—he pays no income tax on less than $20 a week. But men and women with a net income of $50,000 in Kansas are more fortunate. Under the act Governor Landon approved, they pay but $1,870.

Through the efficacy of Governor Chandler's presentation of our case to the President, Kentucky prisons are to be rehabilitated and made into real reformatories and our charitable institutions become proper hospitals for the humane care of our mental unfortunates.

INCREASED COSTS OF LIVING

An interesting illustration of the cost of living based upon figures of the National Industrial Conference Board, appears in the United States News. It shows that in 1932 the average family necessities for a year amounted to $1,000. The cost for the same quanity of items in 1935 was $1,072; in 1936 it was $1,113.

The official explanation in Washington is to the effect that Government control of business and agriculture through the NRA and the AAA, and other recovery measures, was the reason for the first upward swing in prices in 1933. Last year there was a sharp rise in food prices, due to the program of crop control. The drouth is blamed by Government economists for the further increase in food prices this year and these same authorities say that prevailing wage standards and other local conditions influenced living costs in different parts of the country.

Perhaps everybody will want to figure out in his, or her, own way the reasons for the gradual upturn that adds to the cost of living. Inasmuch as this subject is a point of bitter controversy in the elections there is an excellent opportunity to reach your own conclusions, based on the answers that are offered from many quarters.

BOONE COUNTY SCHOOL NEWS

BURLINGTON SCHOOL NOTES

In as much as Mr. Clore served for years a member of the Boone County Board of Education our school was dismissed during the time of his funeral. This was done in respect for his services to our school and for his services to education.

We are back from the school tournament at Hebron still fighting for our school colors. The fifth and sixth grade room was represented by Allen Gulley in reading; Mattie Harris in language; Arthur Tanner in Arithmetic and Sally Southers in spelling. Those who represented the 7th and 8th grades were Violet Stevens in reading; Mary Snow in spelling; Elaine Vice in English; Helen Cress in Hygiene; James G. Smith won first in arithmetic; Edith Harris first in Civics; Mary B. Smith in History; Leslie McMullen in Geography and James G. Smith in General Scholarship.

Last Thursday, Mr. Moore took the Biology class fishing and to their disappointment, it started raining, so they had to stay in under a bridge until the shower was over. The period was also over with the shower—Freshman's luck.

There was a telephone installed in our school last Friday afternoon. This telephone is to be used only when it is necessary to general school procedure. Parents and pupils should remember that we have work to do, and that personal or trivial matters should be cared for in some other way during school hours.

Credit for this convenient service to our school should go to the teachers, who are at present sharing the cost of the telephone.

Tuesday night of this week there was a shower given for the kitchen. There was also a variety program given by the pupils and teachers of the school.

Monday there was a representative from the Madison Studio here inquiring about the taking of pictures of the various rooms and individuals. Any parent who would like to have any of the pictures may obtain one by sending the price by his child to his home room teacher.

Wednesday the boys' and girls' soft ball team play at Florence and on Friday the boys will go to Hamilton. The games are played usually after school hours.

The Freshmen have had their first class program. Music and a variety speaking program was featured by the class. Interest was good and the class now is making plans for the next class meeting.

All the rooms of the building have been decorated. The best drawings were selected from the classes and used on the windows. The second and third grade boys are making a collection of rocks in the natural formation and those shaped and polished by Indians. Any encouragement or gifts to this group will improve their museum of rock forms.

On Friday night of this week the Grade Tournament will be held at Florence. The chorus is composed of members from the fifth and sixth grades. Calvin Kelly and Geraldine Yelton will represent Burlington in Declamation.

HEBRON SCHOOL NOTES

In the good old Hoover days of rugged individualism, if you deposited your money in a bank and the bank failed—perhaps through wild speculation with its depositors' money—you might collect 20 cents on the dollar, or nothing at all. Under Roosevelt, if you deposit $5,000 and the bank fails—which they are not doing these days—you get back $5,000. The Federal Deposit Insurance Act safeguarding your bank account is another New Deal Measure that candidate Landon thinks is "cock-eyed."

Candidate Landon pledges himself to balance the budget with the utmost speed, continue emergency spending, repeal the corporation surplus tax, thus lopping off $600-000,000 income, and abolish other "cockeyed" taxes. How then does he intend to make up the difference? What, specifically, is the Landon tax program? If candidate Landon knows he is not being permitted to tell.

I must employ at once a man living in small town or on farm. Permanent work. Good pay. Address Box 159.

When Jack's a Dull Boy
Defective Eyesight may be the cause
Many a school failure has been traced to defective eyesight. When a child begins to show signs of backwardness—don't be alarmed—but do have his eyes examined by an eyesight specialist. Eye glasses may correct the trouble.
On the other hand, why wait until symptoms of eye trouble appear in your home? Guard your child's eyesight—and your own—with better light.
Better home lighting means plenty of light, well shaded and free from glare. Moreover, the whole room should be lighted, not just parts of it.
It costs little to correct poor lighting. Sometimes rearranging portable lamps and changing bulbs or lamp shades is all that is needed. We'll be glad to help you with suggestions.

Free Home Lighting Check-up
You don't need to guess whether or not your home lighting conforms to modern standards for safe seeing. We'll gladly send a representative to measure your lighting with a Light Meter. Phone or write for an appointment today.

KENTUCKY FARM NEWS

Twenty-six farmers in Warren and adjoining counties exhibited 86 Jerseys at a show at Bowling Green. Numbers and quality were better than at a similar show last year, the quality of the calf and yearling classes being exceptional. Three thuosand people saw the show.

A table prepared by Earl G. Welch of the Kentucky College of Agriculture makes it possible accurately to estimate the number of tons in a pile of limestone, by measuring the circumference at the base and the height of the cone.

Approximately 5,000 Hart county farm men and women attended the county fair to see exhibits of beef and dairy cattle, poultry, crops and home products. "Cooperation was unsually fine and plans are now being started for next year's fair," says County Agent, Ray C. Hopper.

The demand for limestone and marl is taxing the facilities of Montgomery county to supply it. Close to 4,000 tons of limestone have been ordered in the past month, 100-ton orders being the usual thing. Thwelve marl beds have been tested for immediate use. More than 1,000 tons of marl have already been applied.

Mrs. C. R. Sullivan, of Boone county raised 302 chickens out of 305 hatched, despite the fact that this was her first year to raise poultry. Starting with eggs from purebred hens, having sanitary conditions and using up-to-date feeding methods helped achieve the result, she believes.

Christian County Negro farmers have given more attention to the live at home program than to making large profits this year. They have large gardens, a feed supply for livestock, canned meat and similar products.

Meetings also will be held in Breckinridge county October 30.

Turkey raising has increased rapidly in Kentucky in recent years. Nearness to good markets and the climate favor the development of the industry, according to poultry authorities. Prices are expected to be good for well-finished birds this year.

Business men of Hartford, Ohio county, have bought a crusher which is busy full-time producing 10-mesh limestone.

GIRL FROM ENGLAND ENROLLS IN KENTUCKY AGRICULTURE COLLEGE

Coming from England to study scientific farming as it is done in America Miss Clavia Goodman has entered the Colelge of Agriculture of the University of Kentucky. She is one of three girls registered this year not for home economics, but rather for straight agriculture.

Part-owner with her father and mother of farms in Bourbon county, Kentucky, Miss Goodman expects to assume management of the land as soon as her studies are completed. "In England I had heard of Kentucky stock and tobacco, said to be among the finest in the world. I was interested in diversified farming, the way Americans have beef and dairy cattle, shep and hogs, as well as tobacco and corn. I want to make a profit of course, but I also want to conserve and build up the land." that women who own land miss a great opportunity if they fail to take person charge of it. While it

The young English girl believes takes many years to build land to good fertility ,a few years of careless management may do almost irreparable damage, she pointed out.

Miss oGodman has registered for work in crops, genetics, farm management, entomology, soil management, and market classes and grades. Her mother is the former Sue Clay, of Paris, Ky., and her grandfather was Cassius M. Clay.

GOAL OF 104,000 IS SET IN ROLLCALL OF AMERICAN RED CROSS

A tentative goal of 104,000 members in Kentucky has been set for the 1936 rollcall of the American Red Cross, it was learned this week, following the holding of six regional conferences, in the state, in preparation for the annual rollcall. J. A. L. Sayer, national representative of the American Red Cross in Kentucky, with other representatives from the national headquarters at Washington, attended the regional conferences, which were held at Mayfield, Hopkinsville, Owensboro, Frankfort, Corbin and Prestonsburg. All were well attended, the keenest interest was manifested by the representatives of all chapters and it was felt that a successful start of the preliminaries for the 1936 rollcall had been achieved.

The work of the Red Cross in Kentucky in relieving the distress caused by floods, tornadoes and like disasters in the past was reviewed. It was brought out that in the past five years the American Red Cross has expended, for every dollar subscribed to its work in the annual rollcalls, approximately $4.00.

Besides Mr. Sayer those who came from national headquarters to assist in the Kentucky preliminaries were Miss Ruth Riley, field representative; Charles Carr, of the national disaster staff; Miss Zella Bryant, nursing field representative; and Everett Dix, head of the Eastern Division of the American Red Cross.

At each of the meetings the moving picture: "The Red Cross to the Rescue," actual motion pictures of the Red Cross in action during the floods of 1936, was presented. In the conference at Frankfort, the first aid squad of the Lexington Fire Department put on a first-aid demonstration and the Franklin County Community Players presented a pantomine illustrating work in home hygiene, accident prevention and first aid.

At the Hopkinsville conference, Mrs. Ethel Matson, assistant to the national director of the Junior Red Cross, spoke on the work of the Junior membership. In all the meetings Home Hygiene was emphasized and it was revealed that WPA women workers have been added to those who have been receiving instruction in this branch of the work.

Some idea was given of the variation in membership in Kentucky since the beginning of the World War. In 1917 the American Red Cross rollcall in Kentucky resulted in 271,878 persons joining the Red Cross. In 1918 the number was 291,520, the peak membership for the state.

Kentucky is 41st in rank in the United States in point of membership, or about 2¼ per cent of the population of the state, which, according to the 1930 census, is 2,614,589.

AIR-CONDITIONING

This business of air-conditioning reveals its daily wonders. Victims of hay fever in Washington this season specialized on air-conditioned moving picture houses to relieve them of their snifflings and discomforts.

It is news to most of us that the manufacture of rayon became a possibility through air-conditioning. Willis H. Carrier of Newark, New Jersey, is the real pioneer in the air-conditioning industry. He recently told a national business conference about the great forward strides of air-conditioning, which he says has been a great help in making confectionery. "The use of air-conditioning is practically universal today at all plants where tobacco products are manufactured," Mr. Carirer says. He has described the methods and reasons why economy is secured in production through the installation of air-conditioning in industrial establishments. In some of its uses the equipments pays for itself in a few months or in a very few years. Restaurants frequently reap an increase in business sufficient to pay six times the total cost of owning and operating the equipment, according according to Mr. Carrier. Of course we all know that our cities are sprinkled with the beginning of air-conditioning, and there is no doubt but what within the next few years most homes and offices, everywhere, will be air-conditioned.

KENTUCKY 4-H CLUB NEWS

An exhibit of a model farm water system, built by the Smith's Grove club, was a feature of the 4-H show at the Warren County Fair. Club members also showed eight baby beeves, and had special classes in canning, cooking and sewing.

A potato exhibit by the Quicksand 4-H club attracted attention at the annual harvest festival at the Robinson Experiment Substation. Under the leadership of J. S. Barnes, this club obtained good yields of high-quality potatoes despite dry weather.

Caldwell county club members are finishing two carloads of calves for the annual fat cattle show and sale at the Bourbon Stock Yards in Louisville. The quality of several of the calves is considered the best of any ever finished in the county.

Members of every 4-H club in Hardin county made exhibits at the Kentucky State Fair, entering the foods, canning and clothing departments. Thirteen ribbons were won. Club interest in the county has increased during the year.

Poultry projects are of major interest among club boys and girls in Lincoln county. Seven model brooder houses equipped with brick stoves were used. In several instances, boys and girls were so successful that their parents are planning to improve and enlarge their flocks.

Grayson county club members expect to complete about 90 percent of their projects. Forty-four calves are being finished for the Louisville fat cattle show. The county's poultry judging team placed third at the Kentucky State Fair.

HOME INFLUENCE STILL COMES FIRST

An important thing about children's play is the parents' attitude toward it, Prof. Mary Mumford, in charge of the University of Kentucky nursery school, brings out to her home economics class in "Child Development." Home-made play makes possible the development of skills, knowledge of nature, and an appreciation of other members of the family. The parents can be the ones to lead in the child's learning about different kinds of trees and his collecting of wild flowers. They can help him study birds and their nests, sing carols, and poin in folk dancing.

A recreatoin room can often be made with only a small expenditure of money or none at all. Oftentimes a basement room or an attic can be taken over for it. A floor covering of linoleum permits easy cleaning. The younger children will enjoy having crayons and boxes of paints, brushes, and an easel or large board laid up against the wall. Clay modeling is also interesting, and older children will enjoy amateur carving and one for the father provides hours for working and playing together. The children can make bird houses, shelves for their toys, doll equipment and even airplanes and boats.

Activities that require actual participation are sound educationally, Miss Mumford declares. As the children grow older, the school church, 4-H club Scout troops and other organizations will assist in their training, but the influence of the home remains primary in importance.

The national wealth—property owned by citizens of the United States—has increased 60 billion dollars since Roosevelt took office. The increase in Government income also makes certain a balanced budget within eighteen to twenty-four months. What "fumbling with recovery!"

More than half a century ago a Kentucky lad worked in a tobacco field a whole season for $12, took his money and bought a Bible, the works of Shakespeare, Scott and Dickens. "Queer lad," the neighbors said, to spend so much money for books. But the far-sighted youngster must have known what he was about. He was young Marvel Mills Logan.

USE GOOD SENSE IN FEEDING COWS

In the use of high-priced feeds, no rule can take the place of common sense, remarks Prof. Fordyce Ely, head of the dairy department of the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture in a circular called, "Feeding Dairy Cows."

A half-grain ration, that is a pound of grain to 5 or 6 pounds of milk, may be the practical solution to a problem of high-priced feed, he says. Full-feeding of grain calls for a pound to 2½ to 4 pounds of milk.

The grain, of course, is controlled by the amount of pasture and hay available. Dairy farmers with an abundance of pasture and good legume hay sometimes get along with practically no grain. A 1,000-pound cow may be expected to eat 20 to 30 pounds of good alfalfa or other legume hay daily. The more she eats the less grain she needs.

Pasture and ha yare the principal feeds in milk making. As a rule, the size of the herd should be suited to the farm. Unless butterfat or milk brings relatively high prices, the dairy herd should be limited by the pasture and legume hay the farm can produce.

MORE PEOPLE PUT TO WORK

More persons were placed in private employment during September by the National Reemployment Service than in any other month since June, 1934, according to Myer Freyman, state ere-employment director. The total of 1,977 private job placements exceeded the previous best month of the year which was April, by 526 or 36.2 per cent increase over that month. September private placements showed an increase of 45.9 per cent over August when 1,355 were placed on private jobs; 388 per cent above the Sptember 1935 figure of 405; and 113.3 per cent above the corresponding month of 1934 when 927 were placed.

Private placements for September brought the total for the third quarter to 4,263 as against 3,063 for the same period of 1934 and 1,242 during the corresponding period of last year. The September figure brought the nine months total to 9,765 as compared to 5,643 private placements during the first nine months of last year and 6,802 for the entire year 1935.

In addition to those placed in private employment in September, 3,208 were placed on public works and 139 on WPA jobs bringing the grand total placements to 5,314, 11 per cent above the August total and 101.4 per cent above the September 1935 total.

Of the total placements made, 4,571 were men and 743 were women. Veteran placements numbered 446. Included in the total placements were 891 placements of persons on relief; 295 of this number were placed in private jobs, 494 on public works and 102 on WPA jobs. Total placements of all types made this year number 40,038, as against 28,441 for the whole of last year.

Besides Bureau of Public Roads projects, and other governmental projects servide by the National Reemployment Service, 64 PWA projects underway during the month were serviced. Seven of this number were started during the month and three were completed.

In the active file are included 7,712 veterans as against 12,726 September 30, 1935. During September, 4,447 new applications were taken; 6,336 renewals recorded, and 15,519 reinterviews given; 8,075 referrals to jobs were made. Field visits numbered 1,025 of which 827 were to private employers and 198 to public works jobs.

A potato exhibit by the Quicksand 4-H club attracted attention at the annual harvest festival at the Robinson Experiment Substation. Under the leadership of J. S. Barnes, this club obtained good yields of high-quality potatoes despite dry weather.

Caldwell county club members are finishing two carloads of calves for the annual fat cattle show and sale at the Bourbon Stock Yards in Louisville. The quality of several of the calves is considered the best of any ever finished in the county.

Members of every 4-H club in Hardin county made exhibits at the Kentucky State Fair, enterting the foods, canning and clothing departments. Thirteen ribbons were won. Club interest in the county has increased during the year.

Poultry projects are of major interest among club boys and girls in Lincoln county. Seven model brooder houses equipped with brick stoves were used. In several instances, boys and girls were so successful that their parents are planning to improve and enlarge their flocks.

Grayson county club members expect to complete about 90 percent of their projects. Forty-four calves are being finished for the Louisville fat cattle show. The county's poultry judging team placed third at the Kentucky State Fair.

HOME INFLUENCE STILL COMES FIRST

An important thing about children's play is the parents' attitude toward it, Prof. Mary Mumford, in charge of the University of Kentucky nursery school, brings out to her home economics class in "Child Development." Home-made play makes possible the development of skills, knowledge of nature, and an appreciation of other members of the family. The parents can be the ones to lead in the child's learning about different kinds of trees and his collecting of wild flowers. They can help him study birds and their nests, sing carols, and poin in folk dancing.

A recreatoin room can often be made with only a small expenditure of money or none at all. Oftentimes a basement room or an attic can be taken over for it. A floor covering of linoleum permits easy cleaning. The younger children will enjoy having crayons and boxes of paints, brushes, and an easel or large board laid up against the wall. Clay modeling is also interesting, and older children will enjoy amateur carving and one for the father provides hours for working and playing together. The children can make bird houses, shelves for their toys, doll equipment and even airplanes and boats.

Activities that require actual participation are sound educationally, Miss Mumford declares. As the children grow older, the school church, 4-H club Scout troops and other organizations will assist in their training, but the influence of the home remains primary in importance.

The national wealth—property owned by citizens of the United States—has increased 60 billion dollars since Roosevelt took office. The increase in Government income also makes certain a balanced budget within eighteen to twenty-four months. What "fumbling with recovery!"

More than half a century ago a Kentucky lad worked in a tobacco field a whole season for $12, took his money and bought a Bible, the works of Shakespeare, Scott and Dickens. "Queer lad," the neighbors said, to spend so much money for books. But the far-sighted youngster must have known what he was about. He was young Marvel Mills Logan.

USE GOOD SENSE IN FEEDING COWS

In the use of high-priced feeds, no rule can take the place of common sense, remarks Prof. Fordyce Ely, head of the dairy department of the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture in a circular called, "Feeding Dairy Cows."

A half-grain ration, that is a pound of grain to 5 or 6 pounds of milk, may be the practical solution to a problem of high-priced feed, he says. Full-feeding of grain calls for a pound to 2½ to 4 pounds of milk.

The grain, of course, is controlled by the amount of pasture and hay available. Dairy farmers with an abundance of pasture and good legume hay sometimes get along with practically no grain. A 1,000-pound cow may be expected to eat 20 to 30 pounds of good alfalfa or other legume hay daily. The more she eats the less grain she needs.

Pasture and ha yare the principal feeds in milk making. As a rule, the size of the herd should be suited to the farm. Unless butterfat or milk brings relatively high prices, the dairy herd should be limited by the pasture and legume hay the farm can produce.

MORE PEOPLE PUT TO WORK

More persons were placed in private employment during September by the National Reemployment Service than in any other month since June, 1934, according to Myer Freyman, state ere-employment director. The total of 1,977 private job placements exceeded the previous best month of the year which was April, by 526 or 36.2 per cent increase over that month. September private placements showed an increase of 45.9 per cent over August when 1,355 were placed on private jobs; 388 per cent above the Sptember 1935 figure of 405; and 113.3 per cent above the corresponding month of 1934 when 927 were placed.

Private placements for September brought the total for the third quarter to 4,263 as against 3,063 for the same period of 1934 and 1,242 during the corresponding period of last year. The September figure brought the nine months total to 9,765 as compared to 5,643 private placements during the first nine months of last year and 6,802 for the entire year 1935.

Senator Barkley is scheduled for only six or eight speeches in Kentucky before the election. He addressed the voters of this county during the campaign in 1932.

FARMERS WILL LOSE $15,000

IN AGRICULTURAL CONSERVATION PROGRAM, ACCORDING TO REPORTS. FARMERS STILL HAVE CHANCE.

Boone County farmers cooperating in the Agricultural Conservation program will lose or fail to earn from present estimates appromiately $15,000, of the approxmiate $45,000.00 Soil Building Allowance according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent.

The Soil Building Allowance is $1.00 per acre for each acre of soil conserving crops on crop land on the farm in 1936 may be earned by carrying out certain other soil building or soil improving practices. These practices must be carried out in the next ten days or by October 31st.

The following are some good practices that may still be carried out and are practical for many Boone County farmers and will help them earn their full Soil Building Allowance:

Seedings: Blue Grass 12 to 28 lbs., per acre $2.00 per acre.

Blue Grass Mixture, at least 40 per cent blue grass—(not less than 5 lbs.) $1.50 per acre.

Red top at least 40 per cent red top mixture 75 cents per acre.

Vetch, at least 15 lbs. per acre, $1.00 per acre.

Fertilizer:

Lime ½ ton to 2 tons per acre, $1.40 per ton. (May be applied on any land on the farm.)

Phosphate, 80 to 320 lbs. of 20 per cent superphosphate 62½ per hundred (Must be used on any grass or legume crop.)

Practically all of Boone County land needs both lime and phosphate for growing of better grass and legume crops. Farmers who still have sufficient soil building allowance should top dress either their young or old seedings of grass and legumes with from 80 to 320 pounds of phosphate per acre.

Phosphate, unlike certain other fertilizers does little leaching from the soil and like lime will last for several years.

Farmers who have not used their Soil Building Allowance should make every effort to do so if at all practical.

BENEFITS TO FARMERS CITED

BY BRENT SPENCE AT KENTON COUNTY RALLY IN INDEPENDENCE MONDAY—FARM RELIEF IMMEDIATE UNDER F. D. R.

"Farm income dropped more than eight billion dollars from 1920-1923," Congressman Brent Spence told Democrats gathered at Independence Courthouse Monday for a Kenton County rally.

Under the Roosevelt Administration farm relief was immediate and continuous. The Farm Credit Act saved half a million homes and refinanced thousands of debt-burdened farmers."

Judge Johnst Northcutt of Kenton Circuit Court, Judge John B. Read, of Kenton County Court, Omer Stubbs, Jr., Richard T. Von Hoene and John M. Hunnicutt were other speakers. Al Jaeger presided.

Congressman Spence said in part:

"If we are to have any lasting prosperity, the farmer must be permitted to make a reasonable profit on his produce, and he must have sufficient happiness and prosperity to keep him on the farm.

"I ask you to compare the old deal with the New Deal, and the effect on the farmers' income. In March, 1936, it was selling at 90.9 cents. Corn at 24.1 cents; three years later at 58.5 cents. Hogs at $3.22 in 1933 and in 1936 at $9.11. Cotton in 1933 at 5.9 cents and in 1936 at 10.9 cents. Tobacco in 1933 at 6.1 cents per pound, and in 1936 at 8.7 cents per pound.

"The Agricultural Adjustment Administration paid farmers a bounty to cut huge surpluses of wheat, cotton, corn, tobacco, and other farm products, and induced them to cooperate with the national government in its great objectives."

"The election of a President this year is a test which will determine the future welfare and security of all the people in America," Hunnicutt said.

LIME PULVERIZER CHANGES ROUTE

Limestone pulverizing in Boone County was at a standstill last week because of broken parts on the crusher, according to David Colville, Assistant County Agent. The pulverizer was repaired and began crushing for Mr. Bert Loomis of near Burlington last Monday, October 19th. Since the work has been momentarily halted it will be necessary to crush for those farmers whose names were first turned into our office.

From Mr. Loomis' farm the pulverizer will go to the farms of Henry Siekman, Chester Aylor, Ralph Jones, C. H. Tanner, Robert Chambers, Grant Maddox, Clyde Anderson, Henry Anderson and W. H. Rucker.

For the benefit of those farmers who do not have the rock available, Ralph Barlow, Union, Ky., has agreed to furnish crush limestone delivered at or near Burlington for $2.00 per ton. Since there are only two more weeks to apply limestone and receive soil building payments under the ACP, all farmers who are interested are urged to get in touch with Mr. Barlow or call the County Agent's Office.

MEMBER KENTUCKY PRESS ASSOCIATION ORGANIZED JANUARY, 1860

Editorial of the Week

A POPULAR PRESIDENT

We've heard it remarked often during the past four years, "Wait until 1936, you'll find out how popular Roosevelt is." Well, we've waited until 1936, and during that wait, which we certainly cannot say was one of want and suffering, as during that time of the previous years. And now we are ready to show those people just how popular Roosevelt really is.

With the registration figures now almost completely compiled, Kentucky is showing on the face of that, something over 150,000 majority. Mr. Vego Barnes, State Chairman, says with that large a regristration majority, our State will easily go over 200,000. Let's hear from those people who said that Roosevelt was unpopular.

Unless figures are terrible liars, he is more popular now than he was in 1932. At that time he was acclaimed the most popular president since Abraham Lincoln. If that was true then, now I would say that he is the most popular president to ever succeed himself since George Washington.

In 1932 Roosevelt carried our State by the over-whelming majority of 185,858. There were counties in the State which had never been known to go Democratic, which cast a majority for Roosevelt. Those counties are going to again, not only stamp a majority of their votes under the rooster, but their democratic vote will even surpass that of 1932. For instance Taylor County, ordinarily strong republican, showed a majority of 231 for Roosevelt in 1932. In the Governor's race in 1935 they showed up true to their original form and went republican. But when the time is nearing for another presidential race, an opportunity to cast their vote for Roosevelt, they register 556 Democratic. A true indication that the people in Taylor County are wide awake. In other words, using that famous age old expression, They know which side their bread is buttered on."

But our own County serves as the same barometer. When the final count was made in 1932, there was a Republican vote of 1355, or only a Democratic majority of 2179. In the Governor's race in 1935, there was only a Democratic majority of 1976. But Boone, along with those other progressive counties, when a presidential race appears near the horizon, they register ..... Democrats, giving a majority of ..... There are all indications pointing toward our County giving Roosevelt a majority of 3000. Is Roosevelt unpopular?

DIXIE THE LAND OF YOUTH

Herman Hagedorn entitled his book addressed to young people, You Are The Hope of World. Here in the South, where we have a larger proportion of children and young people than anywhere else in the United States, this fact makes the opening of the schools of unusual significance and importance. The Progressive Farmer, discussing the importance of a well-rounded education which will fit these young people for life, has this to say:

"Every young boy and girl should keep in mind the fine sense of balance and proportion represented by the 4-H objective—'Head, Heart Hands, Health.' Head-training alone may produce a bookworm; hand-training, a drudge; heart-training, a fanatic, and training head ,hand, and heart all togethmay yet fail if health is neglected. Hence to every boy and girl we would say, 'Join the 4-H club if you can, but even if you can't, we hope you will aim constantly at the well-rounded personality the 4-H ideal represents.'

"Paraphrasing Mr. Hagedorn, we wouldsay to all our schoolbound young people, 'You are the hope of the South.' You must face the tremendous fact that if you offer the world only the labor of your muscles and hands, then the world will pay you only enough to support mucles and hands—the bare physical necessities of life. But if you offer the world the labor not only of your hands but also of your heads, your intelligence, then the world will give you not only (1) the bare living as required by your muscles but (2) some of the comforts and conveniences which brains and intelligence require."

Security of Bank Deposits Now At All-Time High

Not a Single National Bank Failure in Past Year, Which Is a 55-Year Record for National Banking System

Security of bank deposits struck an all-time high this month, with the official announcement that during the past year not a single National Bank has failed. This is a 55-year record.

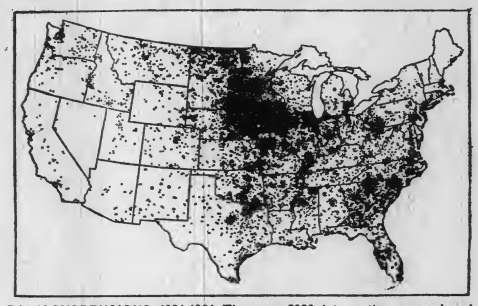
Since the establishment of the national banking system in 1863, there have been only three years out of the entire period that have equalled the present record, and those three perfect years were so far back in banking history that the present generation has well-nigh forgotten them. They were 1870, 1871 and 1881.

Since Federal Deposit Insurance went into effect, on January 1, 1934, there have been only 66 insured bank failures. In every case the insured deposits were paid off at once.

Today more than 98 percent of all the depositors in insured banks are proteoted by insurance. American banking has become the safest and soundest in the world.

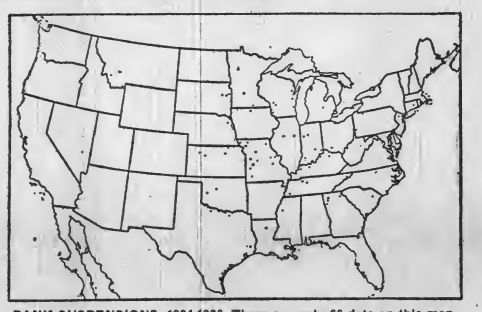
The benefit of the Roosevelt administration's banking insurance is two-sided—it helps the bank as well as the depositor. The man who has worked hard to attain security and who deposits his money in a bank where it can be used, instead of letting it lie idle, is no longer jeopardizing his substance, or gambling that the bank he chooses will be safe. He is no longer risking his savings on human fallibility.

Operations of the deposit insurance system are clearly shown in the reports of the 66 banks which have closed since Jan. 1, 1934. Depositors promptly received their deposits up to $5,000 for each depositor.



And the current statement of the government's Deposit Insurance Corporation shows that the income received from its investments has been more than sufficient to pay off operating expenses and losses, leaving its insurance funds intact!

Deposit Insurance was an essential part of the Roosevelt Recovery Program. During the previous administration, 8,450 banks failed. When President Roosevelt took office the banking situation had become a national calamity. Prompt and courageous action by the President averted complete ruin.



One of the first acts of President Roosevelt, upon assuming office, was to declare a nation-wide bank holiday. He promised that banks would be reopened as rapidly as possible, and that when they reopened, the money of the depositors would be safe. As he expressed it, the "fear of fear" had to be banished.

The Farm Credit Administration went to the rescue of mortgaged farms. The Home Owners Loan Corporation went to the rescue of individuals and corporations in many fields. The Agricultural Adjustment Administration, the Commodity Credit Corporation and other agencies met the emergency, stopped the tidal wave of deflation and depression, and brought about the march toward recovery instead of chaos.

No part of this whole program was more important than the creation of a sound banking system, in which the depositor could have complete confidence.

BANK SUSPENSIONS, 1921-1931. There are 8923 dots on the map and each dot stands for a bank failure.

BANK SUSPENSIONS, 1934-1936. There are only 66 dots on this map. Insured deposits in these banks were paid at once.

Bank depositors throughout the country are sincerely interested in the re-election of President Roosevelt because they want the present system continued. The attitude of his opponents is not entirely clear, but some doubt is shed upon their willingness to support the system of deposit insurance by the statement which Governor Landon made to the American Bankers Association in 1933, when he said:

"In my judgment the guarantee of bank deposits, if carried out in this country to its logical conclusion, will completely destroy the entire banking system."

President Roosevelt believes that the days of unregulated, free-booting banking have gone forever.

A national association of bank depositors has declared that President Roosevelt's staunch and courageous advocacy of deposit insurance is one of the outstanding contributions of the century to the well-being of the American people.

THE FARM AND HOME

(Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station).

Moths are numerous in the house during the fall months, and may fly about and lay eggs most of the winter. Woolen coats and blankets therefore, should be brushed, beaten and sunned frequently to dislodge eggs that may have been laid in them.

In substituting honey for sugar in recipes it is necessary to reduce the amount of liquid used. If medium-thick honey is used in cakes or quick-bread, reduce the liquid a fourth. If honey is substituted for all the sugar, reduce the liquid one half.

Sulfate of ammonia or nitrate of soda is used on lawns in the fall at the rate of a pound per square rod. It is best to make the application just before rain, as its use in dry weather may burn the grass. Mixing with sand or dry soil makes for even distribution.

If no other form of animal protein is fed, laying hens should consume skimmilk or butter milk at the rate of a gallon daily per 25 of the general purpose breeds or 30 Leghorns. Omit water when feeding this amount of milk.

Black locust is one of the astest growing hardwood trees. Under favorable conditions, it yields durable fence posts in 10 or 12 years. Seedlings may be planted in the fall, although spring is considered the best time to plant locust.

The value of mulching is generally not appreciated. It prevents leaching, preserves moisture, suppresses the growth of grass and weeds, and supplies nitrogen and other nutrients. It is especially beneficial to flower gardens and vegetable gardens. A heavy winter mulch helps to make a mellow, rich soil in the spring.

In Garrard county 20 demonstrations showed that crops grew twice as well on land treated with lime and phosphate as on untreated fields.

Lesson for October 25

CHRISTIANITY AS LOVE

LESSON TEXT—Acts 18:1-4; I Corinthians 13.

GOLDEN TEXT—And now abideth faith, hope, charity (love), these three; but the greatest of these is charity (love). I Cor. 13:13.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Why Paul Was Not Afraid.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Courage in the Night.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What Christian Love Is and Does.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Love, the Law of Life.

By way of Athens the apostle Paul and his co-workers came to Corinth, one of the great commercial and social centers of Greece. It was a city known for its magnificent architecture and its patronage of the fine arts, but even more widely known for its abandonment to vice and wickedness. Here Paul, the apostle of faith, demonstrated that his faith was rooted in love, and it was to the Christians who were dwelling in this infamous spot of corruption that he addressed his supremely pure and beautiful discourse on love.

The first portion of our lesson finds Paul at Corinth, and provides an introduction to the study of the love chapter from I Corinthians by showing from his experience that

I. Love Is a Fact, Not a Theory (Acts 18:1-4).

The man whom we now recognize as perhaps the greatest preacher and teacher of Christian truth who ever followed the Lord Jesus Christ "came to Corinth." That great and busy city in all probability knew nothing of his arrival and cared nothing for his message. No one met the distinguished messenger of God and received him into a home of comfort and honor.

But God had not forgotten him. For we read that Paul "found a certain Jew"—a convert to Christ, and his noble wife, and "abode with them." Persecution had sent Aquila to Corinth, and he was there for Paul to find.

And the humility of loving service expresses itself further in the fact that the one who was to bring Corinth the glorious message of the gospel did so at his own cost. He labored with his hands at the trade which he, as every Jewish boy, had been taught by his father. Christianity does not ask, "What will ye give me?" but "How much can I give?"

In his first letter to the church which grew up at Corinth we find the enexhaustibly rich chapter in which Paul so fittingly describes true Christian love. It is impossible in any short discussion of this passage to make a complete study of it, but we note

II. Four Truths About Love (I Cor. 13:1-13).

1. Love is superior to the other graces (vv. 1-3).

Life has many excellent gifts and men seek after them. How do they compare with love? Glowing eloquence, the far-seeing eye of the prophet, mountain-moving faith, self-sacrifice—without love they all lose their worth; in fact they are nothing. All the attainments of men apart from Christ are vain and empty.

2. Love is necessary to the other graces (vv. 4-7).

There is a sense in which love is not so much a grace in itself as the underlying and motivating power, which shows in every fine and noble expression of Christian character. Study these verses to see how patiently and unselfishly love works.

3. Love is permanent; other graces fail (vv. 8-12).

Some gifts will cease, for there will no longer be any need for them. They are temporary in their value or simply a means to an end. But love—it began with God in eternity and will go on with him through eternity. Why then do we labor and seek after these other graces so diligently and neglect the one grace which is above them all, for

4. Love is supreme (v. 13).

Even over those other graces which with love will abide, namely, faith and hope, love stands supreme. It is the fundamental of all fundamentals. Without it all else is empty and futile. And let us remember, this is not pious theory; it is fact and to be translated into daily life.

Common Sense

Common sense in one view is the most uncommon sense. While it is extremely rare in possession, the recognition of it is universal. All men feel it, though few men have it.—H. N. Hudson.

LANDON SHOWS UNFAMILARITY WITH LEGISLATION

Congressman Fred M. Vinson, Ashland, author of the Veteran's adjusted compensation act, known as the Bonus Bill, in answer to the attack made on the payment by Gov. Alf M. Landon, Republican nominee has again shown unfamilarity with legislation of the Roosevelt administration.

"In every major speech this lack of knowledge on the part of Governor Landon and his advisers, or ghost writers, is very apparent," Congressman Vinson said. "I refer to his speech referring to he reciprocal trade agreement; his address dealing with social security and his more recent attack on the cash payment bonus bill passed in the last session of congress.

Governor Landon charged that the billion and a half dollars paid in bonus is a future obligation because it was largely paid in bonds and at some date the government will be required to pay those bonds.

"Fundamentally the bonus was never a future obligation," Congressman Vinson said, "it was adjusted pay for services rendered. Eighteen years passed before this adjusted pay was received by those who rendered the service.

"Governor Landon and his ghost writers evidently do not understand the mechanics of the original bonus act. Twenty annual payments were to have been made into a sinking fund to retire the certificates on January 1, 1945. Several hundreds of millions of dollars were available in the sinking fund at the time of the cash payment. Many more millions should have been there, but the Coolidge and Hoover administrations from the beginning failed to pay the proper sums annually into the sinking fund.

"Not only was there a deficit in principal but the interest earning upon that deficit was not there. In no wise could such failure to keep up that sinking fund be attributed to the veterans."

Congressman Vinson charged that Governor Landon's treatment of the bonus obligation is that which was expressed by both the Coolidge and Hoover administrations, adding that the bonus obligation has never been carried in the fiscal setup as an indebtedness of the government even though there was a statutory obligation to pay it.

"A candidate for office should be accurate in his public statements," Congressman Vinson said. "Particularly is this true of a Presidential candidate. The public assumes that a candidate for this high office possesses thorough knowledge on the subjects discussed. Inaccuracies can only confuse the public mind."

ON PREMISES, U. S. HIGHWAY 42—JUST A FEW MINUTES FROM CINCINNATI, NEAR UNION — ABOUT 5 MILES SOUTHWEST OF FLORENCE, KENTUCKY. ELECTRICITY; SCHOOL BUS TO DOOR

Mrs. Ida Smith Farm

Having contracted with the owner, we will on above date sell this very desirable farm at absolute auction—bid last and you'll buy. Another Guy Downs Auction—no strings; rain or shine, we sell.

Productive soil (new land) ideal for tobacco, gently rolling, in excellent community—one of best sections of Boone County surrounded by beautiful homes and well kept farms.

TRACT NO. 1—Contains 73.48 acres, long frontage on U. S. 42. Has newly painted two story frame home, well arranged—spacious rooms. Beautiful shaded lawn. Cistern, well, laundry room, chicken house, smoke house, grape arbor. The type of home, if you please, that offers a great opportunity; for here the possibilities are many. With little expense it can be made modern and most attractive.

Practically all of this tract is new land, ready for cultivation. Several acres of woodland, creek bordering on almost one entire side of farm—lots of grass. Two barns, cistern at door. An excellent location—an ideal small farm well improved.

TRACT No. 2—Contains 64.88 acres, gently rolling. Lots of grass, locusts—land that will produce. Long frontage on U. S. 42, beautiful building site—electricity. Nice barn, milk room, shade.

TRACT No. 3—Contains 88.42 acres. Nice building site on Highway 42, electricity. Good land, a large part of which is virgin soil. Several acres of large trees, timber suitable to cut. A wonderful location for gas station, or Tourist Camp—an unusual woods, will accommodate a number of cabins.

Farm lands are in demand. Productive soil, located on one of the most traveled highways in Ky—U. S. 42—the main thoroughfare from Cincinnati to Louisville—can seldom be bought at any price. Think what a great opportunity this auction offers you. You can buy at the highest dollar, regardless of price, a small farm—just a few minutes from Cincinnati, in a most desirable environment. Make your arrangements now, attend this auction, take advantage of this opportunity. Back your judgment—invest in farm land, real estate, the security behind the Nation. Money is cheap—farm commodities are higher. Be thrifty, live on a farm where you can produce your living. Invest your savings, safely—now.

Everybody invited. Remember—we sell, regardless of price and weather.

The Tell Tale Squint

—a sign of Poor Home Lighting

If your child squints while reading or studying at home, don't overlook it. For squinting is often a tell tale sign of poor lighting.

Guard your child's sight—and your own—with better light. In rooms where members of your family read, study or sew be sure there is plenty of light—well shaded and free from glare. The whole room should be lighted, too, not just parts of it.

Poor home lighting can be corrected easily and inexpensively. Defective eyesight, on the other hand, is difficult to correct and sometimes costly. Play safe. Protect your family from eyestrain by providing them with better light.

Free Home Lighting Check-up

You can easily determine whether or not your lighting conforms with modern standards of safe seeing by having it checked with a Light Meter. We'll gladly render this service for you without cost or obligation. Phone or write for an appointment today.
